SECOND WEEK and CONTINUED SUCCESS of
BLAND HOLT'S
Great Drury Lane Sporting Drama,
A RUN OF LUCK,
interpreted by Bland Holt's
SPECIALLY ORGANISED COMPANY.
Read what the Weekly Papers say:—
The Mail says:—"There is every probability that the warm reception accorded by a crowded house on Saturday will be continued during the run of the piece."
The Town and Country says:—"What is decidedly novel in the piece is the extent to which realism has been carried—it is so exceptionally strong in these features, that "A Run of Luck" is sure to run."
The Tribune says:—"By dint of picturesque staging and abundant accessories, it has proved very welcome at the Royal, and "A Run of Luck" seems likely to justify its title."
The Referee says:—"The piece is a good one, strongly written, well constructed, full of human interest, of strong situations, and striking incidents. It is splendidly mounted, the scene-painting and the mechanical effects being alike far beyond anything we have had here, and it is, on the whole, wonderfully well acted."

CARON'S SUNDAY EVENING
SACRED and CLASSICAL CONCERTS.
The DAILY TELEGRAPH, speaking of last Sunday's concert, says:—"Every number on the programme was heard through out with apparent pleasure and in perfect silence, and was awarded at its close with the customary applause. The music was chiefly of a high-class character."
The EVENING NEWS:—"There was a grand and most respectable gathering of the public at the Opera House concert last evening, the people evidently rolling up to show their approval of a properly-conducted musical festival on a Sunday evening. . . . The concert was a rich musical treat; and, kept up to last night's standard, the Opera House will doubtless find grand patronage in future for its Sunday concerts."

The fact that nearly one-half of the population of the colony hold Protectionist views—as was proved by analysis of the votes recorded at the last general election—sufficiently demonstrates that a newspaper which shall advocate those principles should find abundant support. It will be requisite, however, not merely that such a journal should express the sentiments of adherents to a particular fiscal system, but that it shall furnish the news of the day in a complete and attractive form, and, in those respects, suffer no disadvantage from comparison with existing newspapers. At the present time the sentiments of Protectionists have no channel for expression in the metropolitan daily press. On the contrary, the views of that numerous and increasing section of the community are subjected to constant and unremitting misrepresentation and distortion by every one of the metropolitan journals. This unanimity of misrepresentation has an indirect but powerful influence upon the country press, and, altogether, is most prejudicial to the cause of encouragement to local industries, and the growth of an Australian national sentiment.
Under these circumstances, the Promoters have determined to take the initiatory steps to create a vigorous daily newspaper, which shall start upon a financial basis amply sufficient to permit, from the outset, of the production of a journal first-rate in every department. The best available talent will be secured, so that the readers of the "Australian" shall have reason to be content with their paper, whether regarded as an exponent and defender of their principles, or as a purveyor of current news and general information.
It is intended to make arrangements, in due course, for a special cable service from Europe, distinct from that at present provided by the metropolitan press. By this means the readers of the "Australian" will be supplied with a corrective to the partial versions of occurrences too often presented to the public by the existing agencies.
The capital of the Company will, in the opinion of experts whom the provisional directors have consulted, be ample for every contingency, and has been decided upon in full view of the absolute necessity of issuing a thoroughly satisfactory journal, strong and reliable in every department.
The provisional directors have calculated that, with fair encouragement from the reading public, of whom so large a proportion is in sympathy with the main objects of the "Australian," not more than half the nominal capital may be actually required to establish the paper upon a self-supporting basis.
They are determined, however, to leave nothing to chance which prevision can secure, and will not commence operations until at least 30,000 shares shall have been subscribed.
They desire to draw the attention of intending shareholders to the financial success that has attended existing metropolitan papers, and to point out that no paper yet published in Australia has had a better field offered it than the "Australian."
Applications for shares to be addressed to W. W. Billyard, Esq., Solicitor, 34, Castlereagh-street, or to the Provisional Directors, at the office of the Protection Union, 121, Bathurst-street, which office will be open daily from 9 to 5, and 7 to 9 in the evening, for receipt of same, where, also, printed forms can be obtained. Intending shareholders please note that no remittance is required on application.
JOHN S. SKEET,
Secretary.

EARLY IN JULY WILL BE PUBLISHED,
by Messrs. GIBBS, SHALLARD, and CO., Sydney,
the FIRST NUMBER of a
NEW WEEKLY JOURNAL, entitled
AUSTRALIAN PUBLIC OPINION.

PRICE, 3d.

AUSTRALIAN PUBLIC OPINION will be to the public of the colonies what Public Opinion of London is to English readers. The conditions of Australian life are such as to render it impossible for the general reader to peruse more than one daily paper. Doing this only, he is liable to receive a partisan's impression of current events.
In Australian Public Opinion he will find both sides of every controversy fairly stated, the organs of the various parties and factions carefully read for him, and the salient points of difference digested and presented for his judgment in a condensed form. While the paper will be essentially Australian in purpose, English and foreign publications will be exhaustively searched for information of special interest to its readers.
Australian Public Opinion will thus be, to all intents and purposes, written by all the distinguished journalists of the day—specialists whose experience and acquired facilities enable them to keep more directly in touch with the world's sentiment than it is possible for the staff of any one journal to do.
In Australian Public Opinion the lighter interests of life will not be neglected. Social, literary, humourous, dramatic, and art periodicals will be included in the material drawn upon, so that the paper will be a valuable addition to the literature of the fireside or verandah.
One of the marked tendencies of the age is towards subdivision of labour. In Australian Public Opinion the labour of selection will be performed for the reader, and the best only taken from the great stores of contemporary periodical literature.

NEWS BY THE MAIL.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, June 3.

The event of the week in English politics has been the holding of the conference at Birmingham, on Wednesday, of Mr. Chamberlain's National Radical Union, an organisation which has been formed to promote the spread of unionist principles, and afford a centre from which Radical Unionist politicians may work. At this gathering the doctrine has at last been laid down, which has long been seen to be inevitable, that there can be no further overtures for reconciliation between the Gladstonian and the Unionist Liberals, and that the separation between the two sections of the Liberal party is complete and irretrievable. Mr. Chamberlain has announced that he will hold no more communications with his former Gladstonian allies, who he declares have sunk from the position of English Liberals into that of Irish Parnellites, and that henceforth he and his colleagues are prepared to do battle with them in every constituency in the United Kingdom. He is determined to accord his full support to the Conservative Government, which, he indicates, has now become the repository of Liberal principles, and if the Liberal Unionists are reproached with their association with Tories he has the answer ready that their new allies are at least English gentlemen, and not the subsidised agents of a foreign conspiracy. Mr. Chamberlain avows that the Liberal Unionists can no longer maintain the expectant, neutral attitude they have hitherto observed. The Round Table Conference has failed, and there will be no further efforts made in that direction. It is time Mr. Chamberlain says to take a new departure, and he does not disguise the fact that this departure may be attended with grave consequences to the Liberal party. Mr. Chamberlain betrays a consciousness that the Liberal party, as we have hitherto known it, is doomed to extinction, for in his speech to the conference he talked about old party names losing their meaning, and a new party, greater than either Liberal or Conservative—the party of the Union—being formed. There is no doubt that Mr. Chamberlain is right in this respect. The distinction between Liberal and Conservative has practically ceased to exist, for, as Mr. Chamberlain says, the present Conservative Government has introduced a programme of legislation which a year or two ago the Liberal party would have hailed with delight, but which a section of that party is now striving to prevent the Ministry carrying into law. The great line of cleavage between English political parties in the future will be the maintenance of the union, and though it is possible that the old party words of Liberal and Conservative may survive the shock of their change of meaning and still remain in use, the two parties in English politics will henceforth be the party of union and the party of separation. There is only one thing which could arrest the rapid process of disintegration in the Liberal ranks, namely, the immediate disappearance of Mr. Gladstone from the political arena. Should that take place the present alliance of the Gladstonian Liberals with the Parnellites would not survive a day, and, regardless of the claims of either Mr. John Morley or Sir William Harcourt, the entire Liberal party would come rushing helter-skelter to range itself beneath Mr. Chamberlain's leadership. But so long as Mr. Gladstone remains in the field of politics, so long, we are assured, will Ireland block the way of progressive legislation; and therefore the Liberal party will become less and less associated with what we have hitherto been accustomed to regard as Liberal measures.

Mr. John Bright was prevented from attending the Birmingham Conference; but he wrote a letter which was almost as good as a speech. He reproached Mr. Gladstone with having failed to bow to the constitutionally expressed will of the majority of the nation as uttered at the time of the last general election, and with having expected all his old colleagues, some of them Liberals of longer standing than himself, to change their coats as suddenly as he had changed his own. He asked where was the difference between the Parnellites of 1881 and 1882, whom Mr. Gladstone put in prison, and the Parnellites of the present hour, with whom that gentleman was on terms of the most cordial alliance. He declared that this alliance was becoming less and less agreeable to many of Mr. Gladstone's Liberal followers, who regarded their Parnellite allies with loathing, and followed them with shame, and he asked how long they would continue in the bonds of a union so disagreeable to the feelings of most of them.

Mr. John Bright also expressed his strong disapproval of the action of many Nonconformist ministers in following Mr. Gladstone's wake as regards his Irish policy. But it is by no means clear that there is a majority of Nonconformist feeling in Mr. Gladstone's favour. An effort has just been made to poll the Wesleyan body on the subject of the Crimes Bill. A circular was sent round to every layman who during the past nine years had been a representative at the annual Wesleyan conferences. The exact number of circulars sent out has not been allowed to transpire, so that it is not known how many persons may have refused to answer the questions. But replies from a thousand Wesleyans were received, and of these 69 per cent. only expressed unqualified condemnation of the Crimes Bill. As the Times points out, the minority is a large and significant one, and it becomes all the more pregnant with meaning, inasmuch as the census was conducted in such a fashion as to lead to the belief that the circular was only sent to persons whose political opinions there was reason to believe were favourable to Mr. Gladstone.

During the week the Co-operative Congress has been held at Carlisle, under the presidency of Mr. G. J. Holyoake, the well-known Secularist. Mr. Holyoake had a most glowing account to give of the progress made by co-operation during the fifty years of the Queen's reign. By co-operation, he declared, the working classes, who were represented at that congress had attained a pitch of prosperity which they could never have hoped to have reached by other means. The co-operators, he said, now "own land; they own streets of dwellings, and almost townships; they own vast and stately warehouses in Manchester, in London, in Newcastle-on-Tyne, and in Glasgow; they own a bank whose transactions amount to more than £16,000,000 a year; they possess more than 1400 stores, which do a business of over £30,000,000 a year; they own share capital of £9,500,000 in amount; and they are making now for their 900,000 members more than £3,000,000 of profit annually. The mighty power of co-operation has enabled the working classes in the last 25 years to do a business of £361,000,000, giving them a profit of nearly £29,000,000." This is a good record for the history of the co-operative movement; but the co-operators cannot disguise from themselves that their fortune is beset with difficulty in one respect. So long as they confine themselves to the task of distribution there seems to be no limit to the success which may attend their efforts, but hitherto their attempts to apply the principle of co-operation to manufacture have been attended with nothing but failure.

I understand that although Baron Nordenskiold, the great Arctic explorer, is not disposed to undertake an expedition to the Antarctic seas at present, he would be willing to do so, if proper means could be found, as soon as he has got off his hands all the publications connected with the Vega expedition. Baron Nordenskiold does not underrate, as some scientists in England are disposed to do, the importance of a thorough exploration of the Antarctic regions with a view to collecting information upon their fauna and flora; but he ridicules the idea of making anything like a serious attempt to reach the South Pole, considering that that aim must be relegated to the time when aërial navigation becomes possible. But a systematic exploration, as far as feasible, of the south polar continent and seas he considers would be of great benefit to the antarctic fisheries question. The cost of such an expedition, consisting of a small steamer and coaling tender suitably equipped and manned, and provided with a proper staff of scientists, Baron Nordenskiold sets down at about £25,000. I believe the Victorian Government have laboured under the delusion that an expedition of this nature could be set afoot for about a fifth part of that sum. Baron Nordenskiold expects to be occupied with the final details of the Vega expedition for at least another two years.

The Hon. Henry Moses, M.L.C., and the Hon. J. H. Neale, M.L.C., have arrived in London for the Jubilee.

The Agents-General have decided to have a joint illumination over the office of the Queensland agency on Jubilee Day, instead of each office illuminating on its own account. The Queensland agency has been selected because it happens to be situated more favourably than any of the other offices for a display over its building, being seen by the greatest number of people. About £500 will be spent on the work, and it is to be entrusted into the hands of Mr. Pain, the well-known Crystal Palace pyrotechnist. The idea is that there shall be the word "Australasia" at the top, underneath it the words "Union of the Empire" surrounded by a star of fire, out of which will radiate the names of the various Australasian colonies. At the bottom will be the words "God save the Queen."

The official publication of the scheme for the governing body of the Imperial Institute confirms the outline which was given of the same in a previous letter. The proposals put forward by the organising committee have not been criticised with much favour by the public press here, and it is thought that, considering how long this body has been in labour, it might have brought forth something better. I understand that Sir Saul Samuel is maturing a scheme for the amalgamation of the Royal Colonial Institute with the Imperial Institute, which he means to submit to the organising committee. But the terms upon which your Agent-General proposes that the amalgamation shall take place are so favourable to the Colonial Institute that the organising committee are hardly likely to adopt his recommendations. Sir Saul Samuel is likewise anxious that the Agents-General should be nominated ex-officio members of the governing body of the Imperial Institute; but the other members of the committee, including most of the Agents-General, are indisposed to recommend this step. Nevertheless, inasmuch as great weight is always attached to any suggestion coming from so old and experienced an official as Sir Saul Samuel, it is believed that a compromise will be effected by leaving the position to be given to the Agents-General to the discretion of the Colonial Governments, with a strong recommendation that they should be nominated for the Council.

Sir James Lorimer, the Victorian Minister of Defence, is pressing the Imperial Government to pass an Act through Parliament during the present session giving effect to the revised regulations which were promulgated last autumn, as to the conditions under which naval and military officers might take service under Colonial Governments. These regulations will require the sanction of the Imperial Legislature before they can be put in force.

The suggestion which was thrown out in the course of the Colonial Conference that the Imperial Government should allow a military officer of high standing to make an inspection every two or three years of the military forces of Australasia has been well received at the War Office. "Our Only General" has expressed himself strongly in its favour, and there is believed to be considerable likelihood of its being carried out.

The death took place last week at Walmer, in Kent, of Admiral Henry Harvey, one of the survivors of the Battle of Navarino. In 1834 he served as lieutenant on board the Victor in New South Wales, and was invalided in Sydney three years after.

At the distribution of prizes and certificates to the medical students of University College, London, on Wednesday, Mr. G. E. Rennie, of Sydney, was awarded the gold medal in the surgery class, the Tuke gold medal for pathological anatomy, and the Bruce gold medal, besides numerous other prizes, including the Aitchison Scholarship of £60 per annum, tenable for two years.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland has this week unanimously re-admitted to the status of a minister of the Presbytery of Glasgow (in which he was ordained) the Rev. George Dodds, who, it will be remembered, was lately the object of some vexatious proceedings on the part of the Presbytery of Melbourne, which resulted in his suspension.

OUR ST. PETERSBURG LETTER.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 17.

The trial of the three anarchists who attempted to kill the Emperor of Russia on the 1st of March has just ended. Besides the three principal actors in this drama, twelve other persons (unfortunately, mostly students), more or less deeply implicated in the plot, were convicted. Among them were three women, the feminine element rarely being absent on such occasions. The women, however, do not appear to have played any prominent part in the proceedings, and were only guilty of having held back what they knew or suspected. The impenetrable mystery with which this trial has been surrounded renders it impossible to give any detailed account of it. Not only the public were not admitted into court, but even the senators, who usually enjoy the privilege of penetrating into the sanctum sanctorum of Russian justice were excluded. The cause of this profound secrecy is no doubt to be found in the fear that these men should gain the sympathy of the people, and this danger is not wholly imaginary, for it is evident that, notwithstanding their youth and inexperience, the attitude of these revolutionists was as full of dignity as the conduct of the heroes of the 1st March, 1881, was preposterous and insolent. When asked what they had to say for themselves, they spoke out freely, openly protesting against an order of things that is leading the country to ruin, bringing forward one after the other innumerable causes of dissatisfaction, the justice of some things they said even placing the judges in a rather awkward position, and forcing them to descend to argument. The accused declared that they did not really mean to throw their shells, only to call the attention of the nation to their protest, and revive the memory of those who had gone before, even at the price of their own lives, for they knew they had merited death. They asked no mercy, preferring the halter to prison or exile. They persistently repeated that they were not instruments in the hands of the anarchists and communists, whose siege is now in Paris, that they acted quite independently of their own free will, and that this particular plot did not extend over a greater number of persons than those arrested. The money necessary for their enterprise was provided by Pilsoutsky, a native of Poland, and the son of a rich land-owner in that country. Louka-hevitch, also a Pole, prepared the projectiles. Novorouski, a Russian seminarist, declared in the drawling tones peculiar to seminarists that he had been drawn into this affair by the others; but this mock humility did not impose upon the judges. The prosecutor Neecloudoff, a man of remarkable talent and tact, addressed the accused in a few words, the justice and moderation of which seemed to make some impression upon the obdurate criminals.

Seven of the accused were condemned to death by hanging, the rest to endless confinement or exile. When the sentence was read to them, and it was announced that two days would be allowed to such as wished to have recourse to the clemency of their monarch, five of them, Gentraloff, Zulianoff, Sherbeshoff, Ossipanoff, and Andrionshkin, refused to ask for mercy, and were executed in the Peter Paul Fortress on May 8. This execution was carried out with the greatest secrecy, as was the whole affair. The men were hanged in a small interior court, surrounded with the smallest possible number of witnesses. They were firm to the end. Not a word upon the trial and its issue appeared in the papers until May 9. The fact of the execution of the five Nihilists and the commutation of the death sentences of the six others to exile in Siberia for 20 years, was published in a few short words, and that is all the public know or ever will know about this important trial. The rumour that all had been pardoned had become so strong that the news of the execution having actually taken place produced a tremendous effect.

The Emperor, with the Empress and heir, have undertaken the journey they intended to make last year to Novotcherkask, to present to the Cossacks their young Atoman or chief, the Grand Duke Nicholas, heir to the throne of "All the Russias." The enthusiasm with which their Majesties were greeted surpassed the usual limits of such manifestations, the Cossacks being anxious to prove that they had taken no part in the late conspiracy, and they sent an address to the Emperor expressing their "horror and anguish" that one of their members should have dipped into such a plot. Indeed, this fact was as disagreeable to the Emperor as it was unexpected, for the Cossacks have been ever amongst the most faithful supporters of the Crown. It has, however, been discovered that a new danger awaited the Emperor in Novotcherkask, and the police are on the track of the new conspiracy. More than 30 persons were arrested in that town prior to the arrival of their Majesties, who, instead of going to the Crimea, are hurrying back to St. Petersburg.

At first it was supposed that the Government would be merciful towards the University, but the most serious causes of anxiety are arising in the midst of the Petersburg "intelligence," for the Emperor seems resolved to visit the sins of these misguided members of Alma Mater upon the whole corporation. The town rings with the most contradictory news. It is said that the University is to be transported to a lonely village in the Government of Novgorod, that the number of students is to be reduced to a few hundreds, and that the sons of rich families alone are to have the privilege of a University education. En revanche, it is said that professional schools are to be opened. These are indispensable, but cannot replace the universities. It was supposed that after the unanimous manifestation of all the students against the Nihilists who dishonoured the University, the Government would have felt reassured; but it turns out now that, far from accepting this frank and sincere mark of sympathy on the part of the students, the Government has instituted a system of control over them which is highly offensive, and the rector, M. Andrievsky, whose brave speech on that terrible day saved the University from being closed, is to be dismissed, notwithstanding that he is the idol of the students, and one of the best and noblest of men. It is not true that anarchism has many supporters among the students, but it is in the interest of some people to make the Emperor think so.

So these would-be reformers of Russia, the so-called Nihilists, have again succeeded in plunging her into the direst difficulties. Again life becomes a burden to everyone. One half of the population is set on to watch over and spy upon the other half, innocent persons are subjected to denunciations, and one is never sure of what may happen the next hour. In short, St. Petersburg is enveloped in an atmosphere of treason and distrust.

The war which Count Bismarck has declared to the Russian rouble has become an energetic give and take on both sides, and if new holes are made every day in the unfortunate Russian pocket, Germany perhaps hardly counted the cost of or foresaw the damages she would herself have to sustain in the encounter. A few figures can give an approximate idea of the harm done to Germany by the Custom-house policy of her Iron Chancellor In 1880 Germany exported engines, machines, and all kinds of metallic objects to the value of 228 millions of marks. The following years this sum gradually dwindled down to 169 millions in 1884. The export trade of these articles was, for the third part at least, with Russia. In 1880 it had reached eighty millions, and fell in 1884 to fifty-five millions of marks. This diminution in the German export trade of metals, due to the increase of the Russian duty on German iron, and to the development of the iron trade in Russia, made Germany pass what is called a bad quarter of an hour. A stagnation occurred in the commerce of that country, many iron foundries were closed, and their workmen dismissed. The recent large augmentation of the duty on iron has been a new blow to German trade. The Germans answered by increasing the duty on Russian grain. And so the battle rages between the two.

I have often spoken of the incapacity of the Russian juries. A new series of laws has just been given forth concerning the formation of the juries, which no doubt will result in a far superior composition of them. The institution, however, has been much curtailed of its fair proportions, inasmuch as many trials formerly carried on in the usual way are to be eliminated and set apart for special judgment. Such have always been all political trials, but now it appears many others are to enter this category. The new laws require that a member of a jury should "know how to read," that not more than one Israelite should enter into the composition of a jury, &c.

A series of novels have lately been published in Petersburg, written in the French language by a Mlle. Krijanovsky, a young lady of 19 years, and addicted to spiritualism. These novels, in themselves, and as novels, present nothing extraordinary, being just such productions as might be expected from so young an authoress. But they purport to be inspired, and to be written while the authoress was in a state of complete insensibility, something like the works of the American, Jackson Davis (only incomparably inferior), and the real authors of these books are no less important personages than the Pharoah Ramses the Great, or Sesostris, and an English poet of the name of Rochester! The first of these books, "L'Abbaye des Benedictins," went through three editions in a few months. The second, "Une Episode de la Vie de Tibere," has also proved a great success, though both these books are beneath all criticism as literary productions. At the present moment, however, the deceased Ramses is busy dictating to the medium a novel, which is to describe the life of Moses and the crossing of the Red Sea. From what I have heard, it appears this book is to make a great sensation, as it is said to completely controvert the Bible version of all these events, and represents Moses himself in a most unflattering light. This impudent speculator upon popular credulity presents nothing remarkable. She has a face about the size of a small saucer, a snub nose, little black eyes like beads, and a matted mass of hair like a broom, that covers even her eyebrows.

Spring has at last visited the Northern Venice. The trees are growing green, and the population rushing out ins grüne to enjoy six weeks' of discomfort and misery in the environs. Never was such a fiction as the summer of Petersburg, and nothing is more disagreeable and unnatural than these nights as light as day, when the sun has hardly gone down when it rises again. The canals which traverse the city in all directions are now navigated by convenient little steamboats, which greatly facilitate the communication, besides making the town look still more like Venice, the boats being hardly larger than good-sized gondolas.

The public having grown tired of the operette, the theatres in the islands now give pantomimes, feeries, and ballets. Dancing has come into fashion again, and such artists as Zucchi, Emma Bessonnet, and Des Eras are brought over from Italy. Several excellent orchestras play every evening in the environs of Petersburg, and the music is as good as that heard at the concerts in the winter. The tax upon foreign passports has kept a good many people at home, though it is only half the sum which was at first proposed. Instead of taking a trip abroad, people will now travel at home, the banks of the Rhine will be replaced by the banks of the Volga, and Carlsbade and Marienbad by Petigorsk and Essentouki. The Queen of Servia is now on her way to the Crimea, and no end of fuss is made about this lady's visit, which, considering the relations of her consort towards Russia, might be considered as rather ill-timed. It is a sort of platonic flirtation of Servia and Greece with Russia, but it is very doubtful if anything will come of it. These provinces have compromised themselves too far, and it will be difficult to effect a reconciliation. As to Bulgaria, it is expected every day that Prince Battenberg will be re-elected, and Russia will not move a finger if he be.

In all the Central and Southern Governments of European Russia the weather is so favourable that hopes are entertained of an extraordinary harvest of wheat and rye. Great quantities of last year's wheat are being exported from Odessa.

THE CENTENNIAL PARK AND OUR OLD WATER SUPPLY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It was not till I contemplated the report of Mr. Kelly's speech, in your issue of this morning, that I fully realised there was a danger, almost a certainty, of our late water supply from the Lachlan Swamp being permanently diverted from such a form of usefulness in the future. And it may be that many others have not given a thought to the risk we run in abandoning our old water resources. Is there not a possibility, almost a probability, of our new scheme of supply breaking down in some droughty season of the future? We may be told that the great reservoir at Prospect holds so many million gallons, enough perhaps to last through years of drought, but is it not a fact that about 70 per cent. of that great store will always be dead water to the people of this city?

I am informed by a gentleman who has given considerable study to the question of water supply, and knows the plans and the ground, that 25 feet below the top of the dam the water will cease to gravitate to Crown-street or Petersham. If the levels show this there must be a danger of even that great supply failing to give any but the lower levels that upon which our health and comfort so much depends.

Ought not the Government, in carrying out their centenary scheme—State House or not—be careful to conserve those grand sheets of water which Mr. Kelly says it would be a sin to destroy, and preserve them also from impurities by drainage from any quarter? Need we throw away also the usefulness of Busby's Bore? The drainage from the buildings on the land to be sold would probably need to be carried to the Bondi sewer, and a hole—a new bore, in fact—punched through to the nearest point of connection, and many other precautions taken to preserve the old sponge from being defiled.

There can be no denying that thus preserving our old water supply as a standby for future distress, will entail great expense on the Centenary scheme; but rather let our State House become un chateau en Espagne, than our old wetnurse be altogether abandoned. I am, &c.,

DR. BARRY ON AUSTRALIA.

THE PRIMATE'S SPEECH AT KING'S COLLEGE.

(FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.)

On Whit Monday afternoon the Bishop of Sydney delivered a lecture at 13, Kensington-square (ladies' department of King's College), upon "The New Englands of the South: Their Prospects and Duties." The object of the lecture was stated at the outset to be to enlist some of those with whom Dr. Barry had formerly been associated at King's College in the work of collecting subscriptions towards the fund opened by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in aid of the Australian Church of England mission to New Guinea. A large audience assembled, consisting principally of ladies.

The Bishop commenced by saying that, under the title of the New Englands of the South were to be included South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand, and a great deal of what was true of one would be true of the others: but he should confine himself to the one with which he had been connected for three years, namely, Australia, and his remarks about that part would relate principally to the portion most familiar to him—New South Wales. A great deal of ignorance, he said, still existed in England about Australia. Medical men, who ought to know better, were wont to talk of the "Australian climate." Australia was nearly two-thirds the size of Europe, and comprised almost as many varieties of climate, so that to talk about the Australian climate was as ridiculous as to talk of the European climate. Again, shortly after he arrived in Sydney he received a letter from a lady friend in England asking him to call and see some one living at Adelaide. The two cities were a thousand miles apart, and to ask a man in Sydney to call and see a friend in Adelaide was as reasonable as requesting any one in London to run over and take afternoon tea with someone residing in Naples. After mentioning the creation of the different colonies of Australia out of the parent stock of New South Wales, and touching upon a few of the more marked physical features and principal products of the continent, he said that the great want of Australia was population, the present white inhabitants numbering about three millions or one to every square mile. This want was being supplied partly by the natural multiplication of the inhabitants, and partly by immigration. The colonial Governments had hitherto been in the habit of assisting the surplus population of the mother-country to reach Australia, because that country was handicapped as a field for emigration in comparison with Canada and the United States, which were so much nearer to England. But Victoria had long ceased to do that, and New South Wales was discontinuing the practice. Therefore, if in the future England wanted to send away her surplus population, she would have to do so at her own cost, and he thought this was not unreasonable. Aid to some extent might, perhaps, be given by the Australian Governments: but they would not in the future bear the whole burden of what was as advantageous to England as to themselves. The kinds of people who ought to go out to Australia—he was speaking at least as far as New South Wales was concerned—were good manual labourers, good mechanics, good workmen, and those who could handle the pick and shovel. For these, if they would only go up-country and not hang about the great towns, as too many of them did, there was abundance of lucrative employment, for the land was crying out for cultivation. When people in England heard or read about the unemployed in New South Wales or Victoria, they might depend upon it that the labourers were unemployed simply because they would persist in hanging about the streets of Sydney and Melbourne, and would not go up-country where they were wanted. An ordinary labouring man could always command 7s. 6d. per day, which was about three times what he would earn in England. Skilled mechanics earned from 10s. to 14s. a day for eight hours' work. The labourers' doggerel rhyme was quite true as regarded New South Wales—"Eight hours to work, eight hours to play, eight hours to sleep, and eight shillings a day." For working men who were thrifty and sober there was ample employment in Australia. He emphasised the word "sober," because in Australia, as in England, drunkenness was the cause of almost all the poverty, and three-fourths of the crime. In addition to the kinds of labourers he had enumerated anyone skilled in a specialty, any trained professional man, was sure of a good living. But there was no room for people who could only do clerk's work. The genus clerk was almost as great a drug in the market in Sydney as in London. There was an idea prevalent in England, which Mr. Froude's celebrated fiction called "Oceana"—(laughter)—had done a good deal to strengthen, that if people were only shipped out to Australia they could find employment without any trouble. But if anyone wanted to send a young man of the clerk class to destruction, they could not do better than ship him off to Sydney with a few pounds in his pockets, and leave him to the tender mercies of the markets. Neither did Australia want the rubbish and ne'er-do-wells of England shot upon her shores. If a man was going to the bad, it was far better to let him go to the bad in England than to send him across the world to do it. It should be borne in mind that the working classes of Sydney were not favourable to the immigration of labourers, because they were anxious to maintain the present rates of wages. He believed there had lately been an individual in England, calling himself a New South Wales labour delegate, who told some queer stories—stories in more senses than one—about the glut in the labour market in Sydney, with the object of discouraging emigration to New South Wales. To some extent he sympathised with the desire of the Sydney working men to keep out competition and maintain the present level of wages. The rate of wages in Australia was not excessive; it was an advantage that the labourers should enjoy a little more of the fruits of their toil than they did in England, and it was no small thing for Australia to be free from that terrible mass of pauperism, which startled a man all the more when he revisited London after an absence of three or four years. Besides the 3,000,000 of white population there was a considerable number of the aboriginal inhabitants in Australia. In New South Wales and Victoria the aborigines were extinct; and the story of their extinction was an exceedingly dark chapter in colonial history. The native inhabitants of Australia were not of as high a type as the Maories of New Zealand; but the Bishop of Perth, who was a son of the Bishop of Barbadoes, had assured him that they were quite equal to the negroes, and those who had come into contact with them spoke highly of their docility, intelligence, capability, and devotion, and of their capacity for moral and spiritual improvement. After alluding to the Chinese, who, he said, did most of the market gardening in Sydney, and touching upon the labour traffic, which he was glad to see was being abolished, and which he hoped would be replaced by properly conducted coolie immigration from India, the Bishop went on to describe the nature of the Colonial Governments, and then said a few words as to the sentimental relations between the colonies and the mother country. Despite the democratic form of the institutions under which the Australians lived, they were thoroughly loyal to the English crown, and as far as he had observed, the sentiment of loyalty was stronger in New South Wales than it was in England. (Hear, hear.) Certain disloyal manifestations which had recently taken place in London would have been absolutely impossible in Sydney or Melbourne. The desire for connection with the old country was exceedingly strong. The colonials were very sensitive on the score of being snubbed or depreciated—and they had had to put up with a good deal of that kind of treatment in days gone by—and they did not like being looked upon as inferiors. But, at the same time, they prized very greatly anything that came from England. Very probably the colonies, if independent, might develop originality and enterprise a little more quickly, as was the case with the United States; but there was no desire for independence. On the contrary, the very notion of it would be scouted by all the most intelligent leaders in politics and in society. There was, in the colonies, no Church Establishment. All religious bodies were on a footing of equality. The most powerful sect was the Church of England. Then—at any rate in New South Wales—came the Roman Catholics, and after them the Presbyterians and Wesleyans, and other Christian denominations. The absence of an Established Church interfered seriously with the Christianity of the country, because there was no one body which had the right to represent the community in its religious aspect. In England, however much the right to do this was viewed with jealousy by Nonconformist bodies, there was no doubt that the Church of England possessed and exercised that right. For instance, when, at the opening of the People's Palace in the East End of London by the Queen, the Archbishop of Canterbury offered up prayer no one disputed that he officiated as the representative of the religious sense of the nation. But he well remembered Lord Augustus Loftus telling him that, at the opening of the great Exhibition at Sydney, it was impossible to ask the minister of any particular religion to take the foremost place on that occasion, and the result was that, with the exception of a few words of devotion introduced into his own speech, the Exhibition was opened without any religious ceremony whatever. Independently of the question of endowments, living in the colonies made one value more and more the principle of Church Establishment. Nevertheless, Christian influence of various kinds was exceedingly strong in colonial life, and the absence of any recognised leadership decreased rather than increased the spirit of sectarianism. Leaving out of consideration the Roman Catholics, who stood absolutely aloof from anything which they did not originate and govern themselves, it was a very easy matter to unite the various Christian bodies in a common undertaking, and the lead was most willingly conceded to the Church of England.

The Church of England in the colonies had some advantages and some disadvantages as compared with the Church at home. They had complete self-government, and could regulate their affairs as they chose: but they had laid down the rule that nothing should be done in their synodical actions which should interfere with the doctrines, disciplines, and formularies of the Church of England, unless such change had been sanctioned at home. In their assemblies the laity had a co-ordinate power with the clergy, and, after three years' experience of this system, he was prepared to say that it worked almost absolutely for good. The only thing he noticed about their lay delegates was that they were more conservative and more afraid than the clergy of innovating upon the practices of the Church. He attached great importance to the clergy and laity sitting together in their assemblies, and thought this practice should be adopted in England. He was quite sure that if in Australia they had a house of laymen sitting separately as was the case in England, collision would be exceedingly likely, and combined action almost impossible. The Australian Synods were governing bodies. They differed very much from Church congresses, diocesan conferences, and the like in England, for these were assemblies merely for the purpose of talking, although, of course, talking was an important element in Church administration; but the Australian Synods were ruling, governing bodies, and were conscious of their responsibility. The great fault of the Colonial Church was the voluntary system. Of course the voluntary system, if properly worked, if every Christian felt it a duty to make an offering towards the work of the Church without any personal consideration, and without making money the means of acquiring power, would be the system most in accord with the true spirit of the Church. But in actual practice it was found that the voluntary system, in the absence of a central endowment or a great central fund for the maintenance of the clergy, militated against the independence of the ministry. It tended to introduce, not the power of the laity as such, but the power of the purse. It tended to create a plutocracy in the Church, and above all things that was a great evil. The Church in Australia entertained the same feeling towards the Church at home as the colony did towards the mother country. There was a strong desire for solidarity with the Church of England. Periodically the question arose as to whether the name of the colonial church should be altered—for it was still called the Church of England—and all sorts of fancy names were proposed, but they were invariably rejected. The colonial churches federated more easily than did the colonies; and he had the honour to represent what might be called the ecclesiastical federation of Australia. The colonial churches wished to maintain their independence up to a certain point, but they desired perfect solidarity with the Church at home. He should be very glad to see the time when that absurd prejudice was done away with, that if a man pledged himself to colonial work as a clergyman, he was neglecting his vocation if he came back to England. An interchange between English and colonial clergy would be of great advantage to both. Personally he should be very pleased to welcome young English clergymen in his diocese to work for three or four years, provided they did not find their places filled up when they returned home. As to the material progress of the New Englands of the south he entertained not a doubt. Their resources and opportunities were such that they were bound to progress. Australia would not advance as rapidly within the next twenty-five years as she had done in the past, because in the past she had had the impulse of the great gold discoveries, under the influence of which her population has multiplied by ten within fifty years. The notion that within the next fifty years the population would amount to twenty millions was a greatly exaggerated one; but it was quite possible that in that time the present population of Australia might have been multiplied by three or four. The great drawback of Australia was want of water. In some places this could not be obtained at all; in others it was obtainable by means of storage, irrigation, or boring through the strata, and in such districts the getting of water was only a question of money or pains. The city of Sydney had undertaken an enormous work, which would have the effect of storing up water in a reservoir covering about nine square miles. (Hear, hear.) That was a work which would have to be done more generally, and when it was done, the prosperity of Australia would be largely increased. As regarded intellectual progress the colony was not in its infancy, but in its teens. They had no independent literature or art, but relied in these respects perhaps too much upon the old country. But there was an enormously strong desire for intellectual progress; and educational burdens, far more severe than those endured in England were borne with the utmost cheerfulness. In New South Wales it was distinctly laid down in the Public School's Act that the education of the country should be religious; and, were it not that the Roman Catholics and the secularists joined hands in striving to impede the development of religious instruction in their schools, the teaching given therein would not materially differ from that of the best London Board schools. At the other end of the scale there was an equally strong desire to extend and improve university and higher class education. Only a short time ago the University of Sydney received the bequest of £140,000. (Hear, hear.) In technical education, too, valuable work was being done. In respect to moral and spiritual progress the colonies had to fight against the same evils as prevailed in England. Drunkenness was rather worse in New South Wales than at home; but there was less of it amongst the purely working classes, and it prevailed rather in other strata of society. Then there was what might be called the evil of sensuality, which was more marked than in England. In some measure this was, perhaps, due to the habits of overfeeding of the people. There was also more of the spirit of recklessness and lawlessness, want of discipline, domestic and otherwise, than was the case at home. To such an extent did this prevail that a word, "larrikinism," had been coined to express it, and this word had lately found its way into the Pall Mall Gazette, as many strange words did. (Laughter.) In this spirit of insubordination lay the great evil in the future path of the English-speaking communities. One noted with something like terror how this spirit of recklessness was no longer kept in proper check, either by law, by good feeling, or by the instincts of what used to be called a gentleman. He was afraid the fact could not be denied that even the Houses of Legislature, both at home and in the colonies, were offering some striking examples of the truth of what he was saying.

In that feeling of lawlessness which was not crime, but the seed-plot of crime, lay one of the great moral dangers with which we had to struggle at home, and to a greater degree in the younger communities. It was one of the drawbacks which attended the spread of democracy. In the colonies they had to contend with a species of political corruption which existed to a much less degree in the old country. There was no bribery, there was very, very little treating, and there might be occasional intimidation. There was no bribery in Parliament; but there was a system called "log-rolling," which meant doing jobs for one another at the public expense. It amounted to bribing communities instead of individuals. From the point of view of morality the two things were about on a par; but, from the standpoint of economy, the old Walpoleian plan of bribing individuals was preferable. People in New South Wales were beginning to perceive this, and some very earnest efforts were being made to correct the evil. Such were the drawbacks with which they had to contend in their moral and spiritual progress. On the other side of the account the colonies had to their credit all the good elements of the English character which Englishmen possessed at home; and they had an entire absence of that burden of hopeless poverty which weighed so heavily upon the community in the mother country. There was no poverty in the colonies except what was brought upon a man by his own fault; and the absence of that hopeless pauperism which was productive of so much positive evil was one of the greatest advantages which the colonies possessed in their struggle for moral and spiritual welfare. At present there was no desire in the colonies for political separation from the old country. As the colonies increased in strength and power there lay before the English community two alternatives. One was disruption—the other federation. At present there were about eight million Britons out of the United Kingdom. In the space of 50 years that number would be doubled, perhaps trebled; and the time might come when there would be more Englishmen out of England than in it. When such time arrived, unless the present system of governing the Empire were changed, there must be disruption; but for the present such a contingency was out of the question. It would be impossible for Australia to stand alone apart from England; and when the other day a colonial delegate (Sir Robert Wisdom, at the St. Stephen's Club banquet) said that the colonies could do better without England than England could do without the colonies, he was simply indulging in a little foolish bluster. But disruption must come unless some system of federation could be devised, and the idea of federation ought to be kept before the eyes of statesmen both at home and in the colonies as the only safety for the future of the Empire. After describing the duties of the New Englands of the South, which were to become centres of responsibility and energy in respect of that wonderful mission which Providence had clearly entrusted to the English-speaking race, the Bishop went on to give particulars of the Church of England mission station which it was desired to establish in New Guinea, and concluded by appealing to his audience to aid him in the work of obtaining subscriptions in England for that purpose. A vote of thanks to the Bishop for his address, moved by Dr. Wace, the present principal of King's College, brought the proceedings to a close.

BANKRUPTCY AND LIBEL.

The Wellington Evening Post (N. Z.), of June 24, publishes an important judicial decision on the right of newspapers to comment on bankruptcy proceedings. The action was heard at Dunedin, on June 24, before Mr. Justice Williams. Mr. A. Peterson sued Pilling Brothers, proprietors of the Tuapeka Times, for libel, claiming £500 damages. The statement of claim set forth that the plaintiff, on the 9th April, had filed a petition of bankruptcy, and on the 10th defendants published in the Tuapeka Times an article headed "An honest bankrupt." This article has a running comment on the statements by Peterson at a meeting of his creditors, and which it was contended meant that plaintiff had filed from dishonest motives, and that he had dishonestly made preparations for filing, intending to defraud his creditors, and that the publication was false and malicious. Defendants contended that the article was published in the usual way by the defendants as public journalists as a fair and bona fide comment on a matter of public interest, for the benefit of the public, without any malicious motive.

His Honor, in giving in judgment for the defendants, said: The defendants published matter which undoubtedly reflects upon the character of the plaintiff, and is therefore libellous, unless the defendants succeed in establishing justification. Now the defendants have not pleaded that the imputations contained in this paragraph are true. The question of the truth or otherwise of these imputations cannot be raised upon the present inquiry. What the defendants pleaded is this: That there was a meeting of plaintiff's creditors, at which the plaintiff made certain statements, and the publication complained of is nothing more than fair comment upon such statements. That defence involves a question of law as well as of fact, and involves the question as to whether the occasion of publication is what is called privileged. One of the first questions is whether the statements made upon oath by the plaintiff before the official assignee were made on a privileged occasion. It seems to me that I would be going altogether too far to say that the publication of everything that takes place at a meeting of creditors stands on the same footing as the publication of proceedings in a court of justice. We know perfectly well that at such meetings creditors very often lose their tempers, and use language which is perhaps altogether uncalled for. I am not going to decide, and I do not think it is necessary for the purpose of this case to decide, that meetings of creditors stand on the same footing as proceedings in a court of justice. What, however, is commented upon here is not what took place generally at the meeting of creditors, but certain statements which were made upon oath before the assignee at such meeting. It now seems to me that the examination of a bankrupt before the official assignee is in effect a judicial inquiry. If we turn to the Act we find that by section 31 the official assignee is an officer of the court. By section 37, subsection 5, it is his duty to summon and preside at meetings of creditors. By section 38 it is the duty of the assignee to make a report to the court as to the conduct of the bankrupt. By section 63 the assignee may call a meeting of creditors, and by section 64 it is the duty of the bankrupt to attend such meeting and submit to examination. The examination may be upon oath, and if the bankrupt does not answer questions he is guilty of contempt of court, and, of course, as the examination is upon oath, if he gives untrue answers he is liable to be indicted for perjury. Then section 99 of the Act gives the assignee a further power to summon and examine the bankrupt upon oath, and by section 160, if the bankrupt refuses to be sworn, or will not answer, the Court may commit the bankrupt to prison. By section 101 we find that the Court, when the bankrupt applies for his discharge, has to examine the assignee as to the bankrupt's conduct and the state of his affairs, and by section 157 the Court may act upon the representations of the assignee, and refuse or suspend an order of discharge. Clearly, therefore, the assignee is an officer of the Court, and is conducting this examination as a part of the machinery of the Court, and for the information of the Court. That seems to constitute the examination a judicial proceeding. It is quite true that the assignee may have the right of preventing the public from being present at the examination. The creditors, however, certainly have a right to be present, and that being so, the case falls exactly within the observation of Baron Channel in the case of Reyles v. Leader, which has been already cited—that supposing the proceeding is of a judicial character, if the Judge leaves his court open to the parties interested, that is enough to give protection to a report of what occurs. I hold, then, first that the publication of the examination on oath of the bankrupt for the official assignee stands on the same footing with respect to publication as the examination of witnesses in an ordinary court of justice; and if that is so, it follows that a fair comment on the evidence so adduced is protected in the same way as the evidence would be protected. In the present case, the bankruptcy, I understand, is still pending before the District Court, and it might well be if the comment had been made, not upon the evidence of the bankrupt himself, but on the evidence of other witnesses hostile to the bankrupt, that as the proceedings were pending such comment would not be privileged; and as the proceedings were sub judice it would be better for the newspapers to wait until there was an end of the case. I don't say when the comments are simple—that is, simply comments on the statements of the bankrupt himself—that the rule necessarily applies, but provided that the comments in themselves are nothing more than a reasonable person might justly make. Now, in the present case I feel satisfied that the comments which have been made do come within this rule—if read by the evidence which the bankrupt admittedly gave. The conclusion which any rational person would come to from reading the statement of the bankrupt would be that the conduct of the bankrupt had not been what it ought to be, nor does the article complained of really say any more than that. I do not think it does. What it says practically is this, "the bankrupt out of his own mouth has shown he has not acted honestly," and it seems to me that that is a very fair and reasonable thing under the circumstances to have said. It is objected that there are two statements in the comment which are not justified by the statement which the bankrupt made. One is the statement about his having sold some cows at under their value, and the other is about his exchange of horses with his brother-in-law. These are, however, really minor details, and it seems to me quite fair to say that, being minor details, as they are, they really are within the principle of fair comment, although they may somewhat go beyond the statement of the bankrupt himself. Fair comment is defined by Stephen as follows:—"A fair comment is a comment which is either true, or which, if false, expresses the real opinion of the author as to the existence of matter of fact or otherwise such opinion has not been formed with a reasonable degree of care and on reasonable grounds." Well, the opinion here is of course formed upon the statement of the bankrupt. The comment may be in his opinion "as to the existence of a matter of fact or otherwise." Well, the whole of the rest of the statement of the bankrupt seems to be "that he has not been acting as he ought to have done." If a man makes such an admission as the sale of four cows for £7, surely it is not an unfair inference, looking at the whole of his statement, that there was an under value, and the same remark applies to the exchange of horses. On the whole, therefore, I am of opinion it was quite open to defendants to have commented on the statement of plaintiff, and there is no evidence to show that their comment was other than fair and honest.

It was ordered that the document be printed.

LAWS RELATING TO INSOLVENCY.

Mr. PIGOTT asked the Vice-President of the Executive Council if it was the intention of the Government to introduce during the next session of Parliament a bill to consolidate and amend the laws relating to insolvency.

Mr. SALOMONS replied "Yes."

SITE FOR NOXIOUS TRADES.

Mr. JACOB brought up, on behalf of the Chairman, the report of the Select Committee, on the site for noxious trades, together with proceedings of minutes and evidence.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. DE SALIS moved the adjournment of the House, in order to call attention to a matter upon which he had been subjected to some comment. He now desired to set himself right with regard to the House and the public. It was respecting a matter in which he thought the colony would be benefited and by carrying out which the Jubilee of her Majesty and the Centenary of the colony would be fittingly celebrated. Some months ago he had recommended that the best way to mark these occasions would be to carry out a reform with regard to our penal procedure, and also to enforce compulsory insurance or a scheme akin to compulsory insurance. Upon the occasion of the Bulli disaster he had written a letter with regard to the lesson to be learned, which was, he thought, the insistance upon compulsory insurance. Relative to criminals, he thought those who were not hardened might well be treated upon a plan which would so far as possible correspond with that adopted with regard to juvenile offenders, making the object reformation rather than punishment, and thus in this respect, at least, working a social revolution.

The motion was negatived.

CENTENARY CELEBRATION BILL.

Mr. SALOMONS moved that the Centenary Celebration Bill be read the third time.

Mr. PIDDINGTON said that he did not mean to occupy the time of the House at any length, his reason for objecting to the third reading of the bill being to claim as a member of the Legislative Council to as fully and unreservedly deal with this matter as any member of the other Chamber. For his part he was unaware that there was any distinction drawn in the Constitution Act which was the basis of the privileges of both Chambers, with regard to their power to deal with any measure. The two Chambers were co-ordinate in power, the only exception being that all measures with regard to taxation and appropriation should be initiated in the Assembly. Apart from that condition the rights of both Houses were coequal and co-ordinate. Since he objected to the bill he knew of no reason which had been advanced why he should vote for it, and he therefore intended to call for a division on the third reading.

The House then divided upon the question with the following result:—

AYES, 19.

Salomons	Simpson	H. Moore
Knox	Watt	Rundle
Hill	Halliday	Macintosh
Lee	Dodds	S. A. Stephen
Pigott	Joseph	Norton	Tellers.
Smith	Mort	King
C. Moore

NOES, 5.

Flood	Jacob	Piddington	Tellers.
Stewart		Creed

The bill was then read the third time, passed, and returned to the Legislative Assembly.

JURY FEES BILL.

On the order of the day being read for the resumption of the proceedings on Mr. Salomons motion that the Jury Fees Bill be read the second time, the House divided upon the question with the following result, ayes 17, noes 8.

The bill was then read the second time, and the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole to consider it in detail.

Clause 1.—"The third section of the Act 15th Victoria, No. 3, is hereby repealed. And after the passing of this Act the prothonotary shall not return any moneys pursuant to the said section, although such moneys were paid to him before the passing of this Act, but shall pay the same to the sheriff as directed by the 30th section of the Act 11th Victoria, No. 20."

Mr. JACOB said that he desired to move an amendment to the clause, as it provided not only that the moneys paid to the prothonotary under the existing law should not be returned, but that the moneys which had already been paid in should be retained, instead of being paid back to the parties. It was a most objectionable and preposterous form of retrospective legislation. He moved,—"That all the words after the word 'repealed' be omitted, with a view of inserting the words, 'But, notwithstanding such repeal, any moneys paid under sec. 32 of the Act 11th, Vic. No. 20, before the passing of this Act, shall be returned, pursuant to the section hereby repealed.'"

Mr. SALOMONS said it was all very well to use the word "preposterous" to the measure, but the doing so would carry no weight with anybody who understood the matter. Mr. Jacob's was mere theoretical reasoning, and the hon. member could not possibly know anything at all about the working of the bill. If there were cases of a "preposterous" nature, they would be met by this bill. No injury would be done to anybody by the passing of the measure. If cases had been already entered, they had been entered by persons who knew that this bill was going through the Legislature. Considering that the court was not sitting during the vacation, it was evident that any cases which were entered now would be entered by solicitors and others who knew that the bill was under the consideration of the House. The privilege granted by the law had been repeatedly abused by persons who entered cases with no intention of proceeding with them, and who eventually took back their deposit. Mr. Jacob's amendment would have the effect of defeating the very object which the Bill intended to secure.

Mr. SIMPSON said that, although he had supported the Bill, he approved of the proposed amendment thoroughly, as it was very unfair that persons who had already deposited their money with the prothonotary should be deprived of rights which they possessed under the present law. If it were true that there were no cases before the Court in respect of which jury fees were paid, there was, of course, no reason for the amendment. But Mr. Salomons would admit that there were about from 20 to 30 remanets in respect of which jury fees had been paid three or four months ago, and it was to these cases to which, he presumed, Mr. Jacob's amendment was intended to apply.

Mr. SALOMONS thanked Mr. Simpson for reminding him of the remanets, and in view of those he would cordially accede to Mr. Jacob's amendment.

Mr. JACOB objected to the offensive tone which Mr. Salomons had seen fit to adopt towards him; and his subsequent acceptance of the amendment would not satisfy him. He (Mr. Salomons) had done the same thing on previous occasions, and was responsible for having been instrumental in the passing of two or three bills which were practically unworkable. He expressed his determination, in spite of Mr. Salomons, to propose what amendments he believed to be in the interests of the country, leaving the committee to deal with them.

Mr. SALOMONS denied that he had intentionally used offensive language in referring to the hon. member, but if he had unconsciously said anything which might be so construed he desired to withdraw it.

The amendment was agreed to, and the bill was reported to the House with an amendment.

Mr. SALOMONS moved that the report be now adopted.

Mr. SIMPSON said that he was not sure whether he was in order in calling the attention of Mr. Salomons to the necessity which exists for a general reconsideration of the jury laws of this country. It was not the right time to do so, nor did he think it necessary to particularly point out in what respects the laws required amending, but he thought Mr. Salomons and the Attorney-General and the Minister for Justice should together direct their attention during the approaching recess to the consideration of the whole question. He could remember the time when the persons who formed the special jury class of this country were of a very different class to that of which they now consisted; and he was sorry to say that the alteration in the status of special jurymen had not tended to the proper administration of justice, and that was owing to an amendment made in a bill which had been introduced by Mr. Suttor, by which everybody and anybody who paid £100 a year as house rent, was classed as a special juryman, and that at present was the only qualification. He desired also to direct Mr. Salomons' attention to the remuneration which was paid to jurymen. There was no necessity for legislation in that respect, because he found that under a certain clause in one of the Jury Acts, the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, might fix the amount of remuneration. The remuneration at present paid to a juryman for a single day's attendance was 5s. A special juryman received 5s. a day also, unless he happened to be living further than 8 miles from the metropolis. If he lived 10 miles away, for instance, he would be entitled to 10s. a day. So that a resident of Burwood, if he attended the Supreme Court as a juryman, would receive 5s. a day, and another who lived two miles further on, say at Homebush, would receive 10s. a day. The absurdity of such a scale of remuneration was self-evident. It had become a frequent but not an unreasonable practice for jurymen to stand up and apply to the judge in open court for an increased allowance, which was often granted, the parties having to pay whose case the jurymen were investigating. And it seemed to him that such requests when they were preferred were thoroughly reasonable. He thought that at the time the Government considered the question of raising the status of special jurymen they should seriously take into consideration the fairness in the interests of jurors of increasing the remuneration which they ought to receive for their services. In Courts of Quarter Sessions a different class of jurymen was summoned to try cases from the class summoned to try cases of exactly the same nature in the superior courts. For the trial of cases at the Central Criminal Court at Darlinghurst and at assize courts in the country the jury was summoned from what was called the general class of jurymen. There might be a certain number of special jurymen and a certain number of ordinary jurors. In the Court of Quarter Sessions they had an inferior class of jurymen to try cases which should be dealt with by the best class of jurymen. It was just as important that a man should be fairly, impartially, and intelligently tried in a Court of Quarter Sessions as in a superior court. In the higher court there were supposed to be abler Crown prosecutors and a superior class of judges to those who sat in the inferior court, and that he thought was a reason why the necessity was all the greater to have in the lower courts jurymen taken from the most intelligent portion of the community. However the whole question was a very wide one, and would require very careful consideration. All he wished to do was to take advantage of that opportunity to call the attention of his hon. and learned friend to the urgent necessity which existed for the reconsideration of the jury question.

Mr. DE SALIS urged that whilst the Government were considering that question, they should make other changes which would allow the jury to have a potential voice in fixing the punishment and in assessing costs. The enlargement of the power of a jury in those respects would bring about a different state of things from that now in existence.

Mr. SALOMONS said that he had already expressed the hope that in the recess it would be possible to draft a measure consolidating and amending the whole of the laws relative to juries. In saying that, he desired that it should not be understood as meaning that he in any way differed from the views expressed by Mr. Simpson. He had arisen chiefly to say this: If he were asked what single reform would be the one he would put his finger on and say that that alone would tend more than anything else to prevent litigation, to prevent speculative actions, and facilitate the administration of justice, both as to celerity and cheapness—it would be except in certain cases, to abolish juries altogether. (Loud cheers, followed by dissentient cries.) He quite admitted that the present jury system was an immense advantage not only to the branch of the profession to which he belonged, but to the other branch of the profession; but, speaking with the knowledge gained by his experience of more than 25 years, he, notwithstanding the dissent he had heard, if he were asked to point out the reform which more than anything else would tend to do away with one half the actions at law, and reduce the time required to administer justice to one fourth of what was now necessary, would point to the abolition of trial by jury, except in certain cases—he was not referring to the administration of the criminal law, but exclusively to civil cases. He had within the last 48 hours had some conversation with Judges upon the subject, and he had no hesitation in saying that if there were no juries half the time of the Judges might be spent in holidays. Many of the cases now brought before the Courts were brought by people who had more courage than discretion. There was, for instance, that class of action which was being constantly brought by a man who had, say, 7s. in the bank, and drew a cheque for a trifling sum, wishing at the same time that it might be dishonoured. Well, the cheque was dishonoured, and perhaps the dishonouring of it in no way injured that man's credit. If juries were abolished, what counsel would dare to bring a case of that kind before a Judge sitting alone. It often happened that to men who brought that sort of action the dishonouring of their cheques was the most fortunate event which had ever happened in their lifetime. They brought these actions, depending upon the sympathies of the jury to secure substantial damages, and they succeeded. Take another class of case—that of the man who had a few sheep and cattle which were constantly straying. They happened to stray on to the land of a richer neighbour, and the proprietor of the cattle brought an action against the owner of the land. In this class of case, an appeal to the sympathies of a jury generally caused them to be carried away, and being generous with regard to what did not belong to them, and exercising a most disgraceful kind of generosity, they awarded to the plaintiff damages which, if they themselves had to meet, they would refuse to pay. There were also actions upon charter parties, which were brought before juries who knew very little about mercantile usages, and yet had no hesitation in dealing with cases of that kind. He next spoke of the judicial farce sometimes enacted, when the Judge, at the conclusion of the evidence and arguments in a trial, tried to impress upon an illiterate jury the features of a case, and he likened the spectacle to a musician playing an organ to the deaf. Day after day he (Mr. Salomons) was made an unwilling instrument in a course he disapproved of, and which was degrading to justice, and did the greatest possible amount of harm, and which he solemnly said he would make any amount of sacrifice to do away with. That was not an idea which he alone entertained. England had already seen that the view he took was the correct one, and the law of England now provided that with certain exceptions, unless application for a jury was made, no jury was called. He was present on one occasion in a court in England when one of the leaders of the bar rose to address a court. Before the learned counsel had spoken the Judge said, "Mr. ——, if you wish to argue this case, I of course will listen to you, but I will remind you of such a decision, and of certain principles which I am quite sure you are as familiar with as I am; if, however, you think fit to take up the time of the court I will listen to you, but I would suggest that you had better reserve your views for the Court of Appeal, and allow me to proceed." In that case the learned counsel looked at the judge in a way which indicated, as it were, an electric return of sympathy, and said, "Your Lordship, your view is the very view I have pointed out to this very persistent solicitor and his illiterate client; I do not think it respectful to persevere after what your Lordship has said;" and the barrister, sitting down, turned to the solicitor and said, "That is just what I told you six months ago." He next mentioned an action in which a military officer had been dismissed from a regiment for having embezzled its funds, an offence which was held to be conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman. In that case the dismissed officer brought an action against a most distinguished peer of the realm, and a contemptible jury, who were appealed to as "twelve merchants of the city of London," sympathised with the officer, and gave against the peer a verdict for the sum of £400. The degredation of that verdict brought the lord to tears. Let them look at the gross absurdity which arose in connection with a person bringing an action for say £200. If the action to recover that sum were brought in the District Court there would be no jury at all required, but if it were brought in the Supreme Court it would have to be tried by a jury. He next mentioned a case in which he had been consulted, and in respect to which he endorsed upon the brief that it must result in a verdict for the defendant. Notwithstanding the advice he gave in that matter, he was instructed to proceed on behalf of the plaintiff. He (Mr. Salomons) resisted, and the solicitor for the plaintiff told him that the action was sure to succeed; that they relied for the success of it upon some peculiar constitution of the jury with regard to the religious views they entertained. He did proceed with the case, and that jury caused him to strike out the entry, "verdict for the defendant," and substitute in its place, "verdict for the plaintiff." In the case of litigation between a merchant and his servant, or two merchants, or a free selector and a squatter, instead of taking four men at random for the jury, by which means the parties might have a fair trial, the attorney for the plaintiff struck out from a list of eight two men who he thought might take a favourable view of the defendant's case, and the attorney for the defendant struck out the names of two others who might be likely to sympathise with the plaintiff, and between the two they obtained the most incompetent jury that could be found. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) He remembered a case in which the Judge gave one of the most impartial summings up which he ever listened to; but the jury did not and could not understand it, and they decided in ten or fifteen minutes a case which it had taken three days to try. If hon. members asked him what single reform he would adopt as one most calculated to prevent speculative actions, and to cause justice to be administered with celerity and reasonable cheapness, he would say the abolition, except in certain cases, of the necessity of having a jury to try civil cases. Of course he was not referring to criminal matters. It would be impossible for him to place his finger upon all the abuses that had accumulated during ages upon ages. If they had the law as it existed in France, or Germany, they would not have the farce which was frequently witnessed in our law courts with regard to the reception of documentary evidence. He was not complaining of the advocates of a profession which was one of the most honourable in the world, and which, if followed in a right spirit, might be a source of great benefit to private parties engaged in litigation; but that did not blind him to the spots in the sun, and one of those spots was the manner in which juries were empannelled. If the law were made the same as in England it would be much more satisfactory. In this colony, if a plaintiff secured a verdict for thirty pounds one shilling, the whole of the costs fell upon the defendant, whereas in England the Judge, if the merits of the case justified it, had power to direct that the plaintiff should pay all the costs. If that were the law here, many actions which now came before the Courts would not be brought. Then they had this anomaly, that in the District Court the Judge had power to direct the plaintiff to pay costs. There he could say to plaintiff, "I am compelled to give you a verdict, but I shall give you one shilling damages and no costs." The Supreme Court Judges, however, had no such power. These things had been remedied in England, and he hoped, if he survived until next session to bring in a bill which he had in preparation to make the law the same as it was in England—(hear, hear) so that these cobwebs of antiquity might be swept away. The law was a complex fabric, requiring the intelligent consideration of a trained and technical mind to handle it. He hoped he might be blessed by having the privilege of bringing into that Chamber next session a measure which would at least remove many defects; and if it passed, the effect would be that at least half the actions that were now brought would not be heard of, because if they only had actions brought which were really to redress injury, and in which wrong had been done to person, property, or character, the Judges, instead of being exhausted as they were now with the consideration and determination of highly technical points, would have more leisure to suggest reforms, and bring the law more in accordance with the intelligence which characterised this age. (Hear, hear.)

The motion for the adoption of the report was then agreed to.

ASSIGNEES OF FIRE INSURANCE POLICIES' ENABLING BILL.

On the motion of Mr. JACOB, the Assignees of Fire Insurance Policies Enabling Bill was read the third time, passed, and returned to the Legislative Assembly.

WILLOUGHBY AND GORDON TRAMWAY BILL.

On the motion of Mr. CREED, the Willoughby and Gordon Tramway Bill was read the third time, passed, and returned to the Legislative Assembly.

ADJOURNMENT.

The House, at 6 o'clock, adjourned until 4 o'clock on Tuesday next.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

FRIDAY, JULY 8.

At the time the report of Thursday's proceedings in the Legislative Assembly, published in our issue of yesterday, closed the House was sitting in committee of supply considering the postponed estimate, Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute, £20,795, and a motion by Mr. O'Sullivan for the omission from the estimate of item £240, the salary of the matron superintendent at Newington Asylum. The following is a report what subsequently took place:—

Mr. M'ELHONE said he would ask what promptitude had the Government shown in dealing with the matter of the Newington Asylum. In not having suspended Mrs. Hicks as he did Dr. Rowling, the Premier could not deal with the other persons concerned. He maintained that, after what had been reported about the institution, the whole of the officials ought to have been discharged.

At this stage, three minutes past 2 a.m., there was a temporary adjournment for refreshments.

On the House resuming,

Mr. M'ELHONE appealed to the hon. gentleman at the head of the Government to allow the matter to be postponed until the following day.

Sir HENRY PARKES said the hon. member knew as well as he did that this matter could not come on to-morrow. It was the day for private business.

Mr. M'ELHONE: Well, it can be postponed until Monday, and the Government will be the gainers, for I will then only occupy the time of the House but a few minutes.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that at this stage of the proceedings the Estimates must go on. It was the intention of the Government to bring the session to a close early next week; and there was no other business now to be dealt with, except this and a few matters in which private members were concerned. There would be no Government business beyond this matter. It was much to be regretted that the whole of this evening should have been taken up, as any reasonable man would say, in a most unnecessary way. What guarantee had they that the same thing would not take place on Monday? There was, as he had said, not only the Government business to be finished up, but there were two or three questions brought forward by private members which ought to be considered. The Government were anxious to assist hon. gentlemen in passing their business, as well as to get their own through.

Mr. DIBBS did not think that fair consideration could be given to this important matter at 2 o'clock in the morning. With regard to the time that had been consumed in discussing the question of the land at Cremorne, he might say that had the papers been laid on the table there would have been no discussion upon it. The matter now before the House, he maintained, was one that ought to be threshed out in the interests of humanity. He felt very deeply upon this matter, and he might tell the Premier that if he would deal with these delinquents as he would with any other delinquents in the public service, he would not say anything further upon it. He saw sufficient when this matter was brought under his notice to satisfy him that certain persons were unfit for their position. He suggested that the Premier should let the matter stand over till Monday, in view of the fact that it was impossible to close the session as early as Sir Henry Parkes expected to do. It was preposterous that a notice paper containing no less than 51 questions should be passed lightly over, when many of them referred to grievances which in the public interests demanded that they should be inquired into and righted.

Mr. M'ELHONE: What about the Railway Bill?

AN HON. MEMBER: That has been withdrawn.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that the Government had not withdrawn it, but he supposed that it would be slaughtered amongst the other innocents. Referring to the continuance of the session, he said that they had sat so long, not for the convenience of the Government. The House had to bear in mind that there must be an interval between the close of the present session and the beginning of the next long enough to give the Government time to set their house in order, so as to prepare for the work of the latter, and two months would be the very shortest possible period. If, therefore, the present session were prolonged, the opening of the next would be delayed by as much longer. The Government had reckoned upon proroguing on Tuesday; but in consequence of what had been done in another place, and their desire to act fairly towards those hon. members who were in favour of the Payment of Members Bill, they had decided to defer the prorogation in order that the bill might be fully and fairly dealt with in the other chamber. If the second reading of that bill had been put down for to-morrow, they would have prorogued on Tuesday; but as the Upper House had seen fit to fix the second reading for the same day, the Government at once determined to postpone the prorogation until the bill had been disposed of. Referring to the Estimates, he regretted that the whole night had been taken up with the discussion of other matters, and what guarantee had the Government that the same thing would not occur again on Monday? If they could look forward with any confidence to such a line of conduct not being repeated by the Opposition, he would agree to adjourn instantly.

Mr. MELVILLE said that if the Government would make the concession, he would help them all he could to push the Estimates through on Monday.

Mr. WALKER gave a similar undertaking, notwithstanding that he had made up his mind to bring a most important matter before the House the same night.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that, after all the indications that had been given to thresh out the particular question which they had been debating that night, it would be unreasonable to withhold his consent to the adjournment. But he trusted to hon. members to help the Government to get through the Estimates on Monday.

Mr. M'ELHONE asked the Colonial Secretary to give the House an assurance that the sale of the water frontage, Cremorne would not be completed until the House had had an opportunity of discussing the matter again.

Sir HENRY PARKES promised that the sale would not be concluded.

The CHAIRMAN then left the chair, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again on Monday.

ADJOURNMENT.

Sir HENRY PARKES moved that the House at its rising do adjourn until Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

Sir HENRY PARKES thought it right to explain how far the Government was concerned with the question of winding up the business. He had heard one hon. member say something about the Railway Bill; and as to that, the Government had arrived at the conclusion that they could not possibly go on with it without unduly protracting the session. But, after all, it might be better that the bill should be brought forward at a future time, and simultaneously with the Public Works Bill. The Government were in a manner committed to Mr. O'Connor to endeavour to give him an opportunity of discussing a motion of his relating to the other Chamber; and they were anxious also to assist the final reading of the Divorce Bill. They were in no way committed in regard to private business; nevertheless the Government would be happy to do all in their power in connection with measures to which hon. members attached importance.

Mr. LYNE wished to know, if the papers in connection with the Cremorne transaction could not be laid on the table of the House to-morrow, whether they might expect to have them on Monday night.

Sir HENRY PARKES promised that printed copies should be laid on the table on Monday night.

The House, at 10 minutes past 3 o'clock, adjourned till 4 p.m. on Monday.

PROTECTION IN GERMANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Nowhere in Europe is the struggle for existence fiercer than in Germany. Wages are incredibly low, while the prices of commodities are not falling proportionately. Tailors, working 13 hours, receive on an average 15d. to 18d. per day; shoemakers, 13d. to 16d.; carpenters and colliers, 16d.; masons and smiths from 15d. to 18d. Iron-workers and mill operatives fare even worse. Krupp, at Essen, pays a first-class hand under 13s. a week; and labourers of the second class get only 10s. Saxon clock-makers work for less than 6s.; Silesian railmakers for less than 4s. a week; and weavers in many districts are stated to receive the painfully meagre pittance of 28 pfenning or 3½d. per day.

I am, &c.,

July 8. THOMAS CAMPBELL.

DEPUTATIONS.

THE NEWCASTLE MUNICIPALITIES.

A deputation, consisting of the Mayor of Newcastle, the Mayors of Wickham, Wallsend, Plattsburg, Hamilton, Waratah, Adamstown, Merewether, Lambton, and Carrington, and several other gentlemen from the district, was introduced to the Colonial Secretary yesterday morning by Mr. Fletcher, M.L.A. The Hon. G. A. Lloyd and Mr. Ellis, M.L.A., were also present.

Mr. FLETCHER, in introducing the deputation, stated that its object was to request the Government to grant some assistance to these municipalities which would enable them to give employment to the large number of men who were at present out of work in the district. The councils found that there was a great deal of necessary work to be done, but their funds were at such a low ebb that it required every shilling to keep up the necessary repairs, without undertaking any new work. The municipalities did not desire any of the unemployed sent from Sydney, as they had plenty in the district, but they wished the Government to assist the municipalities to employ labour, by paying half the wages given, as had been already done in various cases in Sydney and the surrounding municipalities.

Mr. W. WEBB, the Mayor of Newcastle, then read a petition signed by the mayors of the municipalities mentioned above, which set forth that in Newcastle and the adjacent boroughs there was at present a great deal of distress, owing to the absence of employment. The police district of Newcastle contained, relatively, a higher proportion of the labouring classes than any other in the colony, and the widespread depression which prevailed had been most keenly felt by those least able to meet the hardships caused thereby. Exceptional opportunities offered in this district for the employment of labour in reclaiming and improving waste lands, the sale of which would recoup the Government for its expenditure, and leave a very large surplus. The sanitary condition of the district would also be greatly improved by the reclamation of the foreshores of the harbour, and the portion of the river in the vicinity of the borough. The land recently resumed by the Crown, under Act 50 Victoria, No. 22, would require, to make it fit for disposal, a very considerable amount of labour to be spent on it, and it would then be of great value. In view of the fact that the Government had expended in and near the metropolis considerable sums in providing relief works for the unemployed, as well as having sent many, at the public cost, to various portions of the colony, the petitioners felt that they had a claim for consideration of their prayer; especially when it was based upon a request to convert land, at present of comparatively small value, into property which would be readily saleable at high prices. The petitioners also wished to draw attention to the various roads of the district, which were in a deplorable condition, and many of the unemployed could be judiciously and profitably employed on them.

Several other members of the deputation also spoke to a similar effect, pointing out the great amount of distress which at present existed in the district and the necessity of finding some means of relieving it.

Mr. ELLIS stated that there was one work which would find employment for a large number of men, and that was the work at Bullock Island, the vote for which had been thrown out last session by accident. The work if proceeded with would absorb almost the whole of the unemployed in the district, and the outlay for the reclamation of the foreshores would soon be recouped by the sale of land which would be worth £2000 per acre.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, said that he noticed that they dwelt upon the large number of the unemployed receiving assistance around Sydney, but the Government had certainly no desire to keep these people near Sydney, and would be glad to send them to Newcastle or any other place, as it was of no advantage to Sydney to have them here. The Government had pretty well made up its mind to bring this anomaly in the industrial economy of the country to an end, some way or other, and not to have persons continually employed on relief works; and he trusted that within the next two months or so the Government would not be employing any of these persons, but that they would be drafted off in some direction or other into the ordinary channels of employment. It was impossible for the present state of things to continue long. The Government had assisted some of the municipalities to employ labour on certain terms, and he wished to know whether this was the kind of assistance which the deputation requested, or whether they wished the Government to employ these people on their own account, in carrying out relief works in their neighbourhood.

Mr. FLETCHER said that the request of the deputation was of a twofold character. They asked the Government to assist them in employing labour on purely municipal work, in the same way as assistance had been granted to other municipalities in the colony. Finding, however, that this would not absorb the whole of the surplus labour in the district, they pointed out that work could be commenced and carried on by the Government, which would be of a reproductive character, and that the enhanced value which would be given to the land by these improvements would in a short time not only repay the expenditure, but would yield a handsome profit.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that the Government would be willing to assist the municipalities represented here to employ these people, but only on certain conditions. In the first place none, of the men at present employed by the municipalities must be displaced, but the assisted labour employed must be in addition to these men. The Government would pay half the wages of the extra labour employed, but they would not contribute towards the pay of the men already engaged in the municipal service. He had heard it stated that the roads in the district were very bad; and if that were so, surely the most immediately beneficial work would be to repair these roads. If the municipalities would make separate applications to the Government they would be willing to assist them in the way that he had pointed out. With regard to the public works, if the Government found there were any public works in the district, say, for instance, the reclamation of Bullock Island, upon which they could profitably employ men, they would be glad to do it; but he must request that each case should be stated to the Government separately.

The deputation also brought under the notice of the Colonial Secretary the desirability of establishing a museum at Newcastle, and a petition containing over 4000 signatures in favour of establishing a museum was handed in.

The Rev. Mr. BAIN explained that the museum would benefit a population of some 70,000 persons, and would also be of great use as a place where the branch of the Technical College at Newcastle could be established. He also pointed out that the Government possessed a piece of land at Newcastle which would be very suitable as a site for a museum.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that his sympathies were entirely with them in their desire to establish a museum, and he assumed that the district would be willing to do something to aid in its establishment. On the understanding that the district would make worthy efforts in this direction he promised them that the Government would do all they could expect a Government to do towards what he conceived to be a very laudable object. He was extremely glad to find that there was in the community such a spirit of appreciation of the advantages which such an institution would offer.

TEMORA LAND OFFICE.

A deputation of residents of Temora introduced by Messrs. J. Gordon and J. A. Mackinnon, Ms.L.A., waited upon the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands), yesterday, in reference to the establishment of a land office at Temora. The deputation pointed out that at present there were 118 selectors residing in the district, and that the nearest land court was at Cootamundra, a distance of 70 miles. The residents of the district were put to very great inconvenience in having to travel so far in order to attend the land court, and they desired the Government to establish a land office at Temora.

Mr. GARRETT, in reply to the deputation, pointed out that to establish a land court at Temora would involve changes in the boundaries of other districts. He would, however, in view of the large number of cases in the district which would have to be dealt with, have instructions given to the chairman of the land board to hold the sittings at Temora as often as practicable.

REQUIREMENTS OF WHARF LABOURERS.

A deputation, respresenting wharf labourers and seamen, introduced by Mr. D. O'Connor, M.L.A., accompanied by Messrs. Merriman and Kethel, M.'sL.A., and consisting of Messrs. A. J. Kelly, R. M'Killop, Rose, and Gilligan, waited upon the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands), yesterday morning to ask the Government to grant a piece of land as a site for a building to be erected for the use of wharf-labourers. Mr. O'Connor, in introducing the deputation said the Wharf Labourers' Society desired the Government to grant a piece of land for the purpose of putting up a suitable building in which they might remain during the day and night, whilst having to wait about for work. He pointed out that their mode of living was very uncertain. Ships came into port at all hours of the day and night, and as the men had no place in which to remain they had to stop about the wharfs or street corners, in the burning sun, in summer, or in the cold and rain during winter. There was a piece of land at the foot of the Flagstaff-hill which would be in every way suitable for the purpose. The men would be able to erect their own building, if the Government could grant them a site.

Messrs. MERRIMAN and KETHEL, Ms.L.A., also spoke in support of the request made on behalf of the deputation.

Mr. GARRETT, in reply, said he was afraid there would be a great difficulty in the way of getting a piece of land for the purpose. If they had a piece of land which was at all available or suitable for their purpose, and there was no objection in the way of granting it, he would be willing to grant a piece sufficient for the erection of a suitable building. He would, by Monday or Tuesday next, obtain an official report regarding two or three pieces of ground in Kent-street, and would then let them know what could be done in the matter.

NEWCASTLE RESERVE.

A deputation consisting of the Mayors of the various municipalities around Newcastle, waited upon the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands) yesterday morning, to bring under his notice several local requirements. Mr. Fletcher, M.L.A., in introducing the deputation, said the first matter they wished to bring under the notice of the Minister was the reapplication for land suitable for cattle sale yards and a pound. A large number of people had settled upon the commonage, but it was believed a place suitable for sale-yards could be obtained without interfering with those residing on the commonage. They also wished the Minister to give the commonage question full consideration. Every day the matter was delayed the difficulties of dealing with it were increased. Since the Minister had visited the place a great change had taken place. A number of splendid weatherboard houses had been put up, and the people were continuing to build every day. Another matter they wished the Minister to take into consideration was the alignment of streets in new municipalities. This question had been a burning question for years past, and the people were of the opinion that if the Government gave them power to have the streets aligned themselves, the work would be done with much more satisfaction.

Mr. SCHOLEY (Mayor of Waratah), Mr. WEBB (Mayor of Newcastle), and other members of the deputation endorsed the remarks made by Mr. Fletcher.

Mr. GARRETT, in reply to the deputation, said, with regard to the alignment of streets, the Government had decided to have nothing whatever to do with the question, excepting in those cases where any promises had been made by the Government. They did not intend to interfere in any case unless requested to do so by a municipality which would undertake to pay half of the cost. He was not in a position to give the deputation any satisfaction whatever with regard to the question of dedicating land for a pound and cattle sale yards. The Government had decided to go fully into the commonage question, and all trespassers, or anyone illegally in possession, would be removed, and in no case would they receive consideration for any improvements they had made. He could not say whether the land would be sold or leased, or what would be done with it. The examination of the common had not yet been completed, and he could make them no promise with regard to the pound or cattle sale yards, but when the matter was settled he would deal with them as liberally as the circumstances of the case would permit.

Mr. FLETCHER pointed out that those who had settled upon the common had been driven to take up their abode there in consequence of the exorbitant prices which had been levied by the colliery proprietors. Whilst they might be considered trespassers, he would point out that for every quarter of an acre they had taken for the purpose of building a little home for themselves, the squatters had taken hundreds of acres. Mr. Garrett and himself would have to cross swords in Parliament over the matter unless these poor people were served as the squatters had been.

Mr. GARRETT said up to a certain date—he thought the 16th July 1876—the squatters were allowed to go upon reserves within their runs, reserves for which they were paying rent, and they were allowed to improve these reserves just as they improved any part of their holding; but when he was in office in 1876 he stopped all that, and from that time to the present no man had been allowed to improve these reserves. But there was a great difference between the two cases. The squatter at the time had the right and power to do what he did, but that was not the case with those living upon the common at Newcastle.

THE MUNICIPALITY OF NEWTOWN.

A deputation representing the Municipal Council of Newtown waited upon the Colonial Secretary yesterday. Mr. Gibbes, M.L.A., who introduced the deputation, explained that its object was to ask for a more liberal endowment for the municipality of Newtown. It was pointed out by Mr. Bellamy, the Mayor of Newtown, and by several other members of the deputation, that whilst the total revenue derived from rates in the municipality was £9100, they only received the endowment of 10s. in the pound on their revenue derived from the general rate of 1s., which produced about £6000; so that they only received an endowment of £3000, or one-third of their total revenue. They considered that the Government, pending the introduction of a Local Government Bill, would be justified in increasing the endowment even to pound for pound, and unless the Council received an increased endowment they would most probably have to very much curtail their operations, and this would throw a number of men out of employment.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, said that the matter would be considered by the Government at a very early day, and he need hardly say that it would be considered with a view, if possible, of meeting their wishes. The course the Government had taken with regard to these endowments when they came into office was taken in view of the prospect then before them of a good deal of financial embarrassment, but matters had not turned out quite so badly as was anticipated, and there was a prospect of a general improvement in the condition of things. He hoped that the Government would be able to see their way to comply with the wishes of the deputation.

A LOAN FOR NEWCASTLE.

A deputation waited upon Sir Henry Parkes yesterday morning at the office of the Colonial Secretary, to request that he would introduce a bill into Parliament, empowering the municipality of Newcastle to borrow the sum of £100,000 for 30 years for the necessary sewerage and other improvements for the city. The Government guarantee was also sought for in connection with the loan. There were present—the Hon. G. A. Lloyd, M.L.C.; Mr. James Fletcher, M.L.A.; Mr. J. C. Ellis, M.L.A.; the Mayor of Newcastle (Mr. G. W. Webb); and Aldermen Gillam and W. T. Gibb, of Newcastle.

Mr. FLETCHER, M.L.A., introduced the deputation, and called the attention of the Premier to the fact that there was a very large amount of work to be done, and Newcastle had suffered in consequence of its not being done, more especially with regard to sewerage and the water supply.

Sir HENRY PARKES asked when the deputation desired the bill to be introduced.

Mr. FLETCHER replied that it might be done this session.

Sir HENRY PARKES, however, stated that there were not days enough left to go through the necessary forms.

Mr. FLETCHER suggested that the standing orders could be suspended.

Sir HENRY PARKES explained that he was extremely adverse to suspending the standing orders. He would like to know what was the urgency for this measure. He could understand well enough the value of the work without even explanation; but why was it necessary after having been left so long to have it done this instant?

The MAYOR of Newcastle (Mr. Webb) stated that they had in Newcastle only one main street—Hunter-street—which would not suffice to carry all the traffic, so they required a second street. They wanted to cut down King-street and lay Hunter-street with wooden blocks.

Sir HENRY PARKES then asked why this would not do in two months' time. He then proceeded to say in connection with the Government guarantee how much better it would be for Newcastle to borrow without the assistance of the Government. Newcastle had grown, and the case was quite different now from what it would be if Newcastle was a younger city. He did not think it was absolutely necessary to settle the matter of introducing the bill now. He would tell them without any consultation that he would be prepared to introduce the bill; but if he had to consider the matter of a guarantee he should have to consult the other Ministers. He had no doubt whatever that they would get the money just as well without the Government endorsement. The Government wished to close the present session, and they could not pretend to get the bill through now without extending the plans which had been already arranged. He was, however, quite willing to introduce the bill, and he was quite willing to see into the expediency of getting a guarantee for the bill.

REQUIREMENTS OF NORTHERN COLLIERY DISTRICTS.

A deputation of some 12 gentlemen, representing Newcastle and nine neighbouring municipalities in the northern district, accompanied by Messrs. Fletcher and Ellis, Ms.L.A., waited upon the Minister for Works yesterday to direct attention to the condition of the roads in the northern colliery districts, and to urge that something should be done speedily to repair them; and also to bring under the notice of the Minister other requirements of the district. It was represented that the deputation were delegates from a district which was about 10 square miles in extent, and contained a population of between 70,000 and 80,000. All the roads in that district were in a most deplorable condition, and traffic over them was highly dangerous to life. So bad was the condition of one of these roads that one member of the deputation had, whilst driving a pair of horses attached to a buggy along the route, preferred using the bush to the road for a distance of one mile. There were in the district a number of roads which, although practically main roads, were not dealt with as such by the Government. The northern municipalities were already plunged in debt, and therefore were unable to improve the condition of the roads without receiving some assistance from the Government. The deputation represented that one of the roads, that at Tighe's Hill, was being undermined, and was in danger of collapsing. It was also urged that the Government should reduce the rates charged for water supplied to people in the Northern districts. The desirableness was, moreover, impressed upon the Minister of inducing his colleagues to authorise the erection of an infectious diseases hospital at Newcastle. Mr. Fletcher said that the danger of smallpox or other infectious diseases being introduced at Newcastle was 10 times as great as it was at Sydney.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said the Government had spent all the money that was available, and more than was voted for those roads. As to the complaint made regarding the undermining of a road, he would communicate with the Mines Department upon that subject. The Government had placed upon the Supplementary Estimates which were to come before Parliament on Monday £100,000 for roads, but the expenditure of the whole of that sum of money would be controlled by the schedule. There was one thing which had been overlooked by the deputation, and that was the condition of the roads, about which there had been so much complaining, was due to the copious rains which had fallen this season. It was not reasonable to expect that, with the weather recently experienced, the roads should be maintained in a passable state. Newcastle and the surrounding district was not the only part of the colony which had suffered in that respect. Within less than five miles of Sydney he could find places through which it was not possible to ride a horse. He had no doubt that a few days of dry weather would accomplish more than any expenditure of money in remedying what was no doubt exceedingly inconvenient. He hoped for more beneficial results from sun and wind than any the Government could attempt to bring about. Meanwhile, all he could say was that so soon as he had money at his disposal for the repair of roads he would try to lay it out fairly, and that after all was the reason why he was in that department. It was only by constant watchfulness and carefulness that he could hope to do that, because there were many efforts made to secure the expenditure of road money where it was not warranted. The sum proposed was £100,000, and so great was the desire of some districts to "swallow" all they could possibly get that the representative of one district alone had within the last few months made an application which, if acquiesced in, would absorb the whole of it. The matter which the deputation had touched upon as affecting the water supply of the Northern district was one of some importance. The district, he understood, was at present without any reticulation, and of course the Government had to see that they had funds to lay down the necessary pipes. Whilst it was not reasonable for a district to expect to be provided with water without having to pay for it, it was not right for the people of Newcastle to be charged more than the people of other towns were. He would look into that matter to see how things stood. Hospitals were not embraced in his department. All he could say on this subject was, that when the erection of an infectious diseases hospital at Newcastle was sanctioned, he would lose no time in having it done.

THE BRANDING OF STOCK.

A deputation representing the tanners and those interested in the shipment of hides waited upon the Minister for Mines yesterday, introduced by Mr. Street, M.L.A., drawing attention to the wholesale and destructive manner in which the branding of cattle was conducted in the colony. The deputation complained that the skins of cattle were injured through a brand being used on such parts as rendered the hides of less value than they otherwise would be.

Mr. ABIGAIL, in reply, said the question of branding was to be dealt with in the new Stock and Pastures Bill, which was being printed, and which would be introduced into Parliament next session. It was intended to provide in the new measure for a system of ear-marks, in lieu of the brands now used.

BORING FOR PETROLEUM.

Yesterday morning a deputation, consisting of Messrs. J. B. North (Katoomba) and J. S. Skeet, of Sydney, waited upon the Minister for Mines for the purpose of requesting that a portion of the £15,000 which had been voted by Parliament for prospecting should be devoted to boring in search of petroleum. Attention was directed to the fact that there was a large tract of country between Wollongong and Capertee in which kerosene shale deposits had been found, and it was here the petroleum might be looked for. It had been found in the sandstone formation above the granite in America, and in our valleys and mountains the conditions were exactly the same as in America. Shale had been discovered in connection with coal, and at Greta and Murrurundi, as well as other districts in the colony, kerosene shale had been struck. As showing the importance of petroleum as an article of commerce, it was pointed out that in 1861 the first discovery of shale in America was made, and 23 years after that petroleum to the value of £125,000,000 sterling had been got out. In 1883, no less than £9,000,000 worth of petroleum was brought to the surface, and in the same year 2100 wells were at work. 6000 miles of pipes had been laid altogether for conveying the oil, and one service covered a distance of 300 miles. It was mentioned, as an additional fact, that rock salt had frequently been found in conjunction with petroleum, and that in all probability if petroleum was discovered in this colony rock salt would also be obtained. The use of petroleum in Russia, it was said, was bringing about a complete revolution in steam navigation there, and it would probably, in in the course of a few years, have a large influence upon the ocean-carrying trade of other parts of the world.

Mr. ABIGAIL said that in the first place he might say that the vote referred to was for prospecting for gold alone. The advantages of prospecting by boring were too manifest to him to need argument. The use of the boring machine by the Department had led to the development of many valuable features. For instance, mineral water had been found in the Dubbo district, which, it was said, possessed most valuable properties as a cure for rheumatism. This was obtained while boring for coal. There could be no question that boring was the cheapest and most reliable mode of testing the country, and he believed that nothing like the mineral wealth of New South Wales had yet been ascertained accurately. The proposition the deputation had submitted was a new one, and he did not suppose there were many people who had considered the possibility of discovering petroleum oil. That, however, did not prove that it did not exist in the colony. He asked the deputation to embody in a letter the proposal they had submitted to him, and he would then place the matter before the Cabinet, and ask them to recommend such a sum of money as would enable any districts that might be reported upon by the geological surveyors of the Department or indicated by other people to be tested in the manner suggested.

BRIDGE OVER THE GOULBURN AT SANDY HOLLOW.

A deputation from Mudgee and Muswellbrook, accompanied by Messrs. Wall, Haynes, Black, and Fitzgerald, Ms.L.A., waited upon the Minister for Works yesterday to present a numerously-signed petition in favour of the erection of a bridge over the Goulburn River at Sandy Hollow. In the petition it was stated that great inconvenience had been experienced at times of fresh and flood by the inhabitants of Goulburn River, Widden Creek, Kerrabee, Wallan, and Bylong, owing to the uncertain, shifting, and boggy condition of the river bed, which consisted of a dangerous quicksand, which changed with every flood, thereby causing a suspension of traffic and rendering it necessary for people desirous of crossing to delay at the crossing-place for weeks at a time. The petitioners urged that there should be placed upon the Estimates a sum of money sufficient for the purpose of erecting a substantial bridge over the Goulburn at Sandy Hollow. Mr. Hungerford, a member of the deputation, asserted that the district, which was one of extreme richness, had never yet, in regard to the expenditure of public money, had full justice done to it.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said he must take exception to that statement. He had been informed—and the information came from two sources—that considering the extent of the population the district had been quite fairly treated. As to the proposed bridge, it would involve the construction of a number of new roads. Rather than increase the number of roads, it would be better, he thought, for the Government to endeavour to maintain those they had already, instead of increasing their responsibilities in that direction. The Government could not make roads that would not be used.

Whilst the Minister was proceeding with his reply, he was interrupted by Mr. Hungerford, who, with great fluency, spoke of the fertility of certain of his land in the district which would be affected by the bridge, and mentioned amongst other things the number of oranges which, by reason of the absence of a bridge, the people were unable to get into market.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: All those statistics you seem to be quoting I should like to have on paper, so that I may give them full consideration. I cannot count the heads of oranges, but I can count the heads of the people in your district. I am informed by my officers that if this bridge you want is built a number of roads will have to be opened to render it of much value.

Mr. HUNGERFORD: What do your officers mean by saying that a number of roads will have to be opened?

Mr. Sutherland handed to Mr. Hungerford a plan, whereon were marked the roads which would have to be opened to the site of the proposed bridge.

A conversational discussion now ensued between members of the deputation and the Minister, from which it appeared that a bridge might be erected which would not necessitate the opening of the roads contemplated by the Department.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said he would obtain from his officers a fuller report upon the subject, and if he found that the bridge was necessary and its construction was warranted, he would do his duty in the matter.

REQUIREMENTS OF EASTWOOD.

A deputation from Eastwood, on the Hawkesbury railway line, introduced by Mr. M'Culloch, M.L.A., waited upon the Minister for Works yesterday, to urge that a goods shed should be erected in their township, and that the trains to and from Eastwood should be run more frequently than was the case at present. The terminus of several of the trains at present was Ryde, but it was desired that they should be run on to Eastwood.

Mr. SUTHERLAND pointed out that the Government were very poor. However, he would himself visit the place to see what was actually required, and after he had made that visit would decide what ought to be done.

BRIDGE AT BOWRAL.

A deputation from Bowral, introduced by Mr. M'Court, M.L.A., urged upon the Minister for Works yesterday the desirableness of the Government erecting a bridge over Merrigang Creek (in the Bowral municipality), the cost of which, they said, would be about £500.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said he would obtain from the officers of his department a report, giving the cost and other information relative to the proposed bridge.

SYDNEY SCHOOL OF ARTS.

At the monthly meeting of the committee of the Sydney Mechanics School of Arts, the president, Mr. James Dalgarno occupied the chair, and was supported by vice-presidents, Messrs. Tecce, Thomas, Osborne, and Selfe; the treasurer, Mr. Perkins, and Messrs. Beaver, Bevill, Gandon, Dowling, Holdsworth, Jones, Reid, Renwick, the Mayor (Mr. A. J. Riley), and Ritchie. New members to the number of 97 were elected, as against 69 in the corresponding month of last year. The treasurer submitted his statement, showing the total receipts for the month to be £5 7 7s.; the increase in subscriptions for the month being £22 19s. 6d. Accounts were passed for £368 16s. 6d., after payment of which there would be a credit balance of £186 15s. 11d., to which should be added an amount due to the institution of £241 13s. 6d., which would bring the amount at credit to £428 9s. 5d. The report was unanimously adopted, and considered highly satisfactory. The secretary submitted a report on the increase in the number of members, as also in the receipts for subscriptions, which showed that the number of members now on the roll was 2349; that the receipts for half-year ending 30th June for subscriptions were £1140 3s. 6d., against 1640 members in 1879, when the receipts for the whole of that year were only £1355 5s. The report of the preliminary committee was presented by Mr. Osborne, and was adopted. The president was deputed to sign the necessary deed of clearance of mortgage, and sanction was given to the rules of the Natural History Association of New South Wales, just formed under the auspices of the institution.

Mr. Osborne, in whose hands the matter of lectures on English literature had been left, reported that he had arranged with Mr. George Barton to deliver a lecture on that subject on an early date. A motion by Mr. Beaver, to admit the sisters of members of the institute on payment of half the usual subscription, was lost. A sub-committee was appointed, with power to expend £[illegible] on new slides for the lantern.

THE COMMERCIAL, PASTORAL, AND AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The fourth of the series of public meetings now being held under the auspices of the Commercial, Pastoral, and Agricultural Association of New South Wales was held in the Protestant Hall last night. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Young, and there was a fair attendance of the public. Amongst those present were the Hon. L. F. de Salis, Messrs. G. Rankin, W. H. Armstrong, E. Du Faur, C. Featherstonhaugh, T. Edols, W. Christian, J. B. Rundle, jun., C. S. Wilkinson, M.L.A., G. C. Loughnan, E. W. O'Sullivan, M.L.A., J. Cruickhank, D. Elder, A. Bruce, W. H. Chard, F. M'Dermott, W. H. Wright, P. N. Trebeck, and J. Wilson.

The CHAIRMAN, in opening the proceedings, said that it was within a few days of a year since he had presided at a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 21st July, 1886, to take into consideration the depressed condition of the pastoral interests of this colony. On that occasion he had remarked that the pastoral interests were liable to be legislated upon by men who had been brought up in towns, and who were not familiar with pastoral affairs. He thought it must be admitted that there was some truth in that remark, and that it was the want of knowledge on the subject of our legislators which had caused them to legislate as they had done. The object of this society had been, and was at present, to diffuse a real knowledge of the question amongst the community in general. The movement then commenced resulted in the formation of this association, the most promising feature in the association being its national character. It asserted no class interest, and during its year of existence it had scattered over the country publications all agreeing in favour of adopting a national land system, not professing to be framed in the interests of the rich man or the poor man, but so as to give security and peace of occupation of the soil to all classes of occupants. The association had brought forward men to speak at these meetings who understood what they were talking about, and who had gathered their knowledge from hard experience. (Applause.) He felt sure that if the people of this country could be brought to really understand the question in all its bearings, their sense of fair play and honesty would lead to a proper legislation in the matter. (Applause.) It only required to be brought home to the people of the country really and seriously that the squatting interest was absolutely the most important in the colony, as it brought in the most revenue, and therefore must not be trifled with. He had much pleasure in introducing Mr. Maiden, who would read the first paper.

Mr. MAIDEN, before commencing to read his paper, introduced his son, who recited a short poem entitled "Don't Forget the Rich," and this somewhat novel departure from the ordinary form of procedure was received with great applause. Mr. Maiden then proceeded to read his paper on "The Western Division." He said: If the candid truth were told, nowhere is the operation of our defective land laws more seriously felt than in Sydney itself. My own experience has shown that the correct course to have adopted would have been to regard the question of our Crown lands as a national rather than as a party matter. To sanction the division of runs, and more especially in the Western division, was a suicidal policy, no matter under what phase you may consider it; and when we regard the Act as affecting both lessees and the general public, we find it has not only, speaking in general terms, defeated its own ends, but has directly been the occasion of much absolute injury to the colony. From the passing of the Act of 1861 to the passing of the Act of 1884, it had been the policy of every Government in power to encourage the lessees of the Western country to improve and develop that dry and almost waste portion of the colony; and with the Act of 1884 what has followed? Well, I will tell you that on 316 holdings the declared improvements amounted to the sum of £7,000,000 (seven millions sterling), and I challenge anyone to say that the Western lessees have put unnecessary improvements on their country to bar selection. This sum of £7,000,000 has been sunk in water improvements, fencing, huts, tanks, dams, homesteads, and woolsheds, and as a matter of fact only the expenditure absolutely necessary to render the lands—and what vast areas of them were arid and inhospitable—reproductive, and to rescue them from the barren wilderness. The question of compensation for improvements is one, I regret to say, very little understood by the public. When the people learn that for years the lands of the colony comprised in the Western division lay unproductive—a terra incognita and no man's land—and that it has only been by years of toil and the expenditure of millions of money that those lands were compelled to contribute their quota to the wool exports of the colony, and add their surplus to the food supply of the population, the wonder will be why those pioneering lessees have not demanded compensation long ago. Not only is the claim for compensation by Western lessees tenable, but the absolute justice of the claim is indefeasible, and the justice vested in their claims is now being applied to the other portions of the colony by other Crown lessees who maintain that when the present leases expire, if they, the lessees, happen to be outbid in the open market when competing for their holdings, that they be allowed compensation for the capital invested, and that the ingoing tenant render a price to reimburse them for the improvements which have created an absolute value. Any Land Act which will not recognise the right to compensation for improvements specially effected with a view to making a specific area valuable and reproductive must be prohibitory as against the country's interest. It must not for one moment be supposed that I am an advocate for a system of indiscriminate compensation; quite the reverse, and I take this opportunity of stating that I am fully in accord with that system of controlling the expenditure for improvements on Crown lands which the present land boards endeavour to give effect to. All improvements should be of such a nature as to be not only productive in the present, but productive of an increased value to the areas which they would affect. Generally speaking, many of the men affected by the Act of 1884, and particularly by the compulsory division of holdings, are prone to express themselves in strong terms; and although admitting hardship, I do not think that it is a fair thing to blame the Government, that is, to blame the machinery which makes the Act operative. Every Act must be administered, and no matter how much we regret certain provisions of the Lands Act of 1884 we must admit that that so far it has been administered faithfully and well, and in the interests of the colony at large—bad as that Act is. Granting that on 316 holdings in the Western division the improvements aggregated £7,000,000, and that the divisions represent a fair partition of each holding, so far as country, improvements &c., are concerned, and yet as a positive fact the resumed areas do not, as many wish to put forward, comprise one-half the value of the improvements on the holding; although I have no doubt in my own mind that the resumed areas aggregate some £1,500,000 to £2,000,000 worth of such improvements. Without assuming that any portion of any particular resumed area has been excised, or that the carrying capacity of the entire holding has suffered, yet the monetary value of the holding has very materially depreciated, and, by an Act of Parliament, we have men despoiled of a certain sum absolutely without the right of action for recovery. This is one of the first results of our Act of 1884; and who will say such a result is one that can be defended? It is not, however, so much in respect to the resumed areas as to the leasehold areas that lessees urge their claims for compensation upon the termination of the existing leases. Taking any one holding we will find that the capital invested—droughts, losses, assessments, rents, carriage, and all computed—does not at present yield anything like an adequate return, and unless improvements be maintained, and further expenditure incurred, it will be impossible to work at anything less than a loss, which will ultimately lead to abandonment. To compute the return required, in the cases of Western holdings, to recoup for the capital invested, loss of portion by division, losses by droughts and deaths, it will be found that the holdings which will pay even 6 or 7 per cent. upon the amount actually invested and give back the cost of improvements during the present leases could be counted upon the fingers of one hand. Is it, I would ask, the intention of the public to stand idly looking on the process of ruin without some efforts being made to effect a rescue? It must be borne in mind that the ruin of any considerable portion of the Western division lessees will be felt far beyond the men who will have to succumb to the Act of 1884. Our general total of exports will show a decrease, but even this might be overcome were the powers to control our productive capabilities within the limits of either individual or State direction. And whilst touching upon this phase of the question, I take stand upon the ground that if once the Western lessees neglect their holdings and allow the improvements to decay, the country will lapse again into the barren wilderness which only untold-of enterprise and courage have compelled to give its share to our national wealth. Even were I taking an extreme view of the matter—and my experience and business relations justify me in saying I do not do so—I would point out that any delay in settling the question of compensation will prove disastrous to the best interests of the colony, for, should the present lessees be compelled to act up to all the conditions of existing tenure, the country will revert to the Crown a very little else than in its original wild and useless state, and we shall have the spectacle of a ruined class ruined by ignorant and incompetent legislation. It must be further pointed out (and, indeed, to my mind it is one of the prime factors in the whole question) that between the time the present lessees go out and new men come in a certain time must elapse, which will be a term unproductive, and, consequently a term of losses, to which add the accumulated trouble of noxious growth and rabbits. Noxious shrubs, pine, or any other vegetable growth can be coped with, and is a very different quantity from the rabbit. We need only look to the neighbouring colony of Victoria and learn a lesson from her experience. Can any one really say how many millions of money it has cost the people of Victoria to eradicate the rabbits? But I must point out several reasons why the colony of New South Wales will most likely suffer greater loss from the rabbit than ever the colony of Victoria has suffered. In the first place, we have a greater area of territory; in the second place, climatic influence is more favourable to propagation; in the third place, the character of the soil and the greater proportion of waste and scrub lands afford greater protection; and finally, the sparseness of our population in the back country has been the means of allowing them to increase, instead of aiding in their destruction. Who can say, knowing all the facts of the case, that the Western lessees demand more than simple justice in asking that they be compensated for improvements? I, for one, do not; and so far as I can honestly support these claims they shall have my best efforts of pen and speech in placing them before the public.

At the conclusion of Mr. Maiden's paper, a vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. S. B. Bailey, seconded by Mr. Crick, and supported by Mr. W. H. Chard, was enthusiastically accorded him.

Mr. W. COPE then read a paper on the subject of "Tenant-right in dealing with the public lands." He said: —The man who cries "wolf!" when there is no wolf deserves anything he may get from those whom he has needlessly alarmed; but he who can sit down in silence while the unemployed and the rabbits are eating up between them probably much more than half the revenues of the Crown lands must be a professional politician, if nothing worse. Strange as it may seem to those unacquainted with the land muddle, while the workers of the community are being taxed to pay this huge expense, many millions of acres of Crown lands need only "tickling with a hoe to laugh a harvest," and this in a season which offers almost unexampled facilities for their development, by the application of labour, from an unproductive wilderness into a highly productive state. This would seem to prove most conclusively that our land laws need reform. Most persons who have studied the question are prepared to admit that the present Act has a good apology for a backbone; but it is generally conceded that it was emasculated in passing the Legislature, and its principles have been overridden in administration. The absence of any recognition of tenant-right, which has hitherto in some sense been recognised by previous legislation and practice, shows that those in charge of the bill had not fully weighed the effects which this neglect would occasion. We now see the result in the sudden stoppage of all reproductive work on the lands of the interior, and the records of the Insolvency Court and the troops of men flocking to the city for work, show how the injury has fallen upon the working men, and storekeepers in the country, and upon the workers in cities, who have now to maintain and compete with them. Later on, unless something be done, we shall see a like result upon the Crown tenants of all classes, who for the present, like Mr. Micawber, are holding on in the hope that something may turn up. Injuries to the tenant must always be, and are now, reflected upon their landlords—the people—in the shape of a depreciated property. We cannot expect them to take possession of, and cultivate and render habitable, a tract of waterless country, which is the roughest of all material in reality, from off which they will be turned as soon as they have done so. Yet, this is what our laws practically do to Crown tenants, be they selectors, squatters, or others. Not far from our border lies the land which the great explorer, Burke, found so unfit to sustain life in its natural state, that, after so nobly struggling for existence, he died. This very country has been rendered, by the industry of man, so reproductive that cattle are now reared upon it, and on stations round all the necessaries of life are to be found. Yet, in our own colony, the men who have done and are doing like work upon similar country, upon the faith of what, undoubtedly, was the custom, viz., that at least the land upon which they had expended money and labour in improvements would be protected, are told that they are sufficiently provided for by a lease—if it be situated in the Western division—having some 12½ years to run, at a rental amounting, in some cases, to about 1s. per sheep, and which rent, be they prosperous or drought-stricken, must, at the end of 2½ years, be increased by one-fourth; and after five years at that rental, be again raised by perhaps one-half; and at the end of their leases all the improvements, results perhaps of the savings of a lifetime, are confiscate to the Crown. Imagine, with the rabbit invasion in view, the cheerful prospect in view for these lessees. Again, take the case of a conditional lessee under the Act. The law practically admits that, in addition to his selection, an area of leased land is necessary for the effective working of his holding; and, after being compelled to fence, as seems quite just, and in order to get any use out of it, to spend money in labour to make the land capable of carrying stock, he must either conditionally purchase it within five years and six months of the date of the confirmation of his application, or forfeit all his labour and expenditure, the Crown—the beneficent landlord—conceding for this a lease, at a rental which may itself be prohibitive, for a further term of five years. His land, too, may be so measured, that he cannot arrange with adjoining tenant as to fencing, but may be forced into a largely additional expenditure by reason of roads where they will never be used. The selector, whose conditional lease has been dealt with under the 52nd clause, is denied even this illusory right of purchase of his improvements, but he really would not be much better off if he had it, unless he happened to be a capitalist, as no poor man could comply with the conditions. The homestead lessee must reside half the year, during the first five years of his lease, and must fence. And otherwise he is subjected to the same penalties for improving or expending labour upon his land, as other tenants in his division. Many of these latter have already declined to go on with what they find such a one-sided and ruinous bargain, and the rabbit has become tenant in their stead. He need not care for tenant right, as his occupation of the land, unlike that of man, is sufficiently ruinous to the landlord to prevent competition. Much has been made of the so-called fixity of tenure, but the instances already given fairly represent what it means, and how illusory it is with regard to the classes of holdings alluded to. It should be stated some few exceptions, owing to the date of the expiration of the old lease, a year or two may be added to the tenure. In the Central Division the leases generally, for all practical purposes, may be said to have seven and a half years to run, the rent being increased by one-fourth during the last five years. In the Eastern Division the tenure now holds good for some two and a half years. True, the Minister may in all cases of pastoral leases, though this is denied to the conditional lessees, if he choose, allow an extension of five years after the expiration of any lease; but what guarantee has any man that the ruler of the day will not exercise his powers in the opposite direction, or that he will not fix a prohibitive rent, as the power is claimed now to do. Personally, I am inclined to think, owing to the expense, waste, and inconvenience of our land administration, that it may be worth considering whether it would not be better to sell the land, on the understanding that a property tax would be levied, and so obtain rent in another form. This would give fixity of tenure, at least. Of course provision would have to be made that too large areas should not be held by one man or body of men. This would almost do away with the necessity of a Lands Department, and has the merit of simplicity, although it has objectionable features. That a man should be allowed to reap what he sows, seems to have been the origin of the ancient customs, which, varying more or less in different places, may be described as tenant-right, and are recognised as such by the law in Great Britain and Ireland, and in principle by the land laws of the adjoining colonies and New Zealand. And as applied to this colony, tenant-right should mean, that the incoming should pay the outgoing tenant for all useful improvements; in effect, if the outgoer provides a house to live in, the incomer should pay for taking it from him. And in order to prevent abuse of the principle, in all cases of dispute the amount payable should be decided on the basis of their value as factors of production by a non-political board. If upon land in Great Britain, in a greater or less degree, ready to the tenant's hand, and so circumstanced that a greater or less immediate return may be obtained from it, tenant-right on these lines be reasonable and just, how much more should it exist here, where the tenant takes, or has taken, the unreclaimed bush land—actually the raw material—which he has to work up from its crude state before he can hope for a return. He cannot even expect to procure the bare necessaries of life from it for some time, and much of the work universally regarded as improvement—clearing and ringing, for instance—does not reach its producing power to any extent for several years. We all admit that it is bad policy to force people to crowd into the cities—to the neglect of the country lands—yet we offer a premium for that which we would or should prevent, and so harry and oppress those who would fain pursue their avocations in the country that they are forced to leave it. As the rabbits and the unemployed cost the country, in round numbers, some £400,000 a year, which means roughly over £1000 per day in actual money paid, to say nothing of the loss and damage done to the productive powers of the country, it would appear a good speculation—as this amounts to considerably more than half of the whole rental of the Crown lands—to grant very easy leases with such tenant-right as would induce people to employ the unemployed, and so use one trouble to destroy the other. In Victoria, in the mallee country, and New Zealand also, the Crown tenants were formerly driven away by harsh land laws, and the rabbits took possession, and laid waste the country and surrounding districts, and the Governments of those colonies are now glad to accept nominal rentals from tenants willing to re-occupy the land. In this country, where the interests of all are so blended, as, indeed, may well be the case in other places, injuries to individuals rebound upon the community, and the scare which the confiscation of improvements has given to capitalists, and consequent injury to individuals is exemplified by the following facts. Mr. Garrett, in a speech in the Assembly, reported in the Herald and Telegraph of the 5th instant, stated that, in going through the sworn reports of the appraisers, he found that by a small expenditure in clearing scrub and conserving water the carrying capacity of the country could in two years be doubled, and it would be for the interest of the Crown tenants to employ those unemployed, and the cloud which had arisen would soon be removed. But how can this be expected unless some security be given to those finding the money, some hope of profit afforded to those who cause the work to be done, and the risk, which is at present a very great one to working-men, that they may lose their wages by the insolvency of their employer removed. Tenant-right will do all this, and by conceding it the trustees of our public estate may do something, which in time will cause it to be forgotten that in their character of State landlords their conduct has been so grasping and mean as to have caused so serious a depreciation in the value of the property which they are bound in honor to try to improve for the benefit equally of every class, great and small, in the community. A Crown lease in this country should be the safest of all securities, but under existing circumstances who would be fool enough to advance money upon one? Bearing in mind that the land belongs to the people, and that if the land law be so altered as to favour specially any one class at the expense of another, it will have again to be amended until it deals fairly with all, and that one great trouble in this country is the fatal facility with which laws can be tinkered, so that men know not what to do for fear of change. May we not, in the light of the experience gained by ourselves, and of other parts of the world, put our shoulders to the wheel, and frame an Act of such a character that its inherent equities shall make it permanent.

Mr. Cope's paper was very well received, and at its termination, a vote of thanks to him was carried, on the motion of Captain Moseley, seconded by Mr. M'Dermott. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

THE RAILWAY ARBITRATION CASE.

The arbitration proceedings in the case of O'Rourke and M'Sharry v. the Commissioner for Railways, in which the plaintiffs claim £100,000 for work done and damages in connection with the construction of the Murrumburrah-Young railway, were resumed at Norwich-chambers yesterday, before Messrs. R. G. Watkins (for plaintiffs), W. T. Poole (for defendant), and W. H. Jennings (umpire). Mr. J. H. Want and Mr. R. E. O'Connor, instructed by Mr. John M'Laughlin, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. C. E. Pilcher and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the defence.

Richard Warren, railway contractor, stated he had been engaged upon railway construction for upwards of 40 years; he should consider that 16,000 yards of ballast obtained in one year and nine months, when 50,000 yards had to be obtained altogether for the contract in the following five months, was an inadequate rate of supply; it did not indicate good administration; he had always included in his price for gates, posts to hang them on; he would consider from the specification and drawings that on this contract such was the intention; no engineer he had ever heard of would order indiscriminately a uniform allowance upon all banks for subsidence; he had seen the brickwork, it was good fair work; he had seen the engineer's cottage, and had seen the alterations, consisting of a widened verandah and other items of trifling value; the inlet and outlet to the tank at Young he would consider should be paid for as inlets and outlets; division of watercourses, under which schedule rate, the district engineer had returned it as being a higher rate he would naturally accept of a contractor; he considered the excavation for station approaches to be properly returned as road approaches; he would not expect to receive the price paid for cuttings to embankments for such work; they were usually known and paid for as road approaches.

Henry Davis and Thomas Luck, foremen bricklayers, usually employed on Government works by contractors, gave evidence as to the general custom of sorting bricks, and pointing up the work. There was nothing unusual in these matters on this contract.

George Murdock deposed that he was a civil engineer, and had been engaged in railway construction for 30 years; for six months he was with the Government as district engineer upon the works from Yass to Cootamundra; he had inspected the line from Murrumburrah to Young twice; there was very little weathering in cutting 39, and nothing like the amount charged by the plaintiffs; with regard to subsidence, discretion would be necessary upon all banks; where the material was different, different allowances would be required; if a general order of two inches to the foot were given, he would like to see it in black and white; it was an incredible order; no contractor would dream of acting on it; the very way cuttings were worked would alter it; he could not believe any sane man would give such an order; with regard to the "crust" on the top of embankments, to a certain extent the top of banks would harden, but not sufficiently to withstand weather or support traffic; as a rule he preferred to cut off a little from the top surface than to fill up; banks must ultimately subside; it was better to allow them to do so for the Government, and no detriment to a contractor.

The case stands further adjourned.

SITE FOR NOXIOUS TRADES.

Yesterday, in the Legislative Council, Mr. Jacob, on behalf of Mr. Lackey, chairman of the Select Committee of the Council appointed to inquire into and report upon the question of a site for noxious trades, brought up the following report:—

That your committee have had before them the report of the Royal Commission of Noxious Trades appointed on the 20th November, 1882, together with the minutes of evidence taken before such commission, and have had referred to them the minutes of evidence taken before a select committee of this House appointed on the 16th September, 1886, to whom was referred for consideration and report the Noxious Trades Site Bill; but which, owing to the prorogation of Parliament, had not been reported to the House. That your committee have held several meetings, and have carefully considered the said report and minutes of evidence. That your committee have examined several witnesses who have had large experience in the occupations and industries which come under the designation of noxious trades, from whom they have elicited valuable information, and, after a careful consideration of the evidence, are of opinion that for the purpose of carrying out the different industries ordinarily regarded as noxious, two distinct sites are necessary. That the proposed site at Kurnell, owing to its great distance from the cattle saleyards at Homebush, as well as from the metropolis, would be wholly unsuitable either as a site for noxious trades, or the sale and slaughtering of cattle. That the expense of a sufficient supply of water to Kurnell from the present Nepean source would be £60,000. That a branch railway from the Illawarra line would cost nearly £50,000, exclusive of the cost of land, and a further expense of say £40,000 would be needed for the removal of the cattle saleyards from their present site to Kurnell, should that spot be selected for the re-erection of abattoirs, because it would be impracticable to convey stock from the present saleyards to Kurnell. That, for the purpose of slaughtering and preparing meat for the consumption of the city and suburbs, your committee deem that a site should be secured for abattoirs as near as possible to the present saleyards. That your committee are of opinion that the property known as Homebush would be admirably suited for such purposes. It is in the immediate neighbourhood of the saleyards, has large frontage to the Parramatta River, which could be made available for receiving coast-borne stock; also, affording facilities for conveying any extraneous matter to the deep waters of that river, besides which it would give water communication for the conveyance of meat from Parramatta downwards. Water could be also laid on from the present Nepean water mains at a trifling cost. That for the purpose of carrying on trades that may be regarded as noxious, your committee are of opinion that no better site has been offered for their consideration than the North Head of Botany Bay—the prevailing summer winds coming from the north-east, any offensive exhalations would be blown across the bay, their offensive character being thereby reduced. The neighbouring swamps would give a present supply of water which could be supplemented to any extent from the Botany dams; the present Botany dam is within 2 miles of this site, and water could be supplied at moderate cost. A road also could be made from the Military-road to this site at a trifling expense. That the evidence of witnesses skilled in modern improvements for slaughtering cattle has led your committee to the conclusion that cattle-slaughtering is not necessarily offensive, and that the abattoirs at Glebe Island, from defective construction and absence of suitable drainage and disposal of offal, are offensive and probably dangerous to health, and must be reconstructed or removed. Your committee think, therefore, that in the interests of the public health it would be desirable to remove them to the locality suggested. Independently of this, it may be stated that the necessity for driving cattle daily from the present sale yards to the abattoirs through populous suburbs is a great source of danger and inconvenience; that your committee would point out that Glebe Island, if sold as private property, would in a large measure, if not wholly, defray the cost of a site and re-erection of abattoirs; that, in view of the long delay that has occurred since this subject first occupied the attention of the Government, your committee would strongly urge this matter being dealt with with the least possible delay.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

FOUND DROWNED.

The City Coroner (Mr. H. Shiell, J.P.) held an inquest yesterday morning at the Soudan Hotel, George-street North, touching the death of a man named William Brown, whose body was found floating in the water in the vicinity of the Newcastle Steamship Company's wharf, Lime-street, on Wednesday morning last. William Edward Gelding, residing at No. 468, Kent-street, identified the body of the deceased as that of a single man named William Brown, about 40 years of age; he believed the deceased was a storeman, at Lower Portland, on the Hawkesbury River; he last saw him alive at about 10 o'clock on Monday, the 27th ultimo, at which hour he left him in a shop in George-street; the deceased then expressed his intention of going to the Patent Slip Wharf to ascertain when the next boat was to leave for the Hawkesbury River. John Walter, wharfinger at the Patent Slip Wharf, deposed that between 10.30 a.m. and 11 a.m. on Monday, the 27th ultimo, he saw the deceased on the Patent Slip Wharf; deceased was inquiring at what hour the steamer Amy was to leave for the Hawkesbury; he (deceased) was by no means sober at the time; the deceased left the wharf by himself. Constable John Wallace, of the Water Police force, gave evidence that at about 11 a.m. on Wednesday last he was called to the Newcastle Steamship Company's wharf, near the Patent Slip Wharf, to secure the body of the deceased; he found it in the water at the end of the wharf; a strand of rope was found round the neck of the deceased, and one end of the cord was made fast to the wharf; the man's right eye was protruding about two inches out of the orbit; he removed the body to the Circular Quay morgue; on examining the clothes, he found a silver watch and chain, an empty purse, and some scraps of paper; the body was fully dressed, and the clothes were in no way disarranged; he learned that the body had been tied by the neck to the wharf shortly before his arrival on the scene. Dr. Eichler deposed that he examined the body on Wednesday afternoon last; it presented the appearance of having been in the water about four or five days; an internal post-mortem examination of the body showed that the displacement of the eye and another injury to the head were caused before the man's death, and might have been brought about by contact with some sharp instrument; death was due to asphyxia from drowning. The jury returned a verdict of found drowned.

JAMES E. RICHARDSON, Custom-house, New Orleans, on oath says:—"In 1870 scrofulous ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck—at times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed, was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in 10 years. In 1880 I heard of the Cuticura Remedies, used them, and was perfectly cured." Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. Crawford.—[ADVT.]

THE HAWKESBURY RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

THE INQUEST.

The inquest on the body of William Henry Hankin, who died of injuries received in connection with the railway disaster at the Hawkesbury on the 21st ultimo, was resumed yesterday morning at the Darlinghurst Courthouse.

Mr. Rogers, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the Crown.

Mr. T. M. Williamson appeared on behalf of the fireman, John Pye.

Mr. F. J. M'Carthy appeared on behalf of Mrs. Wilson, widow of the driver, Thomas Wilson.

Mr. A. W. Nathan, of Messrs. Stephen, Laurence, and Jaques, appeared for the relatives of Mr. Rennie, deceased.

Mr. G. B Simpson, Q.C., instructed by Mr. Lumsdaine, of Messrs. John Dawson and Son, appeared for the Westinghouse Brake Company.

Dr. Sly appeared on behalf of the Commissioner for Railways.

Mr. D. Moore represented the Locomotive Engine-drivers' and Firemen's Association.

Mr. M'Carthy informed the Coroner that a question having arisen as to the identity of driver Wilson's handwriting in one of the two reports furnished by the Railway Department, he had shown it to Wilson's father-in-law, who knew his writing thoroughly, and who stated that the report accounting for the delay in the journey to Sydney on the Monday night was not in Wilson's writing—the signature was Wilson's.

John Barrie, a storekeeper, residing at Cowley's Creek, on the Illawarra line, deposed that he was in the runaway train with his wife and three children; he was in the second carriage from the engine as the train got to Peat's Ferry; that was the last carriage as the train started from Sydney; when they left Hornsby he noticed at the time that the driver started without trying his air, and wondered why he did so; about No. 2 tunnel, after they began the descent to Peat's Ferry, he felt a checking, apparently coming from the engine; he was not then aware but that the train was under control; as they approached No. 3 tunnel he became satisfied that the driver had lost control of the train; it seemed to him that the hand-brake was being applied to the carriage he was in; he thought so because there was no spasmodic catching, but the brake seemed to tighten gradually; he was accustomed to the action of the Westinghouse brake by having noticed it while travelling; he felt that there was a brake on the carriage all the way down the hill; while he was standing on the platform at Hornsby he said to the guard that he thought the driver was short of steam, but, apparently, he was blowing off steam; the guard replied that the driver had plenty of steam; the witness was hurt in the collision; also two of his children.

To the foreman: In his opinion the cause of the delay between Sydney and Hornsby was that the road was too heavy for the engine.

To the Coroner: At Beecroft the guard said, in reply to some remarks, that the driver had no right to leave Sydney with a train heavier than he was able to draw.

To Dr. Sly: When the train ran back to get over the incline after passing Hornsby it was stopped from the engine.

David Kirkcaldie, assistant traffic-manager, called by Dr. Sly, deposed that he examined the wrecked train about 6.30 on the Tuesday night, at the same time as Mr. Loughry; the four carriages at the rear of the train had no brake-blocks, and therefore no taps on the main air-pipe; the next vehicle was an American car, the tap on the rear end of which was shut; from that point to the front of the second vehicle on the train (an American car) all the taps were open, but the brake blocks were all hanging loose throughout the train; from the manner in which the first vehicle (the Redfern carriage) had telescoped into the American car, and also from the position of the front of the Redfern carriage upon the remains of an ordinary goods-truck it was impossible to see any other taps on the Redfern carriage that night; when he saw the couplings they were complete between the second and third carriages; the American car was lying over almost on its side, and the first carriage telescoped about 20 feet inside of it; they uncoupled some of the carriages to bring the passengers back to Sydney; they uncoupled between the third and fourth carriages; they could not uncouple the third, because the screw coupling was drawn too tight by the capsizing of the next one; when the air pipe was uncoupled no air escaped; this showed that there was no air in the reservoirs on the carriages; otherwise the brakes must have gone hard on when the connection was broken by the telescoping; the brake had not been working from some cause or other; the facts that the brakes were off and that no air escaped from the air tap when they uncoupled, showed that there was no air in the reservoirs; when the guard let the air out of the brake after passing Hornsby it showed that there was then air in the cylinder; he could not account for the reservoirs being empty at Peat's Ferry; there was only one theory that the air must have been exhausted when going down the bank; this meant so much exhausted as to have no effect; the air could become exhausted by a too frequent use of the driver's brake-valve, while he was endeavouring to check the speed of the train rather than to stop it; he had seen experiments made on an engine with the Westinghouse brake; a test was made with the donkey going at full speed and with six manipulations of the driver's brake-valve the pressure of air was reduced from 88lb. to 40lb. in seven and a-half minutes; a further test was made with the donkey shut off, and in two minutes the pressure was reduced from 64lb. to 20lb. by six manipulations of the valve; at the 20lb. pressure brake would be inoperative; it would put the brake on the wheels, but would not hold it; it would not hold a train running away down an incline; he saw the positions of the first and second carriages, but did not see the tap now produced; he had heard the evidence as to the condition in which it was found; if it had been open before the collision, it could not have been opened afterwards; if the connection had not been complete between the carriages 2 and 3 on leaving Hornsby, and there was any air in the reservoirs, the brakes would have gone on; if anyone walked through between those two carriages at Peat's Ferry after the accident any time the same afternoon, the brakes on carriages 4 and 5 must of necessity have gone on, if there was any air in the reservoir; the fact that the train got away all right from Hornsby showed that the air connections must have been complete between the second and third carriages; the exact weight of the five carriages without brake-blocks was 26 tons 12cwt. without the passengers; the whole train weighed 150 tons 3cwt.; the weight of the portion of the train under brake-power was 123 tons 7cwt.; there were 20 wheels without brake-power and 42 under brake-power.

To Mr. Williamson: He had taken a deal of interest in this case; he had no interest one way or the other in the result of the inquiry as to whether the department was mulct in damages, he was desirous simply of eliciting the truth; he did not profess to be an expert in the use of the Westinghouse brake; he did not go to Mr. Moore during the hearing of the case to get instruction in the use of the brake; he would not swear that the tap produced was not shut when the train left Sydney; it could not have been forced open after the accident; if it was true that the air went through to the last vehicle before the train left Sydney the tap could not possibly have been shut; he had heard it sworn that the first two carriages were not examined; he heard it sworn that only the first seven were tried before the other two went on; he also heard it sworn that the air passed through all the nine vehicles; the examiner, Werrick, might have said that he was unable to say whether the whole of the brake-power was in order that morning; the carriage under which the tap was found closed was the second last of the seven vehicles; he had no hesitation in saying, from what he saw at half-past 6, that the statement of Rohan relative to the connection between the second and third carriages was not true; it was not possible for it to have been true; he would swear that it was absolutely incorrect; that, as Mr. Shellshear had stated, the position of the carriages was such that the tap could not have been interfered with by the collision; the fact that the guard had to release the brake on one of the carriages going up an incline was not evidence that the air was not complete throughout the train; if driver Sheehan had sworn it was, he would differ from him; he had had experience in the working of the Westinghouse brake on these railways, and on the railways in Scotland before he came here; he became thoroughly acquainted with the theory of the brake, and then watched it in use on all parts of the train; he had not been on an engine, but he was satisfied that he understood the action of the brake; he had used the brake for his own satisfaction; the brake being hard on going up a hill would show that there was air in the cylinders; it would indicate nothing else; he could not show any evidence on which to base his theory that the driver exhausted his air, but it was the only possible theory; he had heard Pye's evidence that when the driver opened the valve the gauge went from 75lb. to zero; if there was air in the reservoirs under the carriages which supplied the brakes, and 75lbs. in the main reservoir, the brakes would go hard on; if the driver had exhausted the air in the reservoirs under the carriages till they had not enough air to apply the brake; the 75lbs. pressure in the main pipe might have indicated that the driver had opened the communication between the main reservoir and the carriage reservoirs for the purpose of re-charging the latter; so that 75lbs in the pipe did not at all mean the same pressure in the reservoirs; there might be 75lbs. pressure in the pipe and only sufficient in the reservoirs to put the brakes on; the auxiliary reservoirs were re-charged from the main reservoir, but the brakes would be off; if the pressure was reduced 25lb. by applying the air-brake on the incline to Peat's Ferry, it would not be possible to re-charge the carriage reservoirs, because the brakes would be hard on; the brakes must be released before the reservoirs could be re-charged; with 90lb. of pressure, as stated by Pye, and the driver having to ease the steam to the donkey lest the pipes should burst, it would show that there was more air than was necessary if it was properly used; one application of the brake would be sufficient to stop the train on the incline, but it was not the object to stop it; the object was to steady the train; a pressure of 90lb. at the top of the hill should have taken the train down if properly used, and if the connections were complete; the donkey could supply air as fast as it was required, but it could not supply air as fast as it might be used; if the fireman had sworn that the driver had 90lb. pressure going down the incline, and 75lb. within a mile of Peat's Ferry; he could not say whether or not the driver had used his air injudiciously, but, although he might have 75lb. pressure in his main-pipe, it did not by any means follow that he would have even 20lb. in the reservoirs.

At this stage the inquest was adjourned to Monday morning.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, JULY 8.

In Chambers.—(Before Mr. Justice INNES.)

MILLS V. LOFTUS.

Mr. Heydon was for the plaintiff; there was no appearance of defendant. The application was one under the Absent Debtors' Act for the examination of garnishees under a writ of foreign attachment and for an order for sale or attachment of shares belonging to the defendant, viz., 550 shares in the New South Wales Pyrites Patents Company, and 3600 shares in the Parnell Pyrites Patents Company. It appears that Lord A. Loftus in November, 1885, gave three promissory notes to the plaintiff, payable at four, six, and six months, the total amount being £1684. These were dishonoured, and plaintiff now claimed the shares.

His HONOR said that he should make the order under the 9th section of the Absent Debtors' Act, that the shares be held from the present time for the purpose of making satisfaction to the plaintiff in this judgment debt. At the same time he gave the plaintiff liberty to come in, if he were so advised, to make a further application for the same. There ought to be communication with the defendant as to what had been done, to give him an opportunity of being heard with regard to the matter.

Mr. Heydon: The defendant knows what it is about. This application is in pursuance of an arrangement that has been made. There has been some correspondence about the matter.

His HONOR said that the plaintiff had waited over twelve months for what was due to him. He would allow the shares to be attached, the costs of the application to be costs in the case.

RE HENRY BORSBOOM.

Mr. David Buchanan applied, on behalf of Henry Borsboom, who is now in prison awaiting his trial on a charge of murdering his wife, with whom he had lived at a coffee palace in Castlereagh-street, for bail, taking the ground that the prosecutor required his liberty in order to prepare his defence. The affidavits of James Henry Bright and Ada Coffee were read in support of the application, the witnesses stating that they had known the prisoner, and that he had always treated his wife with kindness.

The Crown Solicitor, Mr. Williams, who appeared for the Crown, left the matter in his Honor's hands.

His HONOR said he would look at the depositions, and let Mr. Roberts, solicitor for the accused, know his decision in a few days.

THE GOULBURN-STREET SHOOTING CASE.

THE ACCUSED COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Jessie Stringer was charged on Thursday at the Central Police Court with shooting at Alfred George Board, with intent to do him grievously bodily harm. Mr. W. Roberts, sen., and Mr. Oliver appeared for the prosecutor: and Mr. Field, instructed by Mr. Shaw, for the defence. The arresting constable, W. J. West, deposed that prisoner said "I never fired a shot at all; I had no revolver; it is all jealousy." But she afterwards said "I fired two shots; the revolver was given me by my daughter's husband for protection; I fired in the air to frighten him, and there was nothing but powder in the revolver." On the premises at the corner of Goulburn and Brisbane streets, Detective Keatinge had found bullets and powder, and marks of firing having taken place.

Alfred George Board, a saddler and harness maker, living at 98, Elizabeth-street, Waterloo, said that he was one of the sons of Gregory Board, and that the prisoner was his father's housekeeper. His father was 80 years old and had been getting feeble and childish ever since he was thrown from his gig two years ago. He was a man who owned extensive property. Only his father and the prisoner lived in the house in Brisbane-street. He (witness) was accustomed to visit his father on Sunday, when the gates were always locked. Last Sunday he went, and, by his father's permission, got over the bottom gate. His father asked prisoner for the key of the gate, but she refused, and said she would not let a convict's son in. He got over the gate into the back yard. The prisoner had often seen him there before, and knew him as the son of Gregory Board. It was against her will he ever entered the place. On Sunday, after getting into the yard, the prisoner went towards him to within 2 feet or 3 feet, and, shaking her fist at him, said: "I'll do for you." She then went into the house, and in about two minutes came out again. At the time witness was talking to his father opposite the gate over which he had climbed. She pointed a pistol to his face and said, "I could shoot you where you stand." He said, "Father, do you see that?" and the old man replied, "Oh, take no notice of her; she's mad." Witness then walked back to the garden gate, 12 or 13 yards away, with the object of getting a spade. Not finding one, he went towards the stable, and saw the prisoner standing near the gate. He was in the act of turning round when he heard a shot fired by the prisoner. He turned and looked at her, and saw the revolver pointed straight at him, and her arm upraised and extended. He kept his eye on her, when she fired again with the weapon levelled directly at him, and he heard the bullet whizz past his head. He moved away a few feet, as he was afraid to go towards the prisoner. She then fired a third time, exclaiming, "I'll shoot you." Since that time he had gone with Detective Keatinge and had seen the marks on the wall. The bullets which passed his head would have struck about that spot. The revolver he thought was four-barrelled, and was an old-fashioned one. After the third shot he went to his father in the back yard, and afterwards went through the house to the front gate, followed by the prisoner, who held the revolver towards him. He said to his father, "It is a shame you allow such things on a Sunday." Soon after this he saw Constable Jones, and he beckoned to him. The constable knocked at the gate, and his father went to the door. Afterwards he saw the prisoner, his father, and the constable together, when the prisoner said she never had a revolver. Witness said, "Ask my father," and his father replied that she had a revolver. At this his father was taken ill and staggered and fell, and prisoner then went to the kitchen.

In reply to Mr. Field, witness said that prisoner had been living with his father six years. He and his brothers expected money under his father's will, in which they were interested. He did not know that the prisoner had interfered with the will. He did want to get her out of the house, on account of the influence she had over his father, whom she could lead as she liked. The prisoner had not been in the house since her arrest. He had never threatened the prisoner with violence, nor used abusive words to her. Since prisoner's arrest his father's daughter had been living with him.

The case was continued yesterday afternoon:—

Alfred Joseph Board, recalled, testified that he had never seen Constable Lewis before, and did not know him; had not spoken to him with regard to this matter; had not told him that the prisoner fired the revolver in the air.

Cross-examined by Mr. Roberts: At the time the revolver was discharged, witness's father was in the back garden; his father could not have seen her fire the revolver; there was a well connected with his father's premises, which was, however, not used for any purpose; he had looked into the well this morning; it appeared to contain bottles and all kinds of refuse matter, but not a great quantity of water; two men were pumping the water out of the well at the time he saw it.

Daniel Kiely, 24, sworn, testified that he knew the well referred to, and was engaged that morning in pumping the water out of the well, and after having done so there were bottles and refuse matter there; witness got a revolver, which was dirty at the time it was found; he gave the revolver to Reid; the revolver produced was the same as that found in the well; it was in the same condition as when found in the well except that it was a little cleaner.

James Watt, laundryman, but at one time a clothes-finisher, on being sworn, testified that he had been "in the service a bit;" he meant by that a few years; he had been in the colonial and home service, viz., the 42nd Highlanders and the Naval Brigade in this colony; on Sunday last a shot attracted his attention; it appeared to come from a revolver; the ball seemed to be stopped at once when it came from the revolver; the second and third shots were distinct; he could hear those shots properly; at the time he heard them he was at the door of his house, in Brisbane-street, opposite Mr. Board's residence; witness had some knowledge of firearms; he meant a little bit, not much; in his opinion it was impossible to say at 40 or 50 yards whether a revolver was discharged with ball or blank cartridge; he heard three shots fired distinctly, but could not say in what direction; the firing commenced about half-past 11 and finished about 20 minutes before noon; he saw the prosecutor leave the premises of Mr. Board, sen., and he was followed down the avenue; a policeman was standing in Brisbane-street, and Board, jun., beckoned to him to come up as quickly as possible; the constable went up, and remained in the house for about 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour; as soon as the accused saw the policeman she ran as quickly as possible back, and entered the house.

By Mr. Field: The accused certainly walked very quickly, neither running nor walking, and more like running than walking: Mr. James Marshall, of the Paddington Brewery, was the first one to come to him to ask him to give evidence, as he was aware that he (witness) had seen it all.

Thomas Brown, a resident of Brisbane-street, also deposed to having heard the report of three pistol shots at the place and at the time above alluded to.

By Mr. Field: He had been subpoenaed by Mr. Oliver to attend and give evidence; he was sure that his daughter was not in the employ of Mr. Marshall.

Stockdale Kerr, assistant at Messrs. J. and J. J. Marshall's Paddington Brewery, stated that he knew the premises of Mr. Gregory Board, sen., and that the well before alluded to was quite near to the back door, about 20 yards off; on Sunday last he and the prosecutor went to the Darlinghurst lockup to make a complaint; whilst there he believed he saw Senior-constable Lewis; he had subsequently seen him at the No. 2 Police Station, where they also went; at any rate, they saw him at one or other of those stations; at no time did Board say to the constable, nor in his presence, that the accused had said that she fired into the air for the purpose of frightening the prosecutor; this he would most positively swear to.

By Mr. Field: It was about noon on Sunday that he went to Darlinghurst station; Mrs. James Marshall was Mr Gregory Board's daughter; he had first met Mr. Board on the Sunday at Mr. J. Marshall's house, where he had occasion to go; he (Mr. Board) was then in a great state of excitement, talking over the matter; as a matter of fact, until a few minutes previously, while standing in the court he did not know that Mr. Roberts intended to call him as a witness; his only reason for being present was that he knew Mr. Board, sen., very well, and took an interest in the case.

Constable William Jones deposed to having seen the prosecutor, at about 11.30 a.m. last Sunday near his father's gate, about 50 yards off; upon being beckoned to he went over to him; they opened the front gate, went on to the verandah, and knocked at a door, which was opened by the prosecutor's father; the prisoner was in the kitchen, where she appeared to be preparing dinner; he stated to Mr. Board that his son had complained of having been fired at by the prisoner with a revolver; the accused refused to answer at first when asked with respect to the charge, but subsequently she denied having had a revolver, and stated that she had not fired; Mr. Board was standing close by at the time, and for the third time she denied having had the pistol; the prosecutor, in her hearing, said, "Yes you had," and she replied, "Don't you tell lies;" the prosecutor then turned round to his father and said, "Did'nt she have a revolver, father?" he remained silent for a while, and then said "Yes," to which the prisoner made no rejoinder; the witness again asked the old gentleman if she did have a revolver, and he said that he didn't know; he was very weak and bad, as though he was about to have a fit, and he caught hold of a barrel for support; he (the witness) was about to arrest the prisoner, who was present, but at the request of the prosecutor he refrained, owing to the condition of his father.

This concluded the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Buchanan said that he considered that a very clear prima facie case had been made out.

For the defence, Senior-constable Edward Charles Lewis, of the Metropolitan Police Force, was called. He stated that on Sunday last the prosecutor came to No. 2 Police Station, accompanied by the witness Mr. Reed, and asked for the name of the constable who was on duty at Brisbane and Goulburn streets, as he wanted to see him in connection with a shooting case which had occurred that morning; he added, "I went to go to my father's house this morning, and I could not get in; he also said that he spoke to his father, who told him that he could come in, and that he then got over a gate, upon which "the woman came out on to the verandah with a revolver in her hand and refused to let me go in;" he further stated that she then put her hand up in the air and fired the pistol off, and that he then went towards her, whereupon "she turned round and fired twice more." The witness said, "Why, if the constable knew all this, did he not arrest her?" and in reply to a question, the prosecutor stated that the accused had not fired at him; he seemed to be treating the matter lightly.

Stockdale Reed, recalled, deposed that the prosecutor had not done anything like that which the last witness had stated, and also that he had not signified that the accused fired the revolver up into the air; the questions and answers which had been deposed to had never taken place; the prosecutor was neither laughing nor smiling; on the contrary he was shaking with nervousness and excitement.

The prosecutor, upon his former oath, also denied having made the statement which had been attributed to him in connection with the firing of the shots. He had not stated that the accused did not fire at him

The prisoner, who declined to make any statement, was committed to take her trial at the ensuing Court of Quarter Sessions. Bail was allowed, herself in £200, with two approved sureties of £100 each.

POLICE.

Mr. Buchanan, S.M., dealt with a large number of cases at the CENTRAL POLICE COURT yesterday. Gerald Doyle, a solicitor, was, at his own request, committed for trial upon a charge of having illegally pawned a violoncello, valued at £12, the property of Archie Barry. John Roach was sent to gaol for three months for being without lawful means of support. Albert Martin, for riotous conduct, was fined £1, with the option of seven days' imprisonment. John Allen, 15, in connection with a similar charge, was sent to the cells until the rising of the Court. Catherine Nicholls was sentenced to three months' hard labour for vagrancy. John Reed, for having stolen a piece of machinery from the pottery yard of M. J. Conlon, at the Glebe, was sent to gaol for three months. A publican's prohibition order for 12 months was granted against one Joseph Smith. Mr. Yates, D.S.M., sat in the Summons Division.

Mr. J. M. Marsh, S.M., presided in the Charge Division of the WATER POLICE COURT. James O'Shea, 15, no occupation, charged with being under the age of 16 years and found wandering about the streets in the company of reputed thieves, was ordered to be sent to the Vernon. Emily Wright, 37, no occupation, was fined 60s., or in default two months' gaol, for using obscene language in Oxford-street. Joseph Redmond, 27, fireman, was fined 10s., or four days' gaol, for offending against decency in Charlotte-place. For assaulting Constable Quealy, by striking and kicking him, whilst he was in the execution of his duty, the prisoner was further mulcted in a penalty of £5; in default, two months' gaol. Georgina Bibden was fined 60s., or two months' gaol, for using indecent language in George-street. She was also fined for drunkenness. George Rodgers, 35, labourer, was fined 60s., or two months' gaol, for using obscene language in Forbes-street. For a similar offence in Woolloomooloo-street, Elsie May, 24, no occupation, was ordered to forfeit the sum of 40s.; in default, to be imprisoned for 14 days. Frederick Haines, on remand, was charged with breaking and entering the dwelling-house of William H. East, a compositor, residing in Selwyn-street, Moore Park, and stealing therefrom a silver watch and chain, two opera glasses, a gold brooch, and other articles, valued at about £14. Prosecutor deposed that he left his residence on the night of the 16th June, and on his return at about quarter-past 9 o'clock he found that two of the bedrooms in the house had been thoroughly ransacked, and the articles enumerated above had been stolen therefrom. On finding that his premises had been broken open, East gave information to the police, and likewise supplied the authorities with a description of the articles that had been stolen. The matter was put into the hands of Detectives Roche and Greaves, and the prisoner, who bears a bad character, and has already been in gaol for robbing a dwelling-house, was speedily arrested. It was proved that he had pawned one of the articles at a shop in Botany-street, and it was also shown that he had attempted to pawn the rest of the goods at different establishments in the city. The prisoner is believed to be one of a gang of men who entered a house in Jeffrey-street, North Shore, recently. The police have this matter in hand also; and Haines, who declared that he was innocent of the crime, was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions. Mr. A. M. Fisher, D.S.M., presided in the Summons Division. Ellen O'Grady, of 113, Palmer-street, Woolloomooloo, charged with selling adulterated milk, was fined £5 and 15s. 6d. costs, or one month's gaol. William Bromly, dairyman, of Liverpool-street, Woolloomooloo, was fined £5, with costs 15s. 6d., or one month to gaol, for selling adulterated milk. Robert Quinton, of Devonshire-street, was also fined £5, with costs, 15s. 6d., or one month's imprisonment, for selling milk that had been adulterated. Quinton was further fined £3, with costs 5s., or one month to gaol, for allowing filth to remain on certain land situated in Devonshire-street. George Thompson, of Erskine-street, was mulcted in a penalty of £2, with costs 5s., or in default 14 days' gaol, for selling milk without having had his name and place of business duly registered, according to the provisions of the Act.

Mr. G. W. F. Addison, S.M., dealt with the business in the BALMAIN POLICE COURT. Charles Gallagher, a collector for Messrs. Oatley and Cahill, auctioneers, was charged with having embezzled the sum of £3 15s., the moneys of his employers. The accused was found guilty and was sentenced to be imprisoned for one month. William Davis, for having assaulted John Barker, was mulcted in a penalty of £3, with the alternative of one month's imprisonment.

Mr. Leopold Yates, D.S.M., presided at the NEWTOWN POLICE COURT. William Battan, 26, labourer, was charged with committing an indecent assault upon Ellen Harris, a girl of the age of 15. Mr. Williamson appeared for the accused. The alleged offence took place on the evening of the 1st July, at the corner of Mary and Edith streets, St. Peters. The prosecutrix, who works at a boot factory, was returning to her home at the time. After hearing the evidence, Mr. Williamson contended that the case of indecent assault could not be maintained, and, the magistrate also taking this view of the case, the charge was withdrawn, and one of aggravated assault substituted, to which accused also pleaded not guilty, and the line of defence taken was that of mistaken identity. The Bench found the prisoner guilty and sentenced him to six months' imprisonment. Mr. Williamson gave notice to go for a prohibition, and on his application bail was fixed at £80, and two sureties of £40. Albert Thompson, 50, clerk, was charged with indecently assaulting a boy named Charles Ernest Chapman. After hearing the evidence, the magistrate committed the prisoner for trial at the next Quarter Sessions. James Chard, 72, labourer, was fined 20s., or seven days, for using obscene language; also 10s. for being drunk and disorderly. Patrick M'Grath, 35, baker, for using obscene language, was fined £3, or two months; also 10s. for being drunk. Sarah Russell, 30, married, was fined £5, or three months, for using obscene language.

Messrs. R. Harper and G. Wickham, J.'s P., presided at the PARRAMATTA POLICE COURT. John Hastie, charged with travelling in a railway carriage from Eveleigh to Clyde without having paid his fare, was fined 40s., or in default 48 hours' imprisonment.

ENGLISH GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, MAY 27.

"It had been so with us, had we been there," to quote the King in "Hamlet," and had I remained in Paris I should in all probability have gone to see "Mignon" at the Opera Comique. The theatre was a favourite house of mine, and I think "Mignon" a delightful opera. I was among the audience a few nights before the fire, and I reach home to read of the terrible conflagration. It is almost a certainty that nearly sixty people have lost their lives. The Opera Comique was a handsome house, and its history will always be associated with the musical triumphs of Auber. The calamity will once more draw attention to the natural risks that belong to theatres. Captain Shaw, of the London Fire Brigade, calculates that every theatre is destroyed by fire three times in a century, which should be ample reason for the most special precautions. Loss of life on these occasions invariably arises from the difficulties of exit. The only really safe theatre is one that is open on all sides and stands alone, its exits untrammelled by adjacent or surrounding property. I know no such theatre in England, and the only example of the kind which I have seen is the amphitheatre at Verona, in Italy; but it was built some years B.C. In the dark ages, when the Christian martyrs were given to the wild beasts, it held from 80,000 to 40,000 people. "Buffalo Bill's" Theatre at the American Exhibition holds nearly as many, and with children proves to be almost as exciting as were the classic exhibitions at Verona and Rome in the cruel eyes of the classic barbarians who watched the death throes of Christians and criminals in the arena.

The weather has not been all that one could desire in Paris; but London I find has kept up its supremacy for grey clouds and chilling winds. A month ago when I left it for the sunny skies of Italy the metropolis was a city of shivering mortals, who thought the spring had come because the crocuses and hyacinths were in bloom and the trees in bud. To-day the chestnuts are nearly in flower, and the elms are almost in full leaf, but a cold wind blows through them, and the rain drips from their branches. Derby Day was not exactly signalised by snow or sleet. There was no downpour indeed of any kind; nor was there any sun. The clouds threatened to drench racers and spectators, but "held up." The course itself was in excellent condition, and the spectators were as numerous as ever. The country looked green and lovely, though the air was chill, and viewed from the windows of a close carriage, the local scenery was superb. There were a no less number of coaches on the road than usual. Lord Macclesfield and Mr. George Lane Fox, two famous whips, were, however, conspicuous by their absence. Lord Londesborough was, however, in evidence with his customary coach-load of actors and friends. His sporting colleague, Lord Shrewsbury, was also to the fore with a brilliant party of ladies and gentlemen; but the chief coaches on the road were chartered by Americans, who started from the Grand, the Metropole, the Golden Cross, and other hotels, and the American Exchange also contributed its quota to the parade of gaily equipped drags. The road had, nevertheless, none of the bright gaiety that it wears on a warm sunny Derby Day, when the men don white dustcoats, and the ladies wear their jauntiest of sunny attire. This year overcoats for gentlemen and wraps for ladies were in vogue. Many thousands of people went to the course by train. It may afford losers a little consolation to learn, on the authority of experts, that the result of the running of the winning horse, and those in the first four, is entirely in accord with "public form."

As London, not Paris, now appears to set the fashions, my lady readers will be interested to learn that a previous forecast in these columns as to the popular colour is being fulfilled in the highest quarters. There is a rivalry between pale yellow and pale mauve. Modistes and manufacturers are pushing the latter shade for gowns and trimmings, but yellow, so far, carries the day, and it is of many shades. At the Jubilee Drawing-room last week, yellow was decidedly in the ascendant. The bouquets were more costly, if not more beautiful, than have been seen at any previous function. Perhaps this was a delicate compliment to her Majesty, the idea being to mark this first fashionable function of the Jubilee year. An ingenious person has calculated on reliable data that the flowers at this drawing-room cost over £5000, and that from £3000 to £4000 is usually spent, while the dresses on these high days of courtly ceremony do not cost less than £45,000. When out-at-elbows critics inveigh against the extravagances of the upper classes, it is worth while to remember that the frequent distribution of sums of money like these are of importance to the working population. The use of flowers for decorative purposes generally is extending with every season. If you give a dinner party the centre of the table must be a bank of flowers; if you give a dance, your staircases must be lined with costly blooms.

Both the Academy and the Grosvenor have a better collection of pictures than has been seen within their walls for years. Many painters who have been hitherto content with portraits and pot boilers, have put their hearts and brushes into subject pictures. There is a far higher average of genius and merit in the English exhibitions this year than is to be found in the Paris Salon. What struck me most as deserving of praise in the French exhibition was the excellence of the portraits. Always understanding that art was at the lowest ebb in modern Italy, I was agreeably astonished to find at Venice an exhibition of current art work quite equal to the exhibitions of both London and Paris.

The actors and managers of the United Kingdom have prepared a Jubilee address to her Majesty. It is being engraved on vellum. The signatures will fill many accompanying sheets of parchment. "With the remainder of your subjects," runs the concluding sentence of the address, "we rejoice at the blessings which have followed in your footsteps; and, as actors, we are proud to be the Abstract and Brief Chronicles of your time." This phrase is not well applied to the profession of these days, the press having long ago relieved the stage of all pretence to the historic position of the past, when it was a mirror of manners and customs, an academy of elocution, and an arbiter of fashion. But it is always a good thing to get in a Shakesperian quotation when the theatre is concerned. Mr. Henry Irving is to represent the signatories of the address in its presentation to the Queen, and it is already reported that he is to be knighted on the occasion. As he refused this honour during Mr. Gladstone's Premiership some years ago, it is hardly likely that he will accept it now. So long as he is a working actor, he prefers to be on a social level with his colleagues and contemporaries. But now he is up to his eyes in "the labour he delights in." The continual changes of programme prior to his American tour represent to him and his company a continual round of rehearsals. He is also preparing a new version of "Werner," to be enacted next week for the benefit of Dr. Westland Marston, poet and dramatist. "Werner" has not been played in my time. No one has seen it since Macready rejoiced in his impersonation of the fateful and gloomy hero. Mr. Irving (with the literary aid of Mr. Frank Marshall) has put into action scenes which in the Macready play were only spoken of. The murder, for example, in the Irving play will be enacted on the stage, the incidents of this part of the tragedy being hurried along with fine dramatic effect from the subterranean passage to the bedroom and from the bedroom to the garden. The scenery and dresses are being produced with elaborate care, though the piece will only be seen once in England (this year, at all events) for the benefit of Dr. Marston. Punch refers in a regretful way to the necessity of this benefit performance. It is no doubt humiliating that so many men of letters should, in their declining years, become the objects of charity. Dr. Marston has written poems that will live. He is a scholar and a gentleman, and had he been an American would have been found an official post. Unless an English author is a barrister, his opportunities in official life are almost nil, and the Government fund for rewarding men who have served the State is small, and of late years has been widely used outside the pale of literature and art. As a dramatist Dr. Marston is best known by "The Patrician's Daughter," "Strathmore," and "Life for Life." Apart from their merits as plays they contain noble lines and much true poetry; but the authors of "Harbour Lights," "The Silver King," "The World," and other modern productions, which are little better than stage carpenters' pieces, have made more money in a month's fees than probably Dr. Marston has received from any half dozen of his works all his life. Posterity will take care of his fame, but while the grass grows the steed starves, and the certainty of popular success in this life is after all a better thing for the author than a barren fame when he is dead. Most men would rather be George Sims or Henry Pettitt, with plenty of money, than Dr. Marston, with his poetic fame and his empty pockets.

We live in curious days. Royalty was never more active in its varied duties. The Prince of Wales is heard of everywhere. He appears to prosecute his social duties morning, noon, and night. His interest in theatrical debutantes, however, is at the moment a leading topic of conversation in artistic and Bohemian circles. Mrs. Brown Potter, the American society actress, having failed to draw at the Haymarket (the theatre is closed), the Prince of Wales, who superintended her rehearsals, has encouraged her to try her fortune at the Society. His Royal Highness has openly intervened in the lady's interest. There is, consequently, no reason why the affair should not be openly discussed. The Prince himself initiated the business with Mr. Edwardes, the lessee of the Gaiety. Mr. Edwardes is to be held free of loss, and with the prospect of profit galore in case the lady is successful. The leading Americans in London, and certain of the English Court, have subscribed for a number of boxes and stalls for the Brown-Potter season. The play which Mrs. Potter has selected for production is "Mdlle. de Bressier," by the French author, Delpit. Mr. Irving had already secured the English rights of the piece, and Mrs. Potter the American rights. She intended to produce it in the States after her expected triumph at the Haymarket. Mr. Irving promptly gave up his rights to the American lady, and engaged Mr. Hermann Merivale to adapt the piece for England. Meanwhile cynics speak of the Haymarket as "Potter's Field." Mr. Smalley, the London editor of the New York Tribune, had pledged his reputation in prognostications of Mrs. Potter's success, and had filled columns of his paper with glowing descriptions of her powers. The Prince and Princess of Wales went to see her. Fashionable London tried to uphold her; but there is, after all, only one arbiter in London as elsewhere—the public. Unless you can satisfy the pit and gallery, you may beat your royal drums and trumpets in vain. The lady was handicapped in "Man and Wife," the heroine of which is not interesting, while the motive of the story is out of date. It is possible that as Mademoiselle de Bressier Mrs. Brown Potter may reverse the critical judgment of the town, which at present is—"a pretty woman, but can't act." This has been said of Mrs. Langtry; but whether she can act or not, she can "draw." From the first day of her artistic novitiate, she always attracted large audiences. Mr. Brown Potter, the husband of the lady for whom so much is being done to force her into a position of theatrical rank, is variously stated to be rich and poor. H.R.H. believes he is aiding a lady in a laudable effort to restore the fallen fortunes of her husband; but more than one American has informed me that Mr. Potter is "well off," if not wealthy. Anyhow, he is known to be a gentleman of spotless honour, and the same can be truly said for his wife, who is of good family, and mixes with the best society in America, as she does in Europe.

A budget of miscellaneous items may fittingly close this letter. "Buffalo Bill" is writing his life and adventures for the Globe. A committee of newspaper proprietors have drafted their proposed Libel Bill. It will presently come before Parliament. Mr. Matthew Arnold has thought fit to attack the grammar of General Grant's Memoirs. Mr. Clemens (Mark Twain) has in return assaulted the grammar of Matthew Arnold. Clemens is a shareholder in Grant's book, and has made a fortune out of his enterprise; not that he wanted one, having married a rich wife, and made quite as much as he can spend from the sale of his own works. Mr. Alma Tadema, for an R.A., is a good deal be-puffed. He has decorated a piano for a New York music room; it is now on view. A few years ago he designed a piano-case for himself, and that was paragraphed throughout the entire Anglo-American press. A Wagner concert this week has been crowded with enthusiastic admirers, and "Lohengrin" has been produced at Drury Lane, with great success. A special gathering of the "United Richmond Wagner Society" (London branch) will take place shortly, at which the first act of "Dar Rheingold" will be given. Mackenzie's "Rose of Sharon" will be in the programme of the Bristol musical festival. D'Oyley Cartes English Opera Company in Berlin have given before the Court a concert of English music which delighted both royalties and critics. The Prince of Wales entertained the members of the Jockey Club at Marlborough House on the Derby night. Neither the owner of the winner nor the owner of the second horse was present. On a similar occasion last year the Duke of Westminster was congratulated upon owning the grandest and best horse of the century. Unfortunately Ormonde has drifted into a bad way since then, and is hardly likely to run again. Mr. David Anderson (late of the Telegraph) is varying his work of establishing a school of journalism with the projection of an illustrated daily paper. Mr. Marks, an Anglo-American journalist of the Jewish faith, after matriculating in Western newspaper work, came over to London, started The Financial News, got up a company to back it, had pushed it into a success, and recently he made such a coup in American stocks, that he has bought for his residence London Hall, St. John's Wood. Baron Albert Grant has therefore started a high-class weekly journal, called The Stock Exchange, the first few numbers of which are chiefly occupied with a series of vigorous attacks upon the London tramway shares, which have fallen ever so much per cent. in consequence of the Exchange's "investigations." Mr. Emmett, of the Umpire, who has just been cast in heavy damages for a libel on Miss Cameron's husband, has been spoken of as a poor man; but the owner of several technical papers as well as the Umpire, this Manchester printer and editor has an income of not less than seven to ten thousand pounds a year.

MEETING OF MINERS' DELEGATES AT NEWCASTLE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

The miners' delegates held their quarterly meeting yesterday, at which all the lodges were represented. The principal business of importance to the outside public was the discussion of a letter from Mr. W. Binney, secretary of the Coalowners' Association, respecting the tribute system. It was resolved that an aggregate meeting of miners should be held on the tribute system and other grievances, owing to the unsatisfactory answer from Mr. Binney, on the 16th instant, at the Crystal Palace Gardens, Waratah, and that Mr. John Norton be invited to attend. The meeting was adjourned till to-day. It appears that there is a feeling of dissatisfaction at the alleged indifference to complaints made by the miners to the proprietors.

Ay, marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom.—ROSALIND.

Those who, in the House of Assembly, voted in favour of the Parliamentary Representatives' Allowance Bill will assuredly be delighted with the suggestion embodied in the amendment of Mr. Creed. Their contention is that the country is panting to pay £300 yearly to each of its representatives; and Mr. Creed proposes to give them the opportunity of triumphantly illustrating the soundness of their view. Whether the principle ought to be carried so far as to demand a fresh verdict at each election is a matter which I leave alone for the present. It is at all events obvious that the country ought to have an opportunity of distinctly pronouncing in favour of or against payment of members upon the first introduction of it. And this can only be done in some such way as that suggested by Mr. Creed. For seeing that, whether the present Government remain in power or have to give way to the Opposition, a majority will inevitably vote itself an income, nothing short of a revolution would enable the people to speak distinctly upon the question. I am therefore greatly in favour of Mr. Creed's improved ballot-paper for the next general election. But that will not—so the supporters of the Government say—come off for another two years. And in the meantime we may look for an amended Electoral Act from Sir Henry Parkes. This will doubtless result in a material reduction of our present surplus of representation. If we have to pay members to attend Parliament, we certainly have no desire to pay two to do the work of one. And though to persons like myself, who are sensible of the advantages which are offered by a candidature—which might lead to an income and a trip to Europe upon the strength of it—it may seem a pity to reduce the prizes in the lucky-bag. I suppose the country is entitled to some consideration. For, after all, the country has to pay the piper.

* * * * *

When Mr. Dibbs insisted on playing a lone hand about the Asylums Inquiry, Sir Henry Parkes was very indignant. He pointed out that Mr. Dibbs had very improperly played out of turn to begin with, and that he ought to have left the cards in the hands of those who could have made a much better use of them. Justice, short, sharp, and complete, was to be dealt out all round by Sir Henry; and so the other players threw down their hands and waited for him to deal. Where are all these protestations now? True that Dr. Rowling has departed, but the alleged misdeeds of Dr. Rowling were by no means the whole of the matter. Either the gravest of scandals was exposed, or unjustifiable aspersions were cast upon the character of an estimable person. Does Sir Henry think that his private inquiries have set the public mind at rest? A blot has been made upon the fair name of our humanity, and a little chalk has been rubbed on to make things look pleasant pending—what? Have the ladies and gentlemen who conducted the previous inquiries nothing to say? Either there was much to warrant their expressions of opinion—in which case there is only one thing to be done with those concerned—or they have been convicted of gross and cruel exaggeration. Which is it? It is no answer to say that it is difficult to find competent persons to manage these institutions. If those in charge of them have mismanaged them half as much as is alleged, we can well afford to take our risks in that regard.

* * * * *

I don't know that any public man, whether in the Council or the Assembly, has a better right than our Lieutenant-Governor to set about the re-naming of this most ruggedly-named colony of ours. Cook was generally very happy in naming our headlands and bays as he sailed along the coast, but "New South Wales" was, and always, while it subsists, must be, a distressing failure, as a name. It is bad enough a misnomer for the place, but when you try and make derivations from it for its inhabitants then the "uncouthness and inaptness" of the original name become painfully manifest. There is nothing to be got out of it but "New South Welshmen"—a horrible, if it were not so ridiculous, appellative—or that Indian abbreviation "walers," which really belongs to our horses, and ought not to be misappropriated to our people. Sir Alfred Stephen is to move on Tuesday next that there should be a centennial baptismal (or rather) re-baptismal ceremony performed—or, to use his own words, "that in view of the entrance by this colony in January next on its second centenary (? centennium), it is desirable to mark the event by a change of its present uncouth and inapt name, and substituting for it the words "Eastern Australia," or some other appropriate appellation." Bravo, Sir Alfred! you are only a generation or so younger than New South Wales, and if you can succeed in discovering for her as euphonious a name as somebody succeeded in discovering for Van Diemen's Land, we shall all consider ourselves not only re-baptised but regenerated. Dr. Lang, I think, wanted to rechristen the colony of which he wrote what (by some strange perversion of language) was called a "History"—"Cooksland" or "Cooksia" was his most undesirable proposition—and since that proposition was made and scouted, hardly any serious re-baptismal suggestion has been offered by anybody likely to be listened to.

* * * * *

I have a lively recollection of about a score or so of new names that have been presented for our acceptance. Mostly they were what might, more precisely, have been called nicknames. Sometimes they resembled in barbarity of composition those frightful outrages on the dead languages which botanists and other naturalists are so fond of perpetrating. But they never attracted any notice, and we heard no more of them. In addition to Cooksland (or Cooksia), I can remember Flindersia, Phillippia, Australind, Austranglia, Marsupia, Eucalypta, South Britain, Antipodia, Boovia, Rabbitaria, not to mention a few which were defamatory. "Eastern Australia" was, I think, suggested in the Herald a few days back, and, so far as I can judge, there seems to be no particular objection to it, except that it is no more descriptive of this colony than of Queensland. But why should we be anxious to describe the colony by reference to the compass? Why not call it "Australia" at once? Flinders first suggested the name "Australia" as a substitute for Terra Australis. If any colony has a right to that name it is long-suffering New South Wales, so long disfigured by an incurable misnomer, which nothing could have made her endure but reverence for the man who gave it. We are the first "Australians" historically, and the name "Australia," invented for us by our own navigator, belongs to us not only typically and topically, but by right of primogeniture. But—for, alas! there is a but.

* * * * *

One need hardly say who or what is that provider of the "but." Mr. Leopold Fane de Salis—or, as he should be abbreviated and euphonised, "M'r.'lF.'n.d' S'l's"—does not approve of Sir Alfred Stephen's proposal of changing the name of the colony. Under the affectionate abbreviation of Nu-Sou-Wales this country has been so long known to him that the thought of such a name as Eastern Australia is quite painful; and I can well believe that in Eastern Australians he would fail to recognise the men and brothers who as Nu-Sou-Walesmen, or still better, "Nu-Sou-Ismen" are dear to his heart to-day. Still worse, he would be cut off from all the bright memories of the colony past; those brave men for whose benefit the colony was first founded might be forgotten; and we ourselves might cease to be anything better than those merely ordinary persons who have established themselves in other parts of the continent. I cannot but sympathise with Mr. de Salis. Persons wanting in fine perception may urge that it is absurd to seek to spell words in one way and to pronounce them in another, but in this case, as M'rd's'l's points out, the name has been "naturally euphonised." But why should we not carry this "natural euphonising" a little further, and set up a language of our own? This is a centennial suggestion which I believe is now made for the first time. A cynical friend of mine says that we have already done so to a certain extent, and that he does not greatly admire the way in which many of us euphonise some of the vowels. But Mr. de Salis finds that our story is likely to be analogous to those of the Romans and of the English. The latter people unfortunately speak with an English accent, and we don't known in what kind of way Cicero euphonised his native tongue. But both peoples have left a magnificent and characteristic literary heritage. Might not Nu-sou-ls do the same if the inhabitants would but study Mr. de Salis, shorthand, and euphonising?

* * * * *

People are wondering what could have befallen Mr. Joseph Abbott, or rather, to be accurate, what has last befallen him to effect that last miraculously sudden conversion of his from vehement anti-M.P. Payment to extreme pro-Payment views. But these are mainly inconsiderate outsiders, who have no innate perception of political obligations, and who are utterly without experience of Parliamentary evolution. To be everything by turns and nothing long is, in these days, a sign of the highest form of political insight; for as the illuminated know, and they only, the fences in a parliamentary career which will surely be alluring you to come and sit upon them, with liberty to slide off when the time comes, are beyond the power of mortal man to foresee. The thing to do, but, of course, judiciously, is to sit on every fence you come against, and not break your legs by trying to jump it. No! roost on the obstacle, crow in as many keys as you can, when you must crow; and then watch your chance of coming down at the right time, and on the right side. If Poor Richard had lived in these days he would have told us that "Political coats which are always being turned inside out and outside in wear longest." Our Joseph, like the pet son of Jacob, has also his coat of many colours, but he has improved on the patriarchal Joseph. He remembers how that Joseph was envied by his brethren the possession of that coat, and how they, on a celebrated occasion, stripped him out of his coat—his coat of many colours—and took him and cast him into a pit (Genesis xxxvii., 23, 24). If the owner of that many-coloured coat had only had the knack of turning it from time to time, as occasion needed he would have escaped the pit, and his brethren would not have had to invent that awful story to tell their father Jacob, nor would he himself have been sold unto Potiphar. All of which goes to show that a perfect politician ought not only to be multicolor, but versicolor and that, as trimmers, trucklers, and turncoats, we can (as the vulgar phrase goes) put a "big bulge" on those Hebrews.

* * * * *

With the most gallant pertinacity, "Dingo," eluding all attempts at conversion, or capture, and confident, that his hallucination of to-day is destined to be the common faith of to-morrow, dashes against all received "Rabbit" doctrine, and demands the public protection of his namesake, the abolition of fencing and fencing-wire, and a return to the Arcadian simplicity of shepherding as it was practised some generations back. "We have in the Native Dog," he writes, so late as last Thursday, "a cheap, efficacious, and simple remedy for the rabbit nest. Encouraging this animal will necessitate shepherding, but the expense thus incurred will be trifling compared with that of fencing or of the present ridiculous system of rabbit destruction." No doubt the 4000 unemployed would supply a good many shepherds, if their ranks were carefully examined. Hundreds of them have exactly the look and the general style of those queer old chaps who did such cheap and useful work in days gone by, and they would be able after a little tuition, to cultivate "Dingo" with as much enthusiasm as the antique shepherds were wont to exterminate him. But a friend of mine seems to go one better than "Dingo." He proposes that we should repeal the Rabbit Extermination Act, or whatever the name of it is, and abolish the Rabbit Extermination Department; and create a large Government staff for the purpose of protecting and diffusing rabbits throughout the colony. Backed by a suitable Act of Parliament, he declares that, after a few years of State protection and development, the race of coneys would certainly become extinct. I commend this suggestion to "Dingo." There really appears a great deal to be said for it.

* * * * *

As far as I am able to catch the drift of Mr. W. Lovegrove's letter on rabbits (published in the same issue which contains "Dingo's") he would protect rabbits in the interests of poultry farmers. "Personally (writes Mr. Lovegrove) I should have welcomed 'bunny' on my land, and should have made him pay for his grass by turning him into fricassee, or pie whilst his skin would have served other useful and ornamental purposes." The follows the Lovegrovian scheme for utilizing "bunny." Shortly described it is to convert him into "saucissons au lapin"—rabbit sausages, to the end that our harmless, necessary hens may convert these last into eggs, just as, according to Mr. Lovegrove, surplus horses are in Paris converted into "saucissons au Bucéphale" for the benefit of Norman hens. I like this scheme immensely. One of the well-known benefits of the French plan is the supply of those Normandy laid eggs, which, when hard-boiled, are a necessary aliment in the training of French jockeys. "Oeufs au Bucéphale." Oeufs au Lapin would, I doubt not, very soon acquire a strong hold of the market, and if they possessed (as who could doubt they would?) that "rabbitty" flavour which the assimilating hens would feel a pride in transmitting, what better food could we invent for Messieurs les Rabbiteurs? Then there is a most captivating sequence of ideas in this scheme of Mr. Lovegrove's, looked at as a whole. Thus: Rabbitaria, rabbit, rabbiter, rabbit sausages, rabbit sausage-fed hens, eggs of rabbit sausage-fed hens, rabbiter fed on eggs of rabbit sausage-fed hens, rabbit killed by rabbiter fed on eggs of rabbit sausage-fed hens, Rabbitaria. Isn't it beautiful?

COBAR, FRIDAY.

Gold-mining is receiving some attention here now. A gold-mining lease of five acres has been taken up at United Hill, three miles south of Cobar, by H. J. Cornish, Thos. Lean, and D. A. Penball; and 10 acres at Honeybugle, near Nyngan, by Lewis, Lytton, and others. Messrs. Bolton and Newman have pegged out a five-acre lease at United Hill, and Jesse Bobby a 10-acre lease at the same place. These applications are causing some little stir.

CARCOAR, FRIDAY.

The district monthly escort took 430oz. 9dwt. 3gr. of gold. During the month mining has been retarded owing to many claimholders being unable to send their quartz to the batteries on account of the soft nature of the ground. A new reef situated between the Burnt Yards country and the dividing range has been discovered, and has been called the New Lady Carrington Reef. The ground is known as the Falls. During the last few weeks several prospecting parties have gone there. The country has never been tested. It is reported that payable reefs have been found on both sides of the Falls.

SOFALA, FRIDAY.

The Solitary mine at Wattle Flat crushed 104 tons of quartz, yielding 66oz. 7dwt., from the 300-feet level.

FOGS.

BY J. O.

Fogs seldom visit Sydney or remain long. On last Monday night, however, a thick mantle of mist held harbour and town in its folds until by a slight stretch of fancy, wanderers from the village by the Thames could imagine themselves once more in that wonderful London where sin and its flourish that hugest of human warrens, where the eager pursuit of pleasure by the few is only surpassed in intensity by the fierce battle of the many for bread. Although according to a prominent colonial statesman the true office of New South Wales is to teach England, and not be taught by her, it must be frankly confessed that in the matter of fogs we are a good deal behind the times. The one of Monday was very creditable to the productive powers of a young and struggling community, but, compared with the English article, with the London pattern, through whose watery interstices the policeman looms on you like a Cyclops, and the meatman's voice sounds like a message from another world, it was only a modified success at the best. Whether, by a judicious system of "discriminating" protection — a sort of sliding scale, in favour of the local commodity—it might not be possible to ultimately succeed in giving to Sydney fogs that body and colour which differentiate the Whitechapel and Newfoundland articles from all others, it would be premature to say. The subject is a curious one, but we have not time at present to examine it in all its bearings.

On Monday night we spent a couple of hours on the pleasant waters of Port Jackson. This was due, not to any romantic yearnings to be afloat but to the prosaic fact that the person who held the safety of the boat and the passengers in the hollow of his hand—he steered—was a cautious and experienced mariner. Thus it happened that as the nebulosity increased the speed diminished, until the duration of the customary half-hour voyage was quadrupled. When the thick murk was seen advancing over the waters, the steam was relieved from its monotonous task of turning the crank and allowed to revel in the convolutions of the fog-horn. Into these eccentric labyrinths it dashed with a spirit of reckless gaiety and, having explored all the instrument's recesses launched itself at the mist with a scream. By the simple device of tying the string in one of his button holes the careful officer at the wheel made certain that if the vessel's preservation depended on the persistence and vigour of a sound-wave, the barque in his charge would have a safe and prosperous voyage. He was something of a humourist, too, for, when at last the ferry reached the wharf, he placidly asked the constable, whose form rose menacingly a yard away, whether he had heard the warning signal. This question was asked so sincerely that a stranger would have been deceived, and would probably have answered with demonstrative affirmation. But the peace officer evidently knew his man, and preserved a dignified silence. Among those who daily made use of this boat to reach Sydney, and who were presumably acquainted with some of the captain's idiosyncrasies, it was openly asserted that when he put the query his face, if it could be seen, would be found puckered.

If Sydney cannot compete with other cities in material mists, it every now and then produces mental ones that could hold up their heads in any company. A cursory glance at a few intellectual fogs that have lately obscured prominent men's faculties will suggest a lesson and a warning. There, for instance, was that dense haze which for a few days wrapped the logical perceptions of some of the highest and best in the land. If there is one fact that the history of mankind has taught with undeviating persistence, it is that you cannot "stamp out" opinion. You may proscribe it, persecute its holders, and silence them. But, if sound, it will live in spite of you—if unsound, it will droop and die though all the world held it. The past affords so many examples of this, that the number rather than the paucity of illustrations bewilders. So great within the present generation has been the growth of true liberalism in many directions—the political, the scientific, and the religious among them—that men of various schools of thought can now, without fear of giving offence, write and speak on subjects which a few years ago, were left entirely to historians and polemics. Let us glance for a moment, then, at some old-world examples of the result of trying to stamp out obnoxious opinions. There is little doubt that the Spaniards of the 16th and 17th centuries were persons with whom it was not safe to trifle. They honestly held that by a little persuasion the thoughts of the Flemish people could be confined to certain safe channels. They persuaded, and failed—failed ignominiously, although sword and flame were unflinchingly used as the final argument. It is beside the question to ask which party, the Spanish or the Flemish, was wrong; or whether both were not in error. The real interest of the case lies in the fact that efforts which present times, bad as they are often said to be, would not tolerate were made over a long term of years to mould thought after a certain pattern, and that those efforts came to nothing. It may no doubt, be said "Yes; but if the endeavours were unsuccessful in the Netherlands, they at least did not fail in Spain and in France." We are not so sure. Go into a Paris church on Sunday morning, and for every male devotee, you will find 20 or 50 females. Read some of Byron's letters—to be found in Moore's "Life of the Lordly Poet"—or a few late chapters by a grave British writer, Mr. Morison, concerning Spanish morals and say whether the "stamping out" process has been an entire success. Take down a map and observe the Peninsula's unique position. Before you lies a land favoured above others; a sunny and fertile land of old renown. It is but a few centuries ago since its sailors dominated every sea, while kings hearkened when its monarch spoke. Even to-day its people are remarkable for their many fine qualities. But it insisted on rooting out opinions unpleasant to the majority, and now its own opinion is about as much heeded as that of Iceland at the European council-table.

Nor is it in matters of religious belief alone that people should be very careful how they go beyond fair argument in meddling with the opinions of others. Take science for instance. Surely, if ridicule could kill, Darwin's great hypothesis—even yet it can hardly be called a theory—would long since have been placed in its little grave with a lullaby of jeers. Why, we ourselves have oases of brown hair (good natured friends suggest sandy, or worse) still left in the daily ever-encroaching desert of grey; yet we can remember when staid men shot out the tongue at poor Darwin and his simian genealogical tree; when the thoughtfully humorous verses (we fancy they appeared in "Blackwood") beginning—

"I once was a monkey and lived up a tree,
Which nobody can deny."

were thought to have squelched evolution. But while the world poked fun the naturalist poked back common sense, until now none but a few old scientists, too advanced in years to take kindly to new views, believe in the immutability of species. It is to be hoped then that the fog which overtook some prominent Sydney citizens on the occasion of a late public and rowdy meeting will soon be entirely dispelled.

On Sunday afternoons the Domain is a dreadful place for fogs of a peculiarly dense kind. We seldom miss these gatherings. They are our Alma Mater. With some of the gifted speakers we are personally acquainted. They single us out in the crowd, fire aspirated jargon into us by the rood, and end, sometimes with an appeal, sometimes with a threat. One unusually bellicose scientist, who presides over a fine painting showing the coats of the human stomach and the manner in which alcohol rips the seams, shook his fist our way last Sabbath. He thought he saw a cynical leer, and heard the metallic laughter of mockery, in that direction. It merely shows you how necessary it is that a popular lecturer should keep his temper; for an industrious-looking, but indifferently sober, person in the circle, thinking the menace was aimed at him, methodically took off his coat, and, advancing to the rostrum, assumed a far from conciliatory attitude. He told the speaker, among other things, that the image presented by the highly-coloured diagram was simply painted in neutral tints compared with the appearance the scientist's head would present if he continued to threaten honest working-men. At this the crowd set up a whoop of encouragement, which the lecturer took to mean that the students had had enough physiology and wanted something lively. So, silently folding his diagram, and mechanically tucking his platform under his arm, he left the gay licentious throng in the mist in which he found it. But the most impenetrable of Domain fogs are those which surround the forms of the tree stumps devoted to theology and politics. Every system of Government has its supporters in the crowd—every system of belief in another. Perverts, whether political or religious, are notoriously bitter against the men or creeds they deserted. A few Sundays ago one of the chosen people, who had evidently lost all faith in Israel, "went" for the Talmud with what might be called an exegetical pick-axe. Compared with the weapon wielded by this soured iconoclast, that used by Colenso in dealing with the wanderings of Moses was a mere baby's rattle.

The fog surrounding the Centennial proposals is not only dense but lasting. It fell during the regime of Sir Patrick Jennings, and shows no sign of rising during that of his successor. The world has heard of many ways for celebrating a great event, but colossal in its originality, unapproached and unapproachable in its unique ineptitude, was that of asking the nations to stand to attention while a stream of sewage was being shot into the South Pacific. To hesitate in raising the proposer of this scheme to the highest rank in the British peerage, with precedence of the Lord Chancellor, shows how Australian talent is overlooked in London. The federation of the Empire will remain an idle dream as long as citizens capable of formulating such schemes are put off with the comparatively homely order of knighthood simply because they happen to live south of the equinoctial line. Alongside Sir Patrick's plan that of Sir Henry does not show to very much advantage. Still it has little peculiarities of its own that demand much more space than we have to give. Let it suffice to say that when the Premier alludes to the draining of a marsh and the erecting of a large house as steps tending to "educate the soul of citizenship," he, whether consciously or not, covered himself and his thoughts with fog as with a mantle.

THE PROPOSED RAILWAY FROM NYNGAN TO COBAR.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

COBAR, FRIDAY.

In view of the recent determination of the Government as announced in the House, respecting the Nyngan-Cobar railway, a large and influential meeting was held last evening at the Cobar Council-chambers, Mr. Toy, the Mayor, presiding, to protest against the line of conduct adopted by the Government. The Mayor, in opening the proceedings, read a telegram from Mr. Waddell, M.L.A., stating that the Minister for Works, in answer to a question in the House, had stated that the Government intended having a fresh survey made. The Herald's comments on the decision were read to the meeting, and were much applauded. He (Mr. Toy) said the Minister was only misleading and throwing dust in the eyes of the Cobar people and the people at large. A fresh survey was wholly unnecessary. The surveyors who made the survey were most experienced and skilful, and the line could not be improved on. A fresh survey meant merely wasting money and time, and delaying the railway. He thought at one time that the scarcity of money was the cause of the delay. This could not, however, be the case, seeing that tenders had been accepted for the Pearce's Corner railway line, which for 11 miles would cost nearly as much as the Cobar line of 81 miles. The Cobar people had reason to be indignant at the treatment meted out to them. Promise after promise had been made, only to be broken. Mr. Michael O'Neill said there could be no difference of opinion that the Government were only humbugging them. They should agitate and insist on being heard. Certainly they could not force the Government to construct the line, but they could show the reasonableness of their demands and the justice of their claims. No line had ever been so unanimously sanctioned as this one. At the request of the Government the Cobar people had at considerable expense furnished statistical returns, proving beyond doubt that the line would pay; still the Government were not satisfied; fresh demands were made by them, and the climax was reached when they stated that it was their intention to make a fresh survey. This only meant delay. Language failed to adequately express their indignation. He moved,—"That the residents of Cobar and district consider the delay by the Government in not accepting the tender for and proceeding with the construction of the Cobar railway as a great injustice to this part of the colony; that the contract let by the Government for the making of the railway from North Shore to Pearce's Corner further justifies the people here in demanding the making of their line immediately, it having been legally sanctioned by the last Government; that the proposal for the new survey can only be calculated to unnecessarily delay the railway, and considering the careful survey already made, the extremely low prices for construction as already tendered, and the statistical returns furnished at the expense of the Cobar people, it appears as if the Government were not in earnest in their promises respecting the construction of this line of railway." Mr. Neil Morrison seconded the motion. In a forcible speech he pointed out that nothing similar to the action of the Government had ever been brought before the people of New South Wales before. For the last seven years the line had been promised. Tenders unprecedentedly low were sent in. Contractors' time and money had been wasted in making the tenders and in supplying the Government with information. He ridiculed the idea of the heavy cost of the resumption of land and water supply. The line passed, with little exception, altogether through Crown lands, and it could not be improved on. The land for miles either side of the present line was similar to that traversed by the line, and a fresh survey would only result in the money being wasted. It would be far better, if the Government did not intend to construct the line at present, to expend that money in repairing the present road, and render it safe in all weathers for vehicular traffic. The railway, if constructed, would, as had been repeatedly shown, open up hundreds of miles of a most valuable part of the colony. The Cobar line would be a national source of wealth and revenue. He thought the resolution was the kindest that could be adopted.

The resolution was put to the meeting, and carried.

It was resolved to forward the resolution to the member for the district and the daily press, and also to seek the co-operation of Nymagee, Wilcannia, and the surrounding districts.

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman. The meeting was most unanimous in condemning the Government proposals, and was thoroughly in earnest in their protests.

COLONIAL GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

	Buyer.	Seller.		Buyer.	Seller.
New S. Wales Funded	100	—	Debentures due 1902	—	—

We understand that at a meeting of bank managers this afternoon it was stated that the banks in New South Wales and Victoria had agreed upon reducing the deposit rates as soon as the banks in the other colonies would join them in the arrangement.

The directors of the N. S. W. Property Investment Company have appointed Mr. T. Holderness as manager, to succeed Mr. J. V. Wareham, who resigned on account of ill-health.

In the Import markets to-day there was some slight improvement in business, and generally a more hopeful tone prevails as to the prospects of a recovery of trade in the near future. The receipt of the proceeds of the next season's wool clip is expected to circulate a little more money, and give something of the much-needed impetus, whilst the fair prospects of the agricultural industries, and the increasing production of our coal mines, should also contribute to the restoration of a better state of things. Breadstuffs are unaltered in value, but more trade is doing at the following quotations:—Town brands, South Australian, £10 5s. to £10 10s.; country brands, South Australian, £9 10s. to £10; New South Wales brands, £9 10s. to £10 5s.; Victorian brands, £9 5s. to £9 10s.; roller-made, £10 10s. to £11. Wheat, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 3d. for best milling samples. Tea is moving off steadily in small lines, and the bonded stocks having now become very small, holders view the position without much concern. Seldom has the new tea come on so bare a market, and as the bulk of what is held is common, which does not come by the first tea ships, there will be but a very small quantity indeed when stocks are replenished. Coffee remains firm, and ordinary lines of No. 1 Ceylon Plantation are selling at 1s. 3½d., a special line of Mocha coffee having been placed at a trifle more. Barry's chicory 2½d., a concession being made for large lines. Epps' cocoa, 1s. 8d. to 1s. 8½d. In sugar, there is a fair inquiry for good yellows at about £20 to £21; whites in limited request at £23 to £25 10s. Ration sorts continue very dull of sale. The Queensland steamers to-day brought 4550 bags, exclusive of shipments for Melbourne. The European market at latest mail date was weak, 8s. German beet being barely worth 11s. 9d., and little disposition to speculate. Rice still in full supply, and prices in favour of buyers—say £14 15s. for the finer grades, and from £12 to £13 10s. for the lower qualities. Sago and tapioca 2½d. in bond. In dried fruits there is not much doing. Currants may be quoted at 4¼d. to 5d., according to parcel; elemes, 4¼d. to 5d.; sultanas, 6d.; dates, 3½d. to 3¾d. Figs are still scarce and dear; condensed milk, 6s. 6d. to 6s. 9d. Rock salt is moving off at 90s. from the ship; Liverpool coarse, 67s. 6d. to 70s., according to quantity. Candles, 6d. to 6⅝d., the latter being the quotation for D. R. Jenar's; less taken for forward delivery. The trade in fish is very slack; trade lines only being moved. There is yet no life in business in hops or malt, and late quotations are maintained. Brewers' orders are of the smallest dimensions. Liquids had rather more attention to-day. Bulldog ale noticed freely in trade parcels on the spot, and a quantity taken up to arrive. Bottled stout in fair request; Pig on the spot moving off steadily at 9s. 6d. in quarts, and 6s. 6d. to 6s. 9d. pints. Bulldog to arrive being also freely noticed. A moderately good demand for Hennessy's brandy. The new Customs regulation respecting obscuration is causing importers to talk of varying their quotations. It is thought singular that samples of one particular manufacture of brandy should differ so much as they are said to do by the test, and if they do it would seem to indicate adulteration somewhere. But importers are disposed to take the view that the testing is not so perfect as it might be. In time, however, the new Customs arrangement will probably cause more uniformity in the character of obscured spirits, and generally improve the quality. Hennessy's brandy was done at 17s. 6d. in bulk. Frere's pale and dark brandy noticed at full rates. Rum has been rather dull of sale; Lowndes' according to parcel, 3s. 1d. to 3s. 2d.; Lamb's dull at up to 2s. 9d. Leading brands of whisky in fair request, both on the spot and to arrive. Craignish and Royal Blend noticed at agents' prices. A fair parcel of Vergniaud claret placed at current rates. In metals, a moderate inquiry noticed for galvanised iron at from £17 12s. 6d. to £18 5s., the market being bare of cheap brands. There is very little doing in sheet lead, and the market is fully stocked. Fencing-wire is going off steadily in small lines at late rates. Tin plates barely maintain values, at 21 17s. is now a full figure for I. C. Cokes. Wire nails can be had at 12s. 9d.

R. Goldsbrough and Co., Limited, have received the following cablegram, dated London, July 7, 1887:—"Finest crossbreds are easier owing to the withdrawal of American competition. For coarser descriptions the market is firm. The sales continue without any material alteration in prices. 280,000 bales have been catalogued, and 20,500 bought in to date. The wheat market is very weak, and prices are steadily declining. Best Australian wheat quoted off coast at 34s. to 35s."

By the incoming mails we have London files to the 3rd June. At that date the money market was very depressed, the supply of capital having been largely in excess of requirements, and there seemed but little prospect of any change. Short loans were almost unlendable at ½ per cent., and very little business had been transacted in discounts. The stock markets were firm, and quotations were mostly higher. Closing quotations for bank stocks were:—Bank of Australasia, 104-106; Bank of New South Wales, 67-69; Bank of New Zealand, 21-22; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 33½-34½; London Chartered of Australia, 25-26; Queensland National, Limited, 12½-13; Union of Australia, 70-72.

The barque Prospect, from Puget Sound, arrived to-day with a freight of lumber.

The following was the Customs revenue received to day:—

Spirits, £2126 10s. 4d.; wine, still, £42 10s.; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), 17s. 6d.; ale, porter, and beer (in bottles), £166 0s. 3d.; tobacco and snuff, £317 2s.; cigars, £297 19s. 2d.; cigarettes, £219 7s. 6d.; tea, £83 12s. 8d.; sugar, unrefined, £592 18s. 9d.; rice, £3; dried fruits, £11 19s. sarsaparilla (over 25 per cent.), £1 18s. 6d.; specific duty, £4079 8s. 2d.; ad valorem, £1063 19s. 11d.; harbour and light rates, £3 0s. 8d.; pilotage, Sydney, £61 2s. 4d.; excise on beer, £481 10s. 3d.; excise on tobacco, £38 8s. 9d.; cigars and cigarettes, £7 3s. 3d.; tobacco factory license fees, £6 5s.; fisheries royalty, £13 7s. Total, £6618 4s.

C. F. W. Lloyd and Co. report having sold during the week, in the estate of J. L. Campbell, store and buildings, township of Bowral, for the sum of £1875 cash.

STOCK SALES.

Messrs. Griffiths and Weaver report having sold, on account of Mr. W. Kilgour, Surbiton station (with the Union Mortgage and Agency Company of Australia), 1000 bullocks; and on account Mr. H. C. White, Havilah (with Messrs. Clements and M'Carthy), 1780 ewes, of ages, at 22s 6d.—[ADVT.]

The sample was taken by myself on the 25th instant, from bonded store, where the cases were lying; and, from the results of my analysis, I am of opinion that it is a pure whisky of superior quality, which has been matured in sherry casks. The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1887.

The PRIMATE's celebrated speech is now before us. It will be remembered that nearly five weeks ago we published a cablegram which contained some statements made by Dr. BARRY in an address delivered at King's College, which were scarcely complimentary to the colony, nor calculated to impress the public mind with a strong confidence in the correctness of the BISHOP's judgment. Comment was made in these columns at the time upon what seemed to us to be an unjust estimate of certain phases of Australian life, and there came from some quarters the appeal to wait until the full text of the BISHOP's address had come to us. The matter of the address we publish this morning, and it may be seen that the reliance we placed upon our cable service was not misguided. Of the soberly kind things the BISHOP said of us the cablegram gave nothing; nor was such a proceeding necessary. We have had enough of adulation and fictitious expansion of our good qualities. The new departure was more interesting, even though its application was caustic rather than emollient. There would be no particular cause for quarrel with our distinguished critic if his adverse estimation of us were founded upon absolute fact, and not upon what seems to us to be not an entirely accurate scrutiny of our social conditions. Dr. BARRY stated that drunkenness was rather worse in New South Wales than in England; but that there was less of it amongst the purely working classes. It prevailed rather in the other strata of society. The evil of sensuality he considered more marked than in England. This was perhaps due, he thought, to habits of overfeeding among us. There was also here in his opinion more of the spirit of recklessness and lawlessness and want of discipline, domestic and otherwise, than was the case at home. To such an extent, he said, did this prevail, that the word "larrikinism" had been coined to express it. In the spirit of insubordination thus represented lay the great evil in the path of this and all English-speaking communities.

Such criticism as this may do more good than if it were less exaggerated in its nature. A humorous philosopher once said that when an angry man told him his fault, he always went home and thought carefully about it, for the chances were he told a good deal of truth. The PRIMATE, we are sure, was not angry, nor desirous of saying anything that was not well considered and for our best interests, but there can be little doubt that in connection with these matters referred to he was more cruel than kind, and more censorious than just. It is a revelation to us to be told that drunkenness is one of the vices of society here. That there is a tendency to what is called good living among our people, and considerable conviviality all round, there is no reason to doubt; but because we do not take our pleasures quite so sadly as those of the more frigid region of Great Britain, it does not follow that we are given over into the hands of the spoiler, and are the slaves of a habit that is "more honoured in the breach than the observance." It is not the bias of the native Australian to demean himself by drunkenness. Such signs as we have of it here are found most frequently among those who come to sojourn with us from the land with which we are held in comparison. Our social condition, no doubt, has serious blots upon it, but those who listened to the BISHOP's statement at King's College would need a magnified vision to find in our society the thing of which we are accused, if they came among us. We have our share, no doubt, also of sensuality; but surely the PRIMATE was, for the nonce, enamoured of his old home when, with the reports of divorce cases and social scandals ringing in his ears in London at the time, he gravely told his fashionable and intelligent audience that we were behind them in the matter of social morality. We published some weeks ago, soon after the BISHOP had delivered his address, a paragraph showing that at the Spring Assizes at Leeds, out of a total of 48 cases, 24 persons were charged with offences more or less of a nature which precluded publication. The world knows also pretty well how much reason London society would have to cry "Raca" to us. We have no objection to being reminded of our shortcomings, but comparisons such as these invite scrutiny. As to the spirit of lawlessness among us, Dr. BARRY has surely taken one swallow for the summer. His broad view must have been narrowed down to the memory of one case that shortly preceded his departure. The most casual observer could not fail to notice how free we are, speaking relatively, of "the spirit of recklessness and lawlessness." We have had times of great excitement this year, yet, through it all, what disregard has there been for law and order? We are mindful of what scenes occur at the general elections in England, and when we place our experience alongside, the comparison is not to our discredit. The genius of our people lies in the direction of a good-natured obedience to the law and a disposition for fair-play. There was no special wonder in coining a word to represent our shiftless class. If we have "larrikins," England has her "roughs" and "rowdies," and the United States has her "hoodlums" and "galoots." We do not desire to press a claim for originality in this matter, and we think Dr. BARRY has again fallen foul of fact.

These are not the only things in the address which invite discussion. We think that the BISHOP was slightly optimistic upon the labour question. It is scarcely the regular thing for labourers to receive seven shillings and sixpence per day, nor are we altogether sure that there is, under present conditions, work for all up the country if they chose to accept it. With all that the Bishop said about the class of men we need here, and their habits, we are in thorough accord. Chinese labour and Coolie immigration were also touched upon, and he inclined to the encouragement of the latter. A great deal may be said against Chinese labour, but until our labouring classes show a disposition to take their place in the matter of market-gardening and in other things where they meet the daily wants of the public, we are not prepared to bid them go, while at the same time we have no hope to see them increase among us. In North Queensland, where white men cannot stand the work on the sugar plantations because of the climate, coolie labour may be a convenience, but there is no portion of New South Wales where the white man cannot do his work with little inconvenience from the climate. Our workingmen have a right to protest against the importation of cheap labour unless there are conditions which justify and compel it. The voluntary system in the churches, and our literature and culture, also came in for a share of notice. The BISHOP deplored the want of endowment for the maintenance of the clergy, and thought our people were not alive to the duty of giving. To draw their stipends from a great central fund would no doubt tend to the independence of the clergy, and emancipating them from any local dependence tend to give them more freedom of speech and action, yet there is the counterbalancing danger as well. Endowment has as often been a curse as a blessing. In new countries especially the evangelistic and mission spirit are preeminently necessary, and as the whole scheme of progress is founded upon a wide moral principle of service and return, voluntary giving and successful church work have been found to go hand in hand. What was said upon our literary and artistic condition is, no doubt, largely true, and upon such matters the PRIMATE is a well-qualified judge. We have little indigenous literature of much worth, and no art that can yet be called Australian, but the PRIMATE might very justly have incorporated in his address the statement that the journals of our country contribute constantly an amount of good literary work which supplies the void there undoubtedly is in good native book-making. Altogether, Dr. BARRY'S address was an exceedingly able one. It was full of suggestive ideas, and had nothing of the oration about it. His scholarly habit of dealing with matters would keep him from sacrificing his honest opinions for rhetorical effect, and though we have taken strong exceptions to statements which we believe to be entirely errors in judgment, we are glad to have had so able an observer of our life open his mind about us to those who, generally speaking, know as little of us as if we were of another race. Human judgment is but fallible, and the Christian leader does not always stand in the best position to measure accurately the conditions of life. So it is with the PRIMATE. Among much truth he has dropped a modicum of error; and while we lament the one, we commend the general prevalency of the other.

Separated as we are from Europe, and depending so largely upon sailors for our means of communication and commerce with the rest of the world, we can scarcely regard an event like the "Lady Douglas" tragedy with indifference. Four men were sentenced to death on account of it; and, although their sentences, as we learn this morning, are commuted to five years' and to 12 and 18 months' imprisonment, the consequences to themselves must be of the gravest, even though the terms to which they have been condemned are small as compared with those which commuted prisoners generally have to serve. The Lady Douglas left Shark's Bay, upon her homeward voyage, taking with her from that place two Malay sailors as part of her crew. One of them, named HASSIN, seems, about a week before they came to the Cape of Good Hope, to have developed peculiarities of manner which, from the account before us, must clearly have been due to insanity. He, first of all, attempted to jump overboard; and subsequently he obtained possession of a knife, with which he concealed himself in the forepeak of the vessel. There he remained for several days, only coming out on an occasion when he seems to have attempted the life of the captain of the ship. He was possessed of a carving knife, a crowbar, and what are described as several other iron weapons; all attempts to dislodge him appear to have been useless; he had control of the stock of coals which the vessel carried, and a supply of these could only be obtained from him in exchange for rations of ship's biscuit and water. That the man was mad can hardly be questioned; that he was dangerously mad is almost certain; according to the evidence given at the police court, he could only be approached by anyone who should be prepared to employ the dangerous expedient of dropping ten feet into the place where he had taken refuge: and, finally, he was shot from above, and brought upon deck in a helpless condition. There he was found to be so seriously wounded that, apparently, with the approval of the rest of the ship's company, one of the seamen fired a bullet through his head with the desire of putting him out of his misery. This last act is, perhaps, the one which it is hardest to justify, and in any case there can be no question as to the legal aspect of the matter. We have not yet before us the report of the trial, but the facts adduced at the police court, and, as we must suppose, not contradicted, amply justify the jury in bringing in their verdict of wilful murder.

The legal aspect of the case must, as we have said, be admitted. But the moral aspect of it is not at all so clear; and this appears to be one of those occasions upon which the Royal prerogative may be used with advantage to modify the rigour and inelasticity of the law. The captain of the ship, upon being charged, said "It was on the way home. It was done for the safety of all the crew, and the ship also. I did not say I did it with my own hand, but under my direction the following fired the shots. I had fired at him myself, but could not hit him, the day previous, when he was trying to knock a hole in the ship with a crow-bar;" and the mate added, "We did it for our own safety. If he had not been killed, he would have killed some of us." It may be taken for granted that there was good reason for apprehension; for the deceased is reported to have repeated on several occasions, "Suppose I kill one, I die," apparently as a threat or with the desire to be rid of his own life. It is also obvious that such action as was taken was taken as a matter of public expediency; there was nothing merely personal about it; and it was the result of the concrete wisdom or unwisdom of those concerned. Do these facts justify or excuse it? We think that they do not. In the first place it is necessary to ask whether it is reasonable to suppose that as much would have been done in the case of an English sailor. And we are at once led to doubt whether so high-handed a proceeding would have been regarded as justifiable with regard to him. Almost certainly the captain and ship's company would have paused before they adopted so extreme a course. They would have endeavoured to starve him out; and by constant vigilance would have striven to avert any danger which might have arisen from his irresponsible action. This, we think, must be admitted; and if so much be conceded it must further be held that the destruction of the life of the Malay was highly criminal, and ought to be punished in a way which should sufficiently indicate that the British idea of the sanctity of life is not dependent upon the colour of a man's skin. It is inconceivable that a ship's company should agree that it were well to put a man out of his misery in the case of one of their own race, even if the circumstances which had led to his injuries could admit of justification. And here a certain amount of needless brutality seems to have been indulged in; for the day before the man was killed the mate fired a shot gun and wounded him in his foot, which he had left exposed.

On the other hand, the position of these men has to be taken into account, and it must be allowed that much can be urged in extenuation of what they did. Even the last-mentioned act may have been due to a desire to disable a dangerous enemy; and, throughout, their circumstances have to be carefully considered. Their position must have been one of continued apprehension; for the man was possessed of a crowbar, and he seems to have had matches as well; he was determined to do damage to somebody, and he had the means of doing damage ready to his hand. He was insane, and yet he was so dangerously near to sanity that he could make a bargain for food and water. Let those of us who have had experience of a long sea voyage look back to it and try to picture the situation. Let them imagine a dangerous lunatic, armed with a crowbar, and in possession of matches, in the lowest compartment of the forepart of the vessel. They must suppose this man determined upon mischief; and must then ask themselves whether they would be disposed to regard with severity any action which might be successful in relieving them of the danger. If the expression be allowable, we would say that men so placed might be regarded as suffering from a prolonged panic, and that well-considered action is no more to be expected of them than is courteous precedence of the terrified fugitives from a burning theatre. The life of sailors, moreover, is one which is calculated to produce a tendency to intemperate action. In emergencies at sea something has to be done, and it is almost better to do wrong than to do nothing at all. Sitting by our quiet firesides, we may condemn the action of the captain and crew of the Lady Douglas; but putting ourselves in their place we may regard it with the charity which is always due to the deeds of desperate men. And in considering the punishment which they should receive, we may remember that punishment itself is not our aim, but prevention. If it be clearly understood that the present case can form no precedent; that an exceptional concession is made to circumstances which are unusual; we may justify the Royal clemency that has been extended for the commutation of the penalty.

In the proposals of the Gas Conference with a view to the establishment of municipal gasworks in certain of the suburbs of Sydney it seems to us one essential feature is lost sight of. It is assumed, contrary to all colonial and American experience, that gas may be produced at prices very nearly those ruling in England. The different prices of plant, of labour, and of coal must be considered, whilst the fact that there is not so much sale here for residuals is an element in the calculation. But whatever may be said with respect to these aspects of the business, the more important one remains, that the lower prices ruling in England are where there is no competition. A gas company's operations are profitable just as they give a large supply within a concentrated area. Any second company dividing the business would necessarily increase the cost to both, and consequently to the public. On the area now occupied by the Australian Gas-light Company the cost would be enhanced if second works were to be erected. Obviously two plants to perform work which one would suffice to execute, would involve an outlay resulting in waste. If then certain ratepayers within the municipalities desire to have the gasworks under municipal control, their action should be directed to buying out the plant and works of the present company or companies. This has been almost the invariable practice of corporations in the mother country which have come into possession and control of gasworks. Obviously any other course would involve the municipalities in a senseless competition with private enterprise and could only be productive of unsatisfactory consequences. Whilst there is undoubtedly something to be said for gasworks as a municipal institution, established under proper conditions, it would be difficult to justify outlay of the ratepayers' money in competition of this kind. The additional breaking up of the streets and thoroughfares involved in change would also be an objectionable feature, from a municipal point of view. Before the Corporations interested take the action recommended, they will doubtless take this very necessary feature into their consideration. If a gas company unduly keeps up its price, there will be no sympathy for it. But the ratepayers have to be satisfied on that point, and when they are, they must proceed to a remedy by way of conciliation rather than by opposition.

The finances of Queensland are in a bad way. When the Griffith Government came into power about three years ago they inherited a surplus of nearly two millions. They have spent the surplus and created a deficiency of more than £450,000. So far as their financial management is concerned the year which has just closed is the worst of the three. In August last the TREASURER delivered a budget speech. He estimated that the receipts for the forthcoming year would be £3,000,500, and the expenditure £3,069,635. To provide for the deficiency of £69,000 shown in this forecast he induced the Assembly to increase the ad valorem duties to 7½ per cent., which increase he calculated would yield £75,000. The results show that he erred in all his calculations. Nearly every source of revenue yielded far less than he expected, whilst the expenditure, notwithstanding vigorous and, in some instances, successful efforts at retrenchment, was far in excess of his estimate. The total revenue for the year was £2,807,608, and the total expenditure £3,263,584, the deficiency being £455,886. This deficiency is relatively as great as would be a deficiency of a million and a quarter sterling in our annual balance-sheet. It is, therefore, a serious affair. But that is not all. Not only is the revenue far short of the expenditure, but the revenue for 1886-7 is considerably less than that of the previous year. The difference is about £60,000; taxation and services, which should be continually progressive sources of income, are responsible for at least half of this sum. It may be pointed out that this colony is in a similar position in regard to services, the receipts from which for the twelve months ending on the 30th of June were £85,000 short of those obtained the previous year. Both Sir PATRICK JENNINGS and Mr. DICKSON believed in July last that as the drought was then a thing of the past, trade would speedily revive, and the revenues of their respective colonies gradually expand, and probably most people shared their belief. Experience lent support to this view. But, to the surprise of everybody, the commercial depression, instead of diminishing, increased, and the railways carried less goods instead of more. Generally speaking the Queensland balance-sheet is a discouraging document, but it contains one hopeful item—the receipts from all the sources of revenue, with the exception of the lands, for the June quarter of this year were much in advance of those for the corresponding quarter in last year. In this particular the colony has the advantage of New South Wales, our revenue from Customs and services having been £29,000 less in the June quarter of this year than they were in the June quarter of 1886. In the matter of the railway receipts the contrast is most marked, ours having declined by nearly £20,000, while those of Queensland increased by more than £30,000. What these latter figures indicate is that the sister colony is now shaking off the effects of the drought, and that before long it will probably be again enjoying prosperity. But even if good times should come, great difficulty may be experienced in getting the colony out of its difficulties. Situated as Queensland is, it will take time and good statesmanship to get rid of the nearly half million deficit. Before this can be done the equilibrium between the revenue and expenditure will have to be restored, and it is not likely that that will be effected in a year.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

FROM our cablegrams of this morning it will be seen that the Sobranje has elected Prince Ferdinand, of Saxe-Coburg, as the ruler of Bulgaria. Prince Ferdinand has been mentioned for some time back as a likely candidate, and it has also been intimated that his election would not be objected to by the Powers.

THE English mails ex the Orient Company's steamer Potosi were delivered in Sydney yesterday afternoon. The latest London date is June 3.

YESTERDAY the Mayor of Sydney, accompanied by the Town Clerk, paid a return visit to Lord and Lady Brassey, on board the steam yacht Sunbeam. His Worship also returned the visit of Commander Husmer, of the German fleet, on board the Bismarck, and of Captain Yashijima, of H.I.J.M.Q. Ruijio.

IN the Legislative Council, yesterday, the assent of the Governor was announced to the Bills of Exchange Bill, Patents Act Amendment Bill, Hay Courthouse (Site Acquisition) Bill, Land Titles Commissioners Fees Bill, Colonial Spirits Bill, Tobacco Increased Duty Bill, and the Customs Duties Bill. The Centenary Celebration Bill was read the third time on a division of 19 to 5, and returned to the Assembly; and the Jury Fees Bill was read the second time on a division of 17 to 8, and passed through Committee without amendment. The sitting closed with the third reading of the Assignees of Fire Insurance Policies Enabling Bill and the Willoughby and Gordon Tramway Bill.

FROM statements made in the Legislative Council yesterday it appears to be the intention of the Government to introduce during the next Parliamentary session a bill to consolidate and amend the laws relating to insolvency, and a bill to amend the jury system. The latter subject was brought forward yesterday in the Council by Mr. Simpson, while the Jury Fees Bill was before the House, and both he and Mr. Salomons spoke strongly in favour of reform in the practice by which jurymen are chosen and juries appointed. Mr. Salomons declared that if he were asked what single reform would tend more than anything else to prevent litigation, to prevent speculative actions, and to facilitate the administration of justice, both as to celerity and cheapness, it would be to abolish juries altogether, except in certain cases.

THE Legislative Assembly sat until 10 minutes past 3 o'clock yesterday morning, at which hour the House adjourned until Monday. When the House went into Committee of Supply to consider the Estimates, it was the intention of the Government to pass the postponed Estimates, and also the Additional and Supplementary Estimates introduced in the early part of the sitting by the Colonial Treasurer; but the discussion upon the first of the postponed Estimates—that relating to the Government asylums—was so prolonged, that when 8 o'clock had arrived the committee had not decided the matter, and there was an urgent request made from the Opposition side of the House for an adjournment. Sir Henry Parkes pointed out how necessary it was, in view of the close of the session next week, that business should be proceeded with; but, as it had been found impossible to keep 40 members on the Government side to vote for the introduction of the closure when its application was thought desirable, he was not indisposed to adjourn, if a satisfactory understanding could be arrived at with the Opposition. Ultimately, it was arranged that an adjournment should take place, on the understanding that the Estimates would be disposed of with due expedition on Monday.

IT is the intention of the Government to prorogue Parliament on Wednesday, but it may be found necessary to put off the prorogation for another day. If the Legislative Council had dealt with the Parliamentary Representatives Allowance Bill more expeditiously than they are doing, the prorogation would take place on Tuesday; but inasmuch as the motion for the second reading of that bill is to be moved in the Council on Tuesday, Parliament cannot be prorogued before the following day. The Government do not intend to bring forward in the Assembly, after the Estimates have been considered, anything but the Appropriation Bill, and the private business on the paper will be disposed of on Monday and Tuesday.

A DEPUTATION consisting of the mayors of 10 municipalities in the Newcastle district was introduced to the Colonial Secretary yesterday morning by Mr. Fletcher, member for Newcastle. The purpose of the deputation was to ask the Colonial Secretary to give some assistance to those municipalities, which would enable them to afford some employment to the large number of men who were unable to get work in the district. The desire of the municipalities was that they should be assisted to employ these men, the Government paying half their wages, as had been done in Sydney and some of the surrounding municipalities. It was also pointed out that there was a large quantity of Crown land in the district, some of which could be cleared, and sold at prices which would more than recoup the expenditure, and there were other public works which could be undertaken by the Government. Sir Henry Parkes said that the Government would be willing to assist the municipalities to employ some of this labour on the same conditions as in the previous cases of this kind. With regard to carrying out public works in this district, he stated that if the Government found there were public works in the district upon which they could profitably employ men, they would be glad to do so, and he requested that statements with regard to these proposed works should be forwarded to the Government. The deputation also brought under the Minister's notice the desirability of establishing a museum at Newcastle, and Sir Henry Parkes expressed his entire sympathy with their request, and promised to do the best he could in the matter. The Colonial Secretary subsequently received a deputation from the municipality of Newtown, requesting an increase of the municipal endowment for that borough.

A DEPUTATION, consisting of two gentlemen interested in mining, waited upon the Minister for Mines yesterday and submitted a novel and valuable suggestion to him, namely, that a portion of the prospecting vote of £15,000 should be devoted to boring in search of petroleum oil. Several interesting facts were stated, which are reported elsewhere, and the Minister said that the proposition submitted was a new one, and he did not suppose that there were many people who had considered the possibility of the discovery of petroleum in the colony. That, however, did not prove that it did not exist. If the deputation would submit their views in writing, he would place the matter before the Cabinet and ask them to recommend the appropriation of a sum of money which would enable any districts which might be reported upon by the geological surveyors of the department or indicated by private persons to be tested in the manner proposed.

THREE deputations waited upon the Minister for Lands yesterday. The first, which was introduced by Mr. O'Connor, M.L.A., asked for the grant of a site in Kent-street for the erection of a building for wharf labourers. The second, which was introduced by Mr. Fletcher, M.L.A., was from Newcastle, and directed the Minister's attention to several local requirements. The third, which was introduced by Messrs. Gordon and Mackinnon, M.L.A., urged upon the Minister the necessity of establishing a land court at Temora. In each case Mr. Garrett promised to take into consideration the representations which were made.

THE Minister for Mines has received a letter from Lord Brassey asking him to communicate with the Friendly Societies to the effect that it was the intention of Lord Brassey to throw the Sunbeam open one day next week to a visit from 500 members of the Friendly Societies. Mr. Abigail has communicated with the secretaries of the various Friendly Societies, with a view to the acceptance of Lord Brassey's invitation.

A PETITION is in course of signature in the Kiama district protesting against the erection of the proposed station buildings at Porter's Garden Lagoon. It may be explained that the station at that place was only intended to be used as a temporary structure until such time as the extension of the railway into the town of Kiama can be carried out. That extension would have been completed long ere now but for the local jealousies, which have necessitated the termination of the line at the present point—about a mile and a half from Kiama. The question of extending the line to the town was referred to a select committee of the Legislative Council, who have never presented their report. The Railway Department is in no way responsible for the delay.

IT is officially announced that on and after the 13th instant a length of the Government tramways, commencing at the junction of Blane and Perkin streets, Newcastle, and terminating at the intersection of Mary-street and Cemetery-road, Plattsburg, being a distance of 7 miles 29 chains and 77 links, will be opened for the conveyance of passengers. Yesterday the time-table and fares were published in a supplement to the Government Gazette.

IN consequence of the large number of applications received for copies of Dr. G. A. Tucker's report on the asylums for the insane visited by him, and entitled "Lunacy in many Lands," a circular has been issued from the Colonial Secretary's Office, stating that a supply of the work will be shortly sent to Messrs. Trubner and Co., publishers, 57, Ludgate-hill, London. The Government has decided, in order to prevent misappropriation, to make a nominal charge for each copy.

AN interesting event took place on board the steam yacht Sunbeam yesterday afternoon, when a handsomely illuminated address was presented to Lord and Lady Brassey by a number of gentlemen who were at one time dwellers in Hastings, St. Leonards, and the surrounding district. The steam launch Agenoria, having about 40 ladies and gentlemen on board, left Prince's Stairs at half-past 3 o'clock, and the visitors (amongst whom were Messrs. W. L. Davis, M.L.A., W. Kenwood, A. J. Joseph, late lieutenant-commanding the Hastings Corps of the R.N.A.V., and Gooch) were speedily transferred to the deck of the Sunbeam. Lord and Lady Brassey and Miss Brassey personally welcomed each member of the party, after which the visitors assembled on the quarter-deck, where the address, which was referred to at length in our issue of July 4, was presented by Mr. Davis. Miss Gooch also handed Lady Brassey a splendid bouquet of flowers. Lord Brassey, in reply, said, speaking for Lady Brassey as well as himself, he could say they were deeply touched by the warm welcome which had been tendered to them by the former residents of Hastings and its district. They had given them a token which Lady Brassey and he would always value, and he regarded it as a too grateful appreciation of all that they had been able to do in that neighbourhood. After alluding to the fact that during their early married life they had resided at Hastings for some time, his Lordship said that whatever they might have done for the place had been a privilege and a pleasure to Lady Brassey and himself. He valued much the kind and amiable feelings which had been shown towards them by the former inhabitants of a place which was dear to all of them; and he could assure them that Lady Brassey and himself would always prize the beautiful address which they had been good enough to present to them that afternoon. The visitors were then shown over the Sunbeam and hospitably entertained by Lord and Lady Brassey. On leaving the side of the stately yacht hearty cheers were given for Lady Brassey and "the old town of Hastings."

A VERY pleasant social gathering took place last night at Gunsler's Café, at the invitation of Major P. B. Walker, of the Torpedo and Signal Corps, who entertained at dinner the officers of the corps and several military and civilian friends. The host presided, having on his right Colonel Bingham, R.A., Mr. Frank Hill, Colonel Wells, Colonel Rowe, Commander Lewington; and on his left Major Penrose, R.E., the Hon. J. F. Burns (Colonial Treasurer), Colonel Murphy, and Colonel Jaques. The vice-chair was occupied by Captain Wilson, with Major Remington and Lieutenant Bosanquet, R.N., on either hand. The gathering was of a purely social character, and all present spent the evening most happily.

DURING the past two days the weather has been beautifully bright and fine, with a sharp bracing atmosphere, and the temperature standing at a height that rendered exercise agreeable. In many of the country districts the weather is still unsettled, but the majority of places report fine weather. Heavy frosts have occurred in the southern parts of the colony and in the New England districts.

ON Wednesday evening Mr. Mackay, Instructor in Agriculture, lectured to a large audience at the Technical College Hall, on the subject of fruit culture. Mr. Mackay explained the causes why apples frequently failed to give a satisfactory crop in the metropolitan district, the chief among them being the compactness of stiff soils, want of drainage, and an excess of iron in the soil, as against a deficiency of lime. For planting purposes he recommended careful selection out of the many varieties available, keeping in view the suitability of each to the particular locality. Referring to orange cultivation, the lecturer pointed out that serious results followed from the too common practice of regarding all trees in this climate as hardy, the fact being that choice fruit could be produced nowhere under condition of neglect and starvation. Mr. Mackay explained the best methods of pruning, and went on to speak of the terrible pest of "American blight," in apple trees, and the remedy which he had found most effective to check it. To restore fructivity to sterile pear trees he recommended close pruning, and explained by diagrams how it should be done. The lecture was listened to attentively, and Mr. Mackay was applauded at its close.

OUR readers will remember that a few weeks ago we published a cablegram announcing that the Bishop of Sydney had, in a speech delivered at the Ladies' Department of King's College, offered some strictures on the people of this colony. The speech has now reached us, and a full report from our London correspondent appears on another page.

THE Hawkesbury accident inquest was continued yesterday, and stands further adjourned to Monday. The chief witness yesterday was Mr. Kirkaldie, the assistant traffic-manager, who stated that the only theory he could advance as to the cause of the accident was that the air in the brake apparatus must have been exhausted by the application of the brake while going down the incline. He gave further evidence of some experiments he had witnessed, tending to show the possibility of exhausting the brake power by the repeated application of the brake. He was cross-examined by Mr. Williamson with the view of shaking the value of his evidence upon the use and powers of the Westinghouse brake. The jury will on Monday make an examination of the wheels of one of the carriages, and they wish to hear the evidence of passengers who were in the fourth and fifth carriages, if any such can be found.

A PRELIMINARY meeting of gentlemen interested in the public meeting which is to be held at St. Leonards on Tuesday night, for the purpose of taking the necessary steps to have a suitable demonstration on the occasion of the turning of the first sod of the St. Leonards railway, took place in the Carrington Hall, North Shore, last evening. The Mayor of St. Leonards, Mr. B. Jenkins, occupied the chair. The attendance was small, about a dozen persons being present. The chairman said he had interviewed the contractors' attorney with reference to the suggested public demonstration, and that gentleman had suggested his willingness to help the movement in every way that lay in his power. He also expressed the hope that the demonstration would be held as speedily as possible, as the contractors were desirous of getting on with the work without any unnecessary delay. Mr. Jenkins further stated that Sir Henry Parkes would be asked to turn the first sod of the new railway. He then intimated that he was open to receive suggestions regarding the drafting of the resolutions or other business for Tuesday night's meeting. After a somewhat desultory discussion, the whole of those present were appointed a sub-committee to arrange the business for the aforesaid gathering.

YESTERDAY evening the Commercial, Pastoral, and Agricultural Association held the fourth of their present series of meetings in the Protestant Hall, there being a fairly good attendance of the public. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Young, and two very interesting papers were read, the first on "The Western Division," by Mr. G. Maiden, and the second on "Tenant right in dealing with the public lands," by Mr. W. Cope.

THE inaugural meeting of the Articled Clerks' Association was held at the Supreme Court on Thursday evening, when about 50 members were present. The chair was occupied by the president of the association (Mr. Frederick Chapman, Prothonotary), who had kindly consented to be present. After some preliminary business had been disposed of, and Messrs. M'Kellar and Ford elected auditors to the association, the president gave an address, in which he stated that he thought the members had done wisely in not confining themselves to the discussion of legal subjects. The study of law, he said, to the exclusion of all other topics of general interest, is but too apt to contract the understanding. The study of political economy is vitally essential to every member of the community, and to the members of the association especially, as he trusted that the ambition of some of them at least, in future years, would be to render a liberal and conscientious assistance to the legislation of our country. In studying literature they would find a glorious relaxation from the arduous duties of their profession; that they would thereby be taught that above all things their noblest aim should be a conduct of strict integrity to the interests of their clients, even it may be, to the sacrifice of their own personal advantage. Mr. F. Thornton Gray, a vice-president, in endorsing the president's remarks, gave some sound advice to those present, and spoke highly of the benefits likely to accrue from the association. A debate, the subject of which was, "That the amalgamation of both branches of the legal profession is desirable," was opened in the affirmative by Mr. Hale, and responded to in the negative by Mr. Steel. After a lively discussion, in which a number of members took part, the question was decided in the negative by a large majority. A vote of thanks to the chairman having been carried by acclamation, the meeting terminated.

THE first half-yearly meeting of the Hurstville Literary and Debating Club was held at Hurstville on the 5th instant, for the purpose of considering the committee's report and electing officers for the ensuing half-year. The report was adopted, and showed the club to be in a prosperous condition. The election resulted as follows:—Mr. T. J. Nicholson, president; Messrs. R. Norman and Cahill, vice-presidents; Mr. L. Tiddy, treasurer; and Mr. G. F. Brown, secretary.

THE Annandale Protection Association, at their second meeting, elected the following officers:—Mr. J. Young, president; Messrs. D. Campbell, D. Brodie, and P. Nowland, vice-presidents; Mr. Fraser, hon. treasurer; and Mr. W. H. Burne, hon. secretary. Messrs. Ealhorne, Nowland, Campbell, and Burne addressed the meeting; and the secretary, Mr. W. H. Burne, stated that the number of members enrolled was 42.

THE Hunter's Hill Ratepayers' Association held its monthly meeting last Thursday. The report of the committee stated that 12 new members had joined; that, as a result of a petition on the subject, an early mail now left for Sydney at 6.30 a.m., thus affording increased postal facilities; and that the roads, to which attention had been called at last meeting, were being repaired. A conversation took place as to the right of a ratepayers' association to the free use of the Municipal-chambers, and also as to the necessity for placing the names of streets at convenient places; and then the question of introducing gas into the borough was fully discussed, and a motion forwarded to the Mayor, to the effect that the ratepayers were desirous of enjoying the advantages of gas, if it could be obtained on reasonable terms. A motion was carried desiring the council to supply sufficient seats for the hall, as at present those who hire the council-chambers for any purpose have to bring their own chairs with them. A letter was also addressed to the Mayor, inviting his attention to the footpaths in Ferry and Alexandra streets, which are being gradually raised to the damage of adjoining properties. The association holds its meetings in the assembly room of the Gladstone Hotel, pending the Mayor's decision on an application for the use of the council-chambers.

A PUBLIC meeting was held at Cloke's Hotel, Liverpool, on Thursday evening to consider the desirability of forming a protection association. There were about 60 persons present, and Mr. N. G. Bull was voted to the chair. Messrs. H. Richardson, J. Bergan, John Thorpe, and others addressed the meeting during the evening, and it was decided to form a Protection Political Association. The constitution of the Granville and Parramatta associations was adopted, and 26 members were enrolled. After according votes of thanks to the chairman and visitors, the meeting adjourned for a week for the election of officers.

THE New South Wales Bee-keepers' Association, which has been recently formed, held a meeting on Tuesday night, the 7th instant, at No. 92, Pitt-street. The objects of the association are the advancement and encouragement of bee-keeping and the prevention of the importation and sale of adulterated honey. The principal business brought before the meeting was to appoint a sub-committee to draw up rules, and another to consider the question of adulteration.

THE tenth annual exhibition of the New South Wales Poultry Society takes place on the 20th instant and three following days at the Exhibition Building, Prince Alfred Park; and from the splendid list of entries registered, representing upwards of 1500 exhibits in the various sections of poultry, pigeons, cage birds, and dogs, the show should prove exceptionally characteristic and interesting. A new and important feature will be the addition of the canine classes, in which a number of first-class specimens will be exhibited; but interesting to the poultry fanciers particularly will be the opportunity of viewing the admirable specimens of imported fowls that will be shown by Mr. Pemell and others. The committee have been actively at work for some time past in completing their preliminary arrangements. The appointment of judges has been specially considered, and no doubt that the gentlemen chosen will do their best to give satisfaction.

THE monthly meeting of the Animals Protection Society was held on Wednesday last. There were present—Messrs. E. Fosbery (presiding), H. D. Maddock, W. W. Stephen, W. Beaumont, the secretary J. Sidney, and Inspector G. Webber. The result of the inspection of the night-cab horses was reported. The inspector, in company with an officer of the Transit Commission, having spent several nights during the last month in visiting the cab stands, several horses were found totally unfit for work, and ordered to be taken out, and seven cases of grosser cruelty prosecuted. The inspector has also visited the steamers when discharging cattle brought from Queensland. Summary of cases for the month:—Convictions, 17. Analysis of:—For flogging horses, 2; working decrepit horses, 11; working horses suffering from wounds, 3; and insufficient stabling, 1; 33 cautions were issued; 5 complaints received, and 5 cases investigated.

A PUBLIC meeting, presided over by the incumbent, was held in the schoolroom of St. Stephen's Church, Penrith, on Wednesday, the 6th instant, to take into consideration the dilapidated state of the parsonage, and to devise means for repairing it. Plans and specifications were submitted and a resolution moved for their adoption, but an amendment was unanimously carried, with much applause—"That in lieu of repairing the old building a new parsonage should be erected at once." An influential building committee was appointed, and about £130 subscribed or promised in the room.

WE have been shown, by Mr. W. T. Cunningham, of the Tourist Bureau, Bridge-street, proof copies of a series of photographs of Lord Brassey's yacht, the Sunbeam. They represent:—(1) The yacht as she lies in Farm Cove; (2) a deck view, looking aft; (3) the dining-saloon; and (4) Lady Brassey's drawing-room. The two first photographs are capitally executed. The numerous lines and ropes show up clearly and distinctly, and the graceful form of the yacht is seen to perfection. In those showing the interiors, are revealed all the luxuries of the cabin accommodation; and the pictures and various bric-a-brac can be distinguished nearly as plainly as if one were present. That showing Lady Brassey's deckhouse is especially good; and the whole devolve credit upon the artist. We have also received from Messrs. Freeman and Co., of George-street, another photograph of the Sunbeam. It includes some small craft that happened to be sailing round the far-famed yacht at the time. The view was taken by the instantaneous process, and clearly discloses the build and proportions of the vessel.

ON Thursday evening Mr. H. Denton, on behalf of Mr. James Pain, kindly provided a very handsome display of fireworks for the amusement of the patients at the Callan Park Hospital for the Insane, and the novel treat was thoroughly enjoyed by the patients, about 500 of whom were present. The grounds were illuminated with coloured fires, and the Naval Volunteer Artillery band added to the enjoyment of the evening by a selection of well-rendered music.

THE installation of officers for the current term of the Endeavour Lodge, No. 6 Protestant Alliance Friendly Society of Australia, Ashfield, was conducted on Thursday evening by D.D.G.M. Bro. R. B. Howe. The reports and balance sheet were read showing that the lodge was steadily progressing.

ON Tuesday evening a large congregation assembled in the Marrickville Congregational Church to hear the Rev. Dr. Jefferis discourse on "Conversation and gossip." Dr. Jefferis's eloquent and instructive lecture was listened to with marked attention and delight. Previous to the lecture a short service was conducted by the Rev. Robert Dey, minister of the church, assisted by the Rev. E. H. Wright, of St. Clement's (Church of England). This is, we understand, the first of a series of week day sermons to be delivered on successive Tuesday evenings. The presence of a well-trained choir added much to the enjoyment of the service.

A SOCIAL, in connection with the Sabbath-morning Fellowship Association, was held in the Glebe Presbyterian Church schoolroom on the evening of the 6th instant, and was attended by about 70 young ladies and gentlemen. Tea was provided at half-past 6 o'clock, after which the company listened to addresses delivered by Messrs. J. Riddell (Balmain), T. Lundy (Newtown), and N. Livingstone (Glebe). A programme of music was rendered during the evening, and the visitors dispersed after according a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman, the Rev. A. Gardiner, and others who had assisted in providing the entertainment.

MR. ATKINS, secretary to the Sydney Diocesan Registry, writes to inform us that he has just received a letter from the Primate, dated Bristol, June 2, in which the following passage occurs:—"I am starting (D.V.) on the 8th June, via America, and hope to arrive at Sydney from San Francisco, by the Alameda, on July 26th." The Primate also states that Mrs. Barry is much better, the change of climate having proved very beneficial.

THE Adelaide Jubilee Exhibition is the subject of an article by our special reporter, published in another part of to-day's issue. In it the principal features of the exposition are described; the more attractive of the exhibits are mentioned; a comparison is instituted between the display from New South Wales and those from other colonies; and reference is made to some of the essentials of a completely designed exhibition which are absent from that now being held in Adelaide.

THE letter of our St. Petersburg correspondent, which will be found in another column, furnishes some details of the recent trial and execution of Nihilists for an attempt upon the Czar's life. It also gives some interesting facts with respect to the effect of the Customs policy of Germany and the "war of tariffs" between that country and Russia. Amongst other subjects dealt with are the visit of the Czar to the country of the Cossacks, and the harvest prospects, which are stated to be very promising.

THE letter of our London correspondent will be found in another column. It gives an account of Mr. Chamberlain's Birmingham conference, and the subject of the present position of political parties. It also affords information respecting the appeal to the Wesleyans on the subject of the Crimea Fund. Some valuable facts are given in connection with the meeting of the Co-operative Congress at Carlisle, relative to the results of co-operation. The other principal topics touched upon are the proposed Antarctic Expedition, the Jubilee illuminations of the offices of the Agents-General for the Colonies, and the Imperial Institute.

SPEAKING of misleading reports in connection with the lecture by Dr. Barry, our London correspondent, in his letter of June 3, remarks:—"Some misleading reports have appeared in one or two of the newspapers here of the Bishop of Sydney's lecture on Monday, and consequently there has been a little adverse criticism of his remarks in Anglo-Australian circles. The fuller report, which will no doubt appear in another portion of your columns, will enable the people of New South Wales to form their own opinion as to Dr. Barry's observations upon them. It was a very gratifying tribute to the influence which he exercised while at King's College that he should have gathered so large and fashionable an audience to hear him as was the case.

THE Mount Morgan (West) Gold Mine, Limited, is again in trouble, says our London correspondent in his letter of June 3, on that date three directors of the company—Messrs. E. Barnett, R. Jenkins, and Ogle—having been summoned to the Mansion House at the instance of Mr. Nicholson, the holder of 200 shares in the company, for knowingly making false representations in the prospectus issued last October. The result of the proceedings had not transpired at the date of the letter.

OUR London correspondent in his letter of June 3 says:—"Mr. Labouchere, M.P., seems to be in a disagreeable mood towards your colony this week, for in his paper Truth he has two rather spiteful remarks about matters connected with New South Wales. Concerning the appointment of Canon Camidge to the Bishopric of Bathurst, Mr. Labouchere says that the diocese seems to have got along pretty well without a bishop ever since the last prelate, Dr. Marsden, resigned the see a couple of years ago, and there does not seem any particular reason for appointing one now. I am enabled this week to give a few personal particulars respecting the new Bishop of Bathurst. He belongs to a well-known Yorkshire family, being the son of Canon Camidge, Vicar of Wakefield—not Goldsmith's Vicar—and is great grandson of the first organist of York Minster of that name. He was born at Nether Poppleton Vicarage, was educated at St. Peter's School, York, and Wadham College, Oxford, where he graduated as B.A. in 1859 and M.A. in 1861. He received his ordination at the hands of Archbishop Langley, and his first curacy was that of the parish church at Sheffield to which he was licensed in 1860. Two years afterwards he assumed the curacy of the parish church of Wakefield, where he laboured for five years. While at Wakefield, he took an active part in the restoration of the parish church, and commenced and carried on a night school, which contained seven hundred pupils, taught by fifty-six voluntary teachers, out of which was developed the Wakefield Industrial and Fine Art Exhibition. These labours had a prejudicial effect upon his health and necessitated a rest of six months, which time he spent in America. On his return the Archbishop of York presented him to the vicarage of Hedon, which he found in a very disorganised condition. After having effected a complete restoration of this parish, Mr. Camidge was in 1873, appointed to the rectory of Weldrake, and, in 1876, to the vicarage in Thirsk, in both of which places he found plenty of scope for his organising and administrative energy. In 1882 he was made canon and prebend of Wetwarg, in York Cathedral, and rural dean of Thirsk in the following year. Last year he was elected proctor for the Archdeaconry of Cleveland, and, at the close of his year of office, was re-elected without opposition. He is a married man, a popular preacher, and a good fluent public speaker. It is believed that his consecration will take place in York Cathedral, instead of Westminster Abbey, which is the place usually selected for the consecration of colonial prelates.

A CORRESPONDENT, referring to the agitation for changing the name of this colony after the completion of its Centenary, heartily approves the idea, and suggests that Heliopia should be the new name, which, he says, signifies a "land or province of sunshine." Such a name, he conceives, would be peculiarly suited to a country celebrated for its genial climate.

A CORRESPONDENT who signs himself "A Traveller" draws attention to the state of Canterbury-road, between Cook's River and Balmain. He says that, compared with any road in the district, it would carry off the palm for endangering the limbs of travellers, and the springs of vehicles are being continually broken in consequence of the roughness of the road. He thinks that the large number of persons who are compelled to use this road, bad as it is, are entitled to some consideration.

AT an early hour yesterday morning a man named James Donovan, 20 years of age, a labourer, residing in Union-street, Pyrmont, was taken to the Sydney Hospital for treatment. The patient had been stabbed in the back and was suffering from a rather nasty wound. Police-constable Nolan, of No. 2 station, who conveyed Donovan to the hospital, stated that the patient was quarrelling at the time of the occurrence with a Frenchman, the dispute being connected with a young woman, for whom both the disputants seemed to have a regard. The medical man who attended the patient found a wound an inch in width, extending upwards and outwards a distance of 4½ inches, on the upper part of the right side of the back.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

A telegram has been received stating that the woman Mephan, who is believed to have murdered her sister at Wangaratta, has been arrested at Wagga Wagga. The prisoner had frequently ill-used and beaten the deceased, and had threatened to take her life. Quarrels were caused by the desire of the prisoner to possess the property of her sister; and her anxiety lest Mrs. Callow should leave it to another sister. The place where the body was discovered gave evidence of a severe struggle having occurred. The head of the deceased was partly buried in soft mud, and was surrounded by a pool of clotted blood. It was battered in at the back, and there were several cuts visible on the temple as well as cuts on the face, and the eyes were bruised. In the yard was found a bottle upon which were grey hairs and blood. The deceased was a widow about 60 years of age, and the prisoner is a little younger.

It is proposed to bring out over 1000 Skye crofters, and settle them on the land, and Mrs. Baillie desires to make arrangements whereby each of the crofters may secure a freehold. AMUSEMENTS.

THE ZERBINI QUARTETT.

The well-known Zerbini Quartett combination, having come to Sydney for the purpose of giving a short series of chamber-music concerts, made their first appearance at the hall of the Y. M. C. A. last evening. The fact that only on the previous evening a concert of similar nature had been given at the same place by a quartett party of local origin, and hence attracting local sympathy, might have been expected to have some influence on the attendance. The fact, however, that the Zerbini Quartett has so well established a reputation, being composed of artists of proven worth whose fame is not confined to the place of their habitation, was a set off against the circumstance referred to, and it might reasonably have been anticipated that a full house would have been obtained, the more so as the highest patronage had been accorded, including his Excellency the Governor and the hon. Lady Carrington, Sir Alfred Stephen, and a host of influential gentlemen. Since the attendance was only moderate as regards numbers on this occasion, it is to be hoped that for the credit of the place, a large increase will take place for the remaining concerts, for it would hardly be creditable that a really first-class entertainment should be neglected.

The celebrated Schumann quintett (opus 44) must be allowed the place of chief importance in the programme. This work is recorded by Philipp Spitta, the litterateur and the biographer of Schumann, to have created an indescribable impression when first produced, revealing "a new paradise of beauty" which at the time was hardly dreamt of. It is even allowed to be the best piece of chamber music written since the immortal works of Beethoven were given to the world, holding its exalted place not only by reason of its great originality and wonderful power of expression, but also because replete with beauty such as enchains the attention of even those who lack the power to appraise fully its more sterling merits. Though in outward form it consists of the conventional four movements, yet there is nothing conventional about their individual treatment. The opening number is an allegro brilliante in E flat, which begins in full harmony for all the instruments, before their separate characteristics are employed. In this, it is especially notable that while the pianoforte part is so full that even by itself it gives a fair representation of the concrete effect, yet the strings are so judiciously handled that they retain individual importance, so that nothing could be dispensed with without injury to the general result, even when apparently employed merely to reinforce what the piano enunciates. Later on, where the 'cello has a short melodic phrase (the second subject), and is answered by the viola, which inverts the passage while it echoes it, the pianoforte merely accompanying in detached chords, is perhaps one of the most pleasing, while it is certainly one of the most ingenious parts of the movement. The second number is "in moda d'una marcia," and its steady rhythmical flow renders it, perhaps, the most popular of all. The theme is announced in the simplest possible way at first, afterwards there occurs a most ingenious mixing of triplets for the piano with quadruplets for the second violin and tenor, while the first violin and 'cello complete the harmony, with sustained melodic phrases. An almost overpowering effect is created when the theme re-enters towards the close, accompanied by staccato pianoforte passages. The scherzo is furnished with two trios, the first being in placid melodic style, while the second is altogether a departure from custom, the trio being generally the simplest part, while here it is most elaborate. The finale is intensely impassioned in style, the general effect being so cleverly managed that in breadth of tone it is almost orchestral, and the coda is of altogether exceptional brilliancy. The production of this great work should alone make the concert memorable, and it was so finely rendered, despite its manifold technical difficulties, that its performance should alone suffice to stamp the artists engaged as of the highest merit.

Mendelssohn's E flat quartett (one of the set of three dedicated to the Prince of Sweden, and by a strange coincidence bearing the same opus number as that of the Schumann quintett) consists of an allegro vivace, a scherzo in C minor, an adagio in A flat, with finale (molto allegro con fuoco) in the original key of the piece. Of the four movements the light tripping scherzo is perhaps most characteristic of the composer, the excessively delicate treatment of the strings even in rapid movement being one of Mendelssohn's specially noticeable styles. But the melodious adagio movement is that which seemed to be most admired by the audience, its graceful progressions securing warm approval. Regarding the performance of both of these masterpieces it would, indeed, be difficult to speak too highly. There was throughout a perfection of accord only possible of being attained by the continual habit of playing together, from which habit, also, alone can come that sympathy of feeling whence flows that uniform conception and mode of expression that makes chamber music so rich a delight when adequately rendered. Not only were the broad, general effects of light and shade perfectly expressed, but every refinement and delicacy were attended to with the utmost nicety, evidencing not only familiarity with the compositions, but also demonstrating how carefully the composers had been studied so as to do the utmost justice to their works.

Dussek's B flat sonata for violin and piano calls for no special mention. It is entirely conventional in form and treatment, though doubtless to many its simple and melodious style afforded a relief from the more severe works already mentioned. Mr. T. H. Guenett and Mr. G. Weston were here associated, and high praise must be accorded for their very acceptable performance. Nothing was wanting on the part of either artist. The violin was made to produce its fullest and richest tones, bowing and phrasing being of the highest merit; while the pianist, with his clear touch add facile execution, brought from his instrument all that could be desired.

Mr. Armes Beaumont, who was the vocalist of the evening, is always sure of a hearty welcome, having earned his laurels on many a platform and stage. It must be confessed that his rendering of Beethoven's "Adelaide" was hardly equal to his general style; the reading was somewhat too literal, the song being well sung indeed, but still not altogether satisfactorily interpreted. The artist is one who may be expected to stand between the composer and the audience, to read between the lines of the mere notation, and tell the audience what he there finds—telling them something more than at first sight would appear to be actually written, and telling them more than the generality of persons might be supposed to find for themselves. All this may be done without any imputation of the personality of the performer intruding on the sacred rights of the composer; and it is this which therefore should be done, and also which may be fairly looked for from the true artist. In Blumenthal's sweetly expressive song, "Sans Adieu," Mr. Beaumont was in his best form, and gave a really admirable rendering of the composition; so much so that he would have been compelled to sing again had not encores been prohibited. As it was, he had to bow his acknowledgements. In the vocal numbers, Mr. Zerbini acted as accompanist. Messrs. Weston, Curtis, Zerbini, and Reimers, will all, it is hoped, give opportunities for hearing them separately before the season ends, as well as Mr. Guenett, who, as a solo-player, has earned so good a name. The second concert for the season is announced for Tuesday in next week, when Lady Carrington has signified her intention of being present, on which occasion, it may be hoped, this most deserving concert company will be rewarded by the largest possible attendance.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.

A very large and enthusiastic audience witnessed Miss Palmer's final performance in Sydney, previous to her departure for America by the July mail, at the New Opera House last evening, when she appeared as Lady Constance Evandale in the pretty musical first piece "Ring and Keeper," and as Pert in Frederick Marsden's charming comedy "Pert and her Stepmother." Miss Palmer was received with great cordiality, and her artistic acting and sweet singing evoked the most spontaneous applause. When the curtain fell on "Ring and Keeper" Miss Palmer was loudly called for, and on her appearance, the United States Consul (Mr. G. W. Griffin) presented the American comedienne with a graceful souvenir of her successful season in the Australian colonies, after the following speech:—"Miss Palmer,—I have been asked by a number of your American friends in Sydney to present to you this portfolio of Australasian views, as a slight token of the high esteem in which they hold your gifts as an actress, and your character as a gentlewoman. These views are artists' proofs, executed by your countrymen, whose genius, like your own, has met with recognition in this distant land. During your brief stay here you have gladdened us with some of the most delightful impersonations known to the modern stage; impersonations which combine all the grace, beauty, tenderness, and innocence of childhood, and all the strength, passion, firmness, and constancy of true womanhood. In thus expressing our admiration of your gifts as an actress we are not unmindful of the still more lofty attributes you have displayed in the relations of private life and in the noble charities you have bestowed in various cities in the old and new world. I now ask you to accept these sketches of a land which has been made brighter because you have visited it." Miss Palmer made a sympathetic reply, in which she announced that she would return to the Australian colonies in the course of a few months. Her little speech excited great applause, and she was the recipient of many beautiful floral offerings. With the representation last evening, Miss Palmer concluded a phenomenally successful season in Sydney, extending over 11 weeks, during which time both this artiste and the members of Mr. John R. Rogers' company have proved popular with all sorts and conditions of our playgoers.

This evening Mr. B. N. Jones will commence a dramatic season at the New Opera House, when Messrs. Petritt and Conquest's sensational drama, "Sentenced to Death," will be produced. Mr. B. N. Jones will appear in his well-known creation of Hoyley Snayle. Mrs. B. N. Jones, as Dolly, will make her first appearance in Sydney. Miss Alice Norton will appear as Mary Maldon, and Miss Bessie Collier as Nelly. Mr. H. C. Sidney will appear as John Maldon Mr. Robert Vernon as Geoffrey Hawkestone, Mr. A. W. H. Plumstead as Harry Hawkestone, Mr. W. H. Hubert as Fred Maldon, Mr. J. Hesford as Giles Lout, and minor characters by the members of the company. New scenery has been painted for this melo-drama, which will be produced under the personal direction of Mr. B. N. Jones.

MR. PARKER'S SHAKESPEARIAN RECITAL.

A Shakespearian recital was given last evening, at the New Masonic Hall, by Mr. T. Parker. Mr. Charles Moore, described as stage manager on the programme, acted as chairman, and before the entertainment commenced informed the audience that Mr. Parker, who was about to make his first appearance in public, claimed consideration from the fact that he was a working man in the Railway Department, but having a noble aspiration to become something better, had devoted many years to the study of Shakespeare, having taken lessons from the well-known, though now deceased, Shakespearian scholar, Mr. Wm. Hoskings. It was Mr. Parker's intention, if he met with success, to give occasional recitals, going through the whole of Shakespeare's plays. Mr. Parker was then introduced, and received a cordial welcome from the audience, which was, however, a meagre one. He commenced with the murder scene in the first act of "Macbeth," and essayed to depict the leading characters. He next gave an extract from the fourth act of "King Lear," then the first act of "Hamlet," the third act of "The Merchant of Venice," and the first act of "Richlieu," and by his recitals proved that he was a zealous student of Shakespeare. He knew the parts he played very well, and recited all the lines from memory with considerable ease. His voice is rather deep and strong, but markedly wanting in flexibility. Having a very impure enunciation, he entirely failed to make his words heard. There was plenty of sound, but the utterance was indistinct. A great deal of practice is required for the proper management of the voice, and this is the practice Mr. Parker will have to take if he wishes to gain any measure of success as an elocutionist. There was an absence of that self-consciousness which makes people look awkward when they come before us on the stage, but Mr. Parker's actions and motions were not always as graceful as the canons of art dictate. The audience favoured the reciter with a recall after each performance. A small orchestra played musical selections during the evening.

MERCANTILE ROWING CLUB BALL.

The Mercantile Rowing Club ball committee met on Friday night, at the Oxford Hotel, and completed all the necessary arrangements for holding their twelfth annual ball, which is to take place at the Town Hall on Wednesday next, the 13th instant. Mr. E. Needs has been requested to supply the music and act as M.C., while Messrs. Baumann, of Pitt-street, have been entrusted with the catering. The programme this year is, as usual with the M. R. C., a special feature of the ball. Printed in gold on a tinted card is the usual announcement of date, &c.; on the front, stamped in relief and colours, is a charmingly-designed dolphin entwined round an ornamental paddle, surrounded by seaweed, and a scroll bearing the words "Mercantile Rowing Club." On the back a die of the club's monogram is stamped also in relief. His Worship the Mayor has promised to be present. There will be only a limited number of guests, and the committee intend to spare no pains to eclipse last year's gathering if possible.

MANLY AQUARIUM.

It will be recollected that shortly after opening this institution the proprietors offered to the season ticket-holders an opportunity of gaining a prize of £50, to be given to that one amongst them who should guess a number nearest to the actual number of persons who entered the Aquarium through the turnstiles between January 1 and June 30, 1887. The reading of the turnstiles was taken at the end of last month, and showed 64,903 had passed through them during that period. The nearest number to this was that given by Mrs. A. Davidson, who named 60,142 as her guess, and she has accordingly been awarded the prize. The skating, which now takes place in the great hall on Wednesday and Thursday, has proved a great attraction, and the tanks are now looking their best, and well repay a visit.

"A Run of Luck" has attracted large audiences during the week at the Theatre Royal, and last evening a crowded house witnessed the performance. Miss Kate Bishop as Daisy Copsley gained great applause for her finished acting and the dramatic power she displayed. Mr. Bland Holt as Charlie Sandown amused his audience by his artistic character-acting as the rakish blackleg. Miss Ida Herberte as Mabel Selby gave a graceful and pleasing performance. Mr. Herbert Flemming as George Selby, played with force and talent, and the members of Mr. Bland Holt's company were efficient in their respective roles. This evening the performance will be given under the patronage and in the presence of his Excellency the Governor, Lady Carrington and suite.

The final performance of "Skipped by the Light of the Moon" was witnessed by a good audience at the Criterion Theatre last evening. Mr. John Gourlay as Obadiah Dingle won great applause for his clever performance. Mr. W. Warner as Felix Cackle was very amusing, and his songs were well received. Miss Maggie Oliver as Mrs. Obadiah Dingle, Miss Amy Horton as Sarah, and the members of Mr. Gourlay's company were most successful in the parts allotted to them. This evening a new and original comedy, in three acts, by Mr. William Manning, entitled "Kindred Souls," will be produced for the first time in the colonies. Mr. John Gourlay will appear as Frank Featherly, Miss Julia Esmond as Polly Drake, Miss Maggie Oliver as Mrs. Fontenoy Flutterwig, Miss Amy Horton as Lucy, Miss Fanny Montagu as Fanny Featherly, Miss Eva Gordon as Mary Mayberry, Mr. W. Warner as Murphy Winkle, Mr. C. Brown as Fontenoy Flutterwig, Mr. George Melville as Captain Bunthunder Drake, Mr. H. Teece as Professor Steerman, and Mr. George Forbes as Mark Mayberry.

A season of English and comic opera will be inaugurated at the Gaiety Theatre this evening. The opera to be produced on the occasion will be Planquette's ever popular "Les Cloches De Corneville." Signor Verdi will appear as Henri, Marquis of Corneville; Miss Minna Fischer as Germaine, and Miss Ivanova as Serpolette, Mr. Edwin Lester as Father Gaspard, Mr. Arthur Farley as The Baillee, Mr. George Dean as Gobo, and Mr. Edward Allen as Grenicheux. A large chorus and an efficient orchestra, led by Mons. Willomoff, under the direction of Mons. Leon Caron, have been provided, and comic opera at such low prices as 3s., 2s., and 1s., should prove popular.

Last evening Shakespeare's tragedy "Hamlet" was produced at the Royal Standard Theatre. Mr. Dampier appeared in his well-known impersonation of the Prince of Denmark, and won warm applause for his intellectual performance. Miss Katherine Russell pleased her audience as Ophelia, and the members of Mr. Dampier's Company were successful in their respective roles. This evening Charles Reade's popular drama, "It's never too late to Mend" will be revived. Mr. Dampier will appear in his well-known character, Tom Robinson, supported by Miss Lily Dampier as Susan Merton. Mr. Sam Poole has been specially engaged for the part of Jacky Jacky, the aboriginal, and other characters will be sustained by the members of the Standard Company.

The juvenile "Fun on the Bristol" Company attracted a fair house at the Academy of Music last evening, and the performance was much appreciated by the audience. This afternoon a matinee will be given, commencing at 2 o'clock, when half price will be charged to all parts of the house. To-night an entire change of songs will be introduced into the second act, and Miss Maudie Morrison will make her first appearance with this company.

Mr. Frank Smith's company attracted a large house at the Alhambra Music Hall last evening, and the excellent programme was much appreciated. The songs, dances, and sketches contributed by the members of the company were received with great applause. There will be the usual change on Monday evening.

Mr. Locke Richardson will give a matinee this afternoon at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, when he will present a miscellaneous programme, including "Enoch Arden," "David and Goliath," "Paul's farewell to the Ephesians," and selections from Shakespeare, Dickens, and Mark Twain. On Monday evening next Mr. Richardson will give his farewell recital in Sydney, when he will present, by special request, Shakespeare's tragedy "Othello," under the patronage and in the presence of Sir Alfred Stephen.

The Columbia Skating Rink attracted a large attendance last evening. A skating contest took place between Mr. H. J. Wallace and Mr. J. L. Jones during the evening, and excited considerable interest. The rink will be open to the public as usual this afternoon and this evening.

The mechanical model of the Strasburg Clock continues to attract considerable patronage at the Apollo Hall, Market-street, where it is on view daily.

In our notice yesterday of the concert given by the Beethoven quartette on Thursday evening it was inadvertently omitted to be mentioned that Lady Carrington and party from Government House not only bestowed their patronage on the occasion, but honoured the performers by their presence.

ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL SCHOOL.

At the Chapter House yesterday afternoon, a large number of ladies and gentlemen attended to see the distribution of prizes to the boys of St. Andrew's Cathedral School. Sir Alfred Stephen, C.B., G.C.M.G., presided, and Archdeacon King and the Rev. A. R. Rivers were also on the platform.

In handing the prizes to the winners, Sir Alfred Stephen addressed a few appropriate remarks to each boy, and at the conclusion of the distribution made a short speech to the boys, in which he advised them to be persevering, industrious, and obedient; cautioned them against selfishness, and held up to them as a good motto the golden rule of life—to do to others as they would be done by.

The following is the prize list:—A. Hillyar, head boy; W. Munk, geography and history; B. Hayward, English; A. Trasey, Scripture; A. Byron, head boy, 2nd division; W. Franklin, 2nd boy; W. Toogood, Latin; N. Clough, head boy, 3rd division; S. Toogood, 2nd; A. Byron, drawing; S. Hayward and E. Dowling, choir singing.

The Rev. A. R. RIVERS gave a few particulars concerning the school, and the improvement made by the boys in singing. He said the average attendance of the boys during the past year was about 40, and that the school had just completed the seventh year of its existence.

Archdeacon KING announced that he had received a letter from Bishop Barry, the Primate, in which the Bishop stated that he expected to be in Sydney again about the 26th instant, but that his wife, though much improved in health, would remain in the old country. He then moved a vote of thanks to Sir Alfred Stephen for his kindness in coming to distribute the prizes. This was seconded by the Rev. C. F. Garnsey, and carried by acclamation.

A very nice little concert was then given. It opened with Mozart's Trio in C, for piano, violin, and 'cello, played by Rev. A. R. Rivers, and Messrs. Rice and Quinn respectively. The trio is a fine piece of chamber music, comprising three movements—allegro, andante cantabile, and allegro, all of which are bright and pleasing. It was well played and proved very entertaining. Mr. A. J. Searl sang "Queen of the Earth," (Pinsuti), and the duet "Excelsior" was rendered by Messrs. Searl and G. Flower. A double quartette, consisting of Messrs. A. J. Searl, G. Berry, S. A. Steane, A. P. Cooper, J. S. Sayers, G. Flower, J. S. Briggs, and Gilliam, sang in good style the glees, "When Evening's Twilight," "The Three Huntsmen," "The Rifleman," and "The Two Roses," and the whole was terminated with the National Anthem.

Since the Adelaide Steamship Company entered the trade between Adelaide and Sydney, via Melbourne, they have met with a large measure of support from both passengers and shippers; and in order to afford additional facilities for their patrons they have just completed a long lease of half the Lime-street Wharf, the other half being used by the Newcastle Steamship Company, from whom the lease has been obtained. The Adelaide, which sails to-day, will be the last of the company's steamers to go from the C. and R. R. S. N. Company's Wharf, the Victorian, which is to be despatched next Saturday, leaving from Lime-street. The latter wharf is not only central, but is easy of approach, and it should meet the ends the company have in view in obtaining it.

The following passengers are booked by the M. M. Company's steamer Natal, Captain A. Such, to leave to-day for Marseilles, via ports:—For Marseilles: Mr. J. Pester, Mr. J. Lintand 8 children. The Prospect, a Norwegian barque, hailing from Arendal, made her first appearance in this port yesterday, although she is no stranger to Australian waters. The Prospect is from Tacoma, Puget Sound, with lumber, and has occupied 74 days on the passage. Captain Wold reports that she cleared from Port Townsend on April 25, and had northerly and N.W. winds to 30° N., and moderate trades from there to 10° N. Easterly winds followed, and there were three or four days of squally weather before the S. E. trades were fallen in with, in 3° N. The Equator was crossed in 154° W., and E.N.E. winds were met with from there all through the trade belt until the barque was off the Fiji Islands, when they gave place to westerly winds. These, blowing moderate, lasted for about 10 days, and were succeeded by light variable winds and calms, which were kept till 16° E. was reached. Fresh southerly and S.S.W. winds prevailed thence till the vessel reached the Heads on Tuesday, when a buster from the westward drove her off the land again. The Prospect was towed in by the Irresistible, and anchored in Neutral Bay.

The steamer Wellington crossed the Port Macquarie bar at 8.30 p.m. on the 6th instant, and arrived in Sydney at 2 a.m. on the 8th. Experienced strong S.W. winds and head seas throughout. Cargo: 253 bags maize, 1 coop poultry, 7 cases eggs, 1 bale sheepskins, 8 quarter casks wine, and sundries.

The barque Don Nicolas was towed to a discharging berth at Cowper Wharf yesterday.

The Shaw Savill and Albion Company, which runs a direct line of steamers from London to New Zealand ports, has declared a dividend of 5 per cent. for the past year.

Those who have been privileged to enter the sacred precincts of the library at Lloyd's, will have noticed there (says the "Lookout Man" in Fair Play) an "old arm chair" of peculiar build, which is known as the Lutine chair. This piece of furniture has been an honoured curiosity of the library for many years. The wood used for making the chair was obtained from the wreck of H.M.S. Lutine, which was lost off the coast of Holland in 1799, while carrying to Hamburg a large amount of specie from merchants in London. As a result of quite recent operations upon the old wreck, two cannons, which formed part of the armament of the vessel, have been recovered. These guns have been under the sea for nearly 100 years, and this fact invests them with a peculiar interest. The committee of Lloyd's have moved the Secretary for War to ask the Queen to accept one of the guns; the other has been offered to and accepted by the corporation of London.

The "Lookout Man" in Fair Play states:—"I hear that the Peninsular and Oriental Company have placed in the hands of Messrs. Caird and Co., Greenock, an order for a steamer to take the place of the Tasmania, which was recently wrecked off the island of Corsica. The dimensions of the new steamer will be—Length, 400 feet; breadth, 46 feet; and depth, 30 feet 9 inches."

The T. S. N. Company's steamer Corinna, hence to Launceston, arrived at Low Heads at 9 o'clock on Thursday night.

A cablegram was received by Mr. J. Williams yesterday, stating that the steamer Janet Nicoll left Auckland for this port at 11.35 a.m.

The barque Presto left the harbour last night in tow of the Young Bungaree, for Newcastle, where she is to load coal for Lyttelton.

The Sea Bird, for Auckland, via Newcastle, was taken in tow last night by the Duckenfield for the latter port.

The brig Minore was taken in tow for Newcastle last night.

The steamer Elamang left Cooktown at 10 p.m. on the 29th ultimo, called at Port Douglas, Cairns, Mourilyan Harbour, Townsville, Bowen, Flat Top, and Keppel Bay and arrived at Brisbane at 8 a.m. on the 5th; left at 7 p.m. on the 6th, and entered the Heads at 2 a.m. on the 8th. Experienced light N. winds and thick fog on the Queensland coast, which delayed the ship for eight hours north of Rockhampton. From Brisbane the Elamang experienced fresh southerly winds to Clarence Heads, and from there to port strong S.W. winds and heavy S.E. swell.

The Colonial Sugar-refining Company's steamer Fiona cleared Port Phillip Heads at 11.45 p.m. on the 6th instant, and arrived in port at 1.45 p.m. on the 8th. Experienced moderate east and S.E. winds to Gabo Island, thence light S.W. winds and fine weather, with a heavy S.E. swell, till arrival.

The schooner Alice Jane, hence to Brisbane, passed Clarence Heads at 7.50 a.m. yesterday, and reported all well on board.

A steamer like the Delcomyn passed Clarence Heads, bound north, at 11.50 a.m. yesterday.

The friends of Captain R. F. Louton, late of the ship Halloween, will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed to the command of another iron ship, named the Ganges. The vessel is now on her way to Calcutta.

At the end of 1886 the Royal National Lifeboat Institution's fleet comprised 293 lifeboats, by the aid of which 641 lives and 35 vessels were saved during the year. Rewards were also given by the committee for the rescue of 160 persons from drowning by means of shore boats, making a total of 731 lives saved in 12 months, and a grand total of 32,671 persons saved through the instrumentality of the society since its establishment. No stronger appeal (says the European Mail) for the support of the National Lifeboat Institution could well be put before the country than the publication of such a record.

The steamer Delcomyn, hence to Gladstone, passed Richmond Heads, at 2.30 p.m. yesterday.

The steamer Quiraing, left Melbourne at 1 p.m. on the 7th instant, and arrived alongside Sydney Wharf, Sydney, at 10 p.m. on the 8th, having experienced easterly and south-easterly winds to Gabo, and westerly and north-westerly winds thence to arrival, with fine weather throughout.

Mention is made of the official trip made on the Clyde the other day by the new Liverpool and Isle of Man steamer, named the Queen Victoria. The steamer in question left the Tail of the Bank, opposite Greenock, for Liverpool, and made the passage in the very short period of 9 hours 23 minutes, actual steaming time. This shows a speed of nearly 22 knots, or 25·62 miles per hour, and she thus proves herself to be the fastest passenger steamer in the world, being only excelled in speed by the latest torpedo boats. Leaving Greenock at noon on Saturday, the Queen Victoria passed the Cloch Lighthouse at 12.8 p.m., and, steaming easy, passed the Cumbrae lighthouse at 12.50 p.m., arriving at Ardrossan at 1.8 p.m. to receive company and land the pilot. She left at 1.45 p.m., passed the Mull of Galloway at 5.0 p.m., Point of Ayr (Isle of Man) at 6.0 p.m., and arrived at Liverpool North Wall at 10.0 p.m., thus making the passage in actual steaming time, as already stated, in 9 hours 23 minutes. The passage would have been made in a much shorter time had the weather been what is usually expected at this season of the year. Immediately after leaving Ardrossan the steamer ran into the teeth of what might be fairly called a gale of wind, which lasted until the Point of Ayr was reached, and during the passage two or three squalls of wind, accompanied by rain, were met with, but the steamer behaved herself splendidly, standing up against the wind in excellent style.

The Orient Company's R. M. S. Potosi, from London, via ports, reached Melbourne yesterday.

The Orient Company's R. M. S. Iberia left Melbourne yesterday, in continuation of her voyage hence to London, via ports.

The P. and O. Company's R. M. S. Parramatta, homeward bound, arrived at Melbourne yesterday.

On the 24th of May there was launched from the Leven Shipyard, Dumbarton (Messrs. William Denny and Brothers), a screw steamer of 1300 tons gross measurement, for the passenger and cargo trade of the Union Steamship Company, Limited, of New Zealand. The vessel was named the Pukaki, as she left the ways, by Miss Julia Darling, daughter of Mr. Darling, the superintendent of the Union Company. The Pukaki will be supplied with quadruple expansion engines of about 700 indicated horse power, by Messrs. Denny and Co., engineers, Dumbarton.

Captain Chabaud reports that he sailed on the 5th instant, at noon, and had strong N.E. winds until 6 a.m. next day, and strong head winds from that time till arriving in Sydney.

THE NEW SOUTH WALES CANARY SOCIETY.

The fourth annual meeting of the above society was held in the society's rooms on Wednesday evening, the 6th instant. There was a large attendance of members present, and Mr. R. Thomas was voted to the chair. The hon. secretary (Mr. John Brown) read the annual report, which was unanimously adopted. In the report the committee say they are very sorry that the present year has not been so successful as previous years, the disease having found its way into the aviaries of some of the members, most of whom lost all their birds. On May 10, 11, and 12 of the present year the society held its fourth annual exhibition in the Temperance Hall, Pitt-street, when some 250 entries were received, and about 800 birds were on view, where last year 350 entries were made, showing a falling-off of about 100 entries, which showed that the present year was not so successful as previous years. The weather during the show was all that could be desired, but the attendance was not as large as the little songsters deserved, the public not taking the interest that should be taken. The committee desire to thank the gentlemen who kindly acted as judges, and for the satisfaction they gave, as not a single protest was entered; and also heartily thanked the different business firms of the city for the cordial support given by them in presenting special prizes, and they are pleased to state they have a credit balance in their bank. The prize-money, amounting to about £65, was paid over to the successful competitors at the late show, the special prizes having been presented at the close of the show. The committee, in bringing their report to a close, heartily thanked Messrs. Averall and Pratt, whose exertions were always for the advancement of the society, and also wished to give honour to one to whom it is due, viz., their hon. secretary, Mr. John Brown, for his many kindnesses and attention in bringing the society to its present prosperous condition.

Treasurer: Mr. J. Overall. Hon. Secretary: Mr. John Brown.

THE RENEWAL OF LIFE.—A gentleman writes:—"I tried your Fruit Salt some time back, and up to this I have taken it for every illness, and must say, truly, to take is the renewal of life. The effect is really marvellous."

THE MAGAZINES FOR JUNE.

In this month's magazines we have two more poets to the fore with Jubilee Odes. Of these Mr. Swinburne's in the Nineteenth Century is a long way the best. Much of it, indeed, is the mere putting down of fine-sounding words in melodious rhythm and much of it is forced and untrue in sentiment but there are several stanzas not unworthy of Mr. Swinburne's reputation. As, for instance, these:—

"As from some Alpine watch-tower's portal
Night, living yet, looks forth for dawn,
So from Time's mistier mountain lawn
The spirit of man, in trust immortal,
Yearns toward a hope withdrawn.

"The morning comes not, yet the night
Wanes, and men's eyes win strength to see Where twilight is, where light shall be
When conquered wrong and conquering right
Acclaim a world set free."

Of the remainder of the Nineteenth Century there is not much to say. No article is strong, and one or two are very dull. Perhaps the most noteworthy is Mr. Henry Irving's criticism on M. Coquelin's theory—"That an actor, in order to display emotion most artistically, must feel none himself." Mr. Irving seems to hit on the exact truth when he says: "It matters little whether the player sheds tears or not, so long as he can make his audience shed them: but if tears can be summoned at his will and subject to his control, it is true art to utilise such a power, and happy is the actor whose sensibility has at once so great a delicacy and discipline." Mrs. Carlill asks, "Are animals mentally happy?" and answers in the affirmative, even allowing them ideal pleasures to a small extent. Mr. Arthur Griffiths writes with some vigour on the failure of the French penal settlement in New Caledonia. There is no satisfactory discipline, the officials are taken from a low class of people, and the convicts, when liberated, fall into a life of drunken and purposeless vagabonds. Mr. Griffiths adds:—

"Hard by New Caledonia lies, waiting annexation, a much more promising territory, more richly endowed by nature for colonisation, whether by bond or free. There are the New Hebrides, why not utilise them? Either send all convicts there and gradually deplete New Caledonia, or let the true convicts acquire these new lands, abandoning the old altogether to the authorities as a colonial bagne. It is more than probable that the suggestion embodied in this alternative commended itself to the French Government, and may yet be found to explain wholly, or in part, its recent policy in the South Pacific. There may be a deeper reason for French intrusion into the New Hebrides. Their continued presence there, in spite of diplomatic protest, and in defiance of treaty obligations, may be really the retort of France to our prolonged presence in Egypt, and she may refuse to withdraw from the one till we promise to evacuate the other, counting much on the pressure Australia may exercise on our policy. But these are remote reasons, others lie nearer the surface. In the uses, direct and indirect, immediate and prospective, of the New Hebrides to French penal colonisation, are to be found potent, perhaps irresistible, temptations to remain there. Annexation may silence unpleasant murmurs, while the possession of a new and more hopeful field for experiment encourages the still unexploded fallacies with regard to the disposal of criminals."

Few and weary will those be who attempt to follow the Bishop of Carlisle in his controversy with Mr. Frederic Harrison as to "Comte's Atheism," and Mr. Thomas Woolner does not quote any verses of "A Beggar Poet"—one James Chambers, who wandered about the fen country in the last century—to justify the disinterring of his memory. Miss Eva Knatchbull-Hugessen writes a bright and entertaining paper on the "Life of the Newnham Girls," and there are some funny facts—though the subject is terribly stale—in Miss Cumming's paper on "Queer Medicines." Mr. Gladstone winds up the number by a review of Lecky's "History of England," which is rather too full of detail and cross-references to be pleasant reading, but the writer's views of the relation between the French revolution and the Irish troubles are worth studying.

The Contemporary Review is not this month quite up to its usual standard. In England the most notable papers will be that of Mr. R. W. Dale on the "Liberal Party and Home Rule." Yet the intent of it is by no means clear. Mr. Dale seems to say that Gladstonians and Radical Unionists are virtually agreed, that they hate each other with an unholy hatred, and that it is quite right and proper for this hatred to continue. Mr. Gladstone tells the story of the "Great Olympian Sedition," and seeks to extract from Homer's narrative all kinds of inferences as to ancient worship and belief. But Mr. Gladstone is an old-fashioned scholar, who clings to the ancient analytical method, and ignores both the philological school of Max Muller and the folk-lore school of Andrew Lang. He even reproduces the long-since exploded theory of a Pelasgic people devoted to nature-cult. For these reasons scholars can hardly take more than a languid interest in his most industrious studies of Homeric mythology. Certainly the most striking paper in the number is Mr. Harry Quilter's on "The Tendencies of French Art." He is of opinion that in landscape, which we have always thought to be our peculiar domain, the French are now-a-days "miles and miles" beyond us:—

"Our English Academy has, to the best of its ability, killed the landscape art of England, by neglecting the men who studied that branch, and by electing to its ranks only the more superficial landscape painters of the Scotch school. But the Scotch school of landscape is not only a school without poetry and depth of meaning—a school of half a dozen effects of mist and sunshine, which it repeats without variation from year to year—it is also, and beyond all else, a school without style—with no connection with any of the great qualities of bygone art, and which has substituted nothing for that defect. Such painters as Harpignies, Dues, Rapin, Nozal, Vernier, Laurens, Flandrin, Penet, Hanoteau, and perhaps above all (if only for his beauty of colour) Le Roux, have no analogue at the present time in English art. They are simply miles and miles beyond us, not only in their technical skill, but in the scale of their impressions. They see the scene as a whole, not in detached bits; they see the scene as it is, not as it prettily might be; they see the scene too with a certain dignity, a certain quality of style very difficult to describe, but which continually saves their work from being merely a sort of natural history painting, as it for the most part restrains them from weakening their pictures with the flabby parochial sentimentality of which our own artists are so fond."

Mr. E. A. Freeman, continuing his criticism of the present-day Oxford, complains bitterly that the multiplication of special examinations has tended to destroy breadth of culture. Mr. Andrew Lang, who writes on "Literary Plagiarism," is amusing, as he always is, but has nothing very particular to say. "Faith Healing and Fear Killing" is a violent attack on M. Pasteur and the vivisectionists by Miss Frances Power Cobbe. One could wish in reading it that the writer would confine herself to the strong part of her case, as to which she may claim to be an authority, and not dogmatise on scientific matters as to which her opinion must necessarily be worthless. Other articles are "Thomas Stevenson," by Mr. R. L. Stevenson; "Professor Green's Political Philosophy," by Mr. D. G. Ritchie; and "Our Position in Cyprus," by Mr. Rider Haggard. Mr. Robert Buchanan also contributes a jubilee ode, which is assuredly a failure; in fact, it wants truth. The poet calls on the Queen to restore Erin to happiness, to abolish war, and to suppress the social evil in our large towns. Now, the imagination utterly refuses to regard the Queen as responsible for these things, and it is pure nonsense to ask her, in the style of a Roman poet addressing Augustus Cæsar, to create a sudden Utopia. The following is Mr. Buchanan's description of her Majesty's Empire:—

"Tawny and proud, a queenly sibyl-maiden,
Comes India, clad in woofs of strange device,
With fruitage from the fabled Eastern Aidenn,
And gifts of precious gems and gold and spice;
On a white elephant she rides, while round her
Like baying hounds her spotted tigers run—
Black-brow'd as night, to her who tamed and crown'd her
She comes, with fiery eyes that front the sun.
Australia follows, in a chariot golden
Drawn by black heifers; on the chariot's side
An ocean eagle sits with white wings folden,
And o'er her head float wild fowl purple-dyed.
Tattoo'd Tasmania, with wild ringlets flowing,
Followed by savage herds and hinds, strides near.
Canada comes mocassin'd, clearly blowing
Her forest horn, and brandishing her spear.
Albion in martial mail, with trident gleaming,
Leads an old lion and a lamb snow-white;
Blonde Caledonia, with glad tartan streaming
Back from her shoulder, leaves her lonely height,
And with her mountain sister, to the strumming
Of harp and pipe, joins the rejoicing throng.
The world is shadow'd with the swarms still coming
To hail their Queen with mirth and festal song!"

In the Fortnightly Review Sir Charles Dilke's paper on the "United Kingdom" will be read with the deepest interest. It may be that he relies a little too much on Lord Wolseley, and Lord Wolseley has lately been contradicting one day what he said the previous day. Nevertheless his estimate of our chance of success in a war with Russia—which he obviously thinks is inevitable—is worthy of careful study. His recommendations as to our future military policy are that we should pay most attention to fortifications, torpedoes, and the scientific branches of our army, and rely on the volunteers and militia to fill up the ranks of the regulars on an alarm of war. He also thinks that the long service system should be restored for India. The rest of the Review may be described as a Jubilee number, treating of the progress which has been made in the Victorian age. It is all admirably done. Professor Dowden takes "Victorian Literature;" Mr. Grant Allen, "The Progress of Science;" Mr. Addington Symonds, "The Progress of Thought;" Dr. Hueffer, "English Music during the Queen's Reign;" Professor Leone Levi, "The Material Growth of the Kingdom;" and Mr. Baden Powell, "Fifty Years of Colonial Development." The last-named article will naturally be read with most interest in Australia, and deservedly so. Mr. Baden Powell manipulates his figures with great skill, and brings out some new and striking results, particularly in the comparison he draws between the English colonies and the old civilisations of Europe.

Passing the lighter magazines under a general review, one feels the want of a hardy and fearless race of editors, each able to impress his own individuality on his magazine, and each capable of inspiring his contributors with a sort of esprit de corps. From such criticism MacMillan's Magazine will not suffer. It has already, under the new management, acquired an aroma and style of its own, both of which continue to charm. Canon Aingen contributes to the present number an able paper, in which he argues, and brings abundant proof, that Coleridge's "Ode to Dejection" was really addressed to Wordsworth. This view, if well founded, will clear up several literary difficulties. All the other articles are good, and anglers should be exhorted to read Mr. Bradley's "By a Wiltshire Stream."

By common consent, "The Literature of the Last Fifty Years," which appears in Blackwood, will be pronounced the best magazine paper of the month. Here and there we cannot agree with the writer—for instance, he has missed Dickens's real characteristics, but on the whole the story of Victorian literature is most brilliantly and effectively told. Sportsmen should be careful to read the article on "Bison-stalking" in India.

Outside its serial—"The Gaverocks," by Mrs. Baring-Gould—the Cornhill is this month quite unusually dull. Perhaps the most readable articles are those on "Yorick and Eliza," and on "The Pigeon as a War Messenger."

In "Red Spider," Temple Bar has quite the best serial now running. There is also a good short story called "Nina," and some admirable literary papers on Crabbe, on "Poets' Pictures," on "Curiosities of Criticism," and by Mr. Hermann Merivale on some of his old friends. Temple Bar, like MacMillan's, is never chargeable with the common fault of seeming to be made up out of a lucky-bag of contributions. It has its own line, and in that line is without a rival.

Those who have become absorbed in Mr. Rider Haggard's "Allan Quartermain"—and they are many—will, of course, turn to that serial first when they open Longman's Magazine. They may also be recommended to read Mr. Richard Jefferies's cynical, but powerful, paper called "The Country Sunday," and all cricketers will endeavour—perhaps vainly—to understand Mr. R. A. Proctor's disquisition on the art of making a ball twist in the air before it has touched the ground.

What with another instalment of Thackeray's exquisite letters, and with an excellently-illustrated article on the likenesses of Napoleon, Scribner's must be pronounced a good number. The fiction, however, is not a success.

Some beautiful drawings of Peterborough Cathedral, an article on "Amateur Boat-racing," and a further instalment of "The Life of Abraham Lincoln," are the pieces de resistance in the Century. Also, the account of a visit to Count Tolstoi, the great Russian novelist, is graphically written and singularly interesting.

Out of the Gentleman's Magazine we may pick Mr. Lawrence's amusing paper on "Water in Dramatic Art," and Mr. Phil Robinson's article on "Flies." The whole number, however, is readable. Belgravia is always the magazine to take up when one simply wants not to be bored, and this month's number, being full of thrilling stories, is an excellent specimen of its kind.

The Magazine of Art has a good reproduction of Detaille's exquisitely quaint and truthful picture, "In Time of Peace"—two old soldiers of the Empire going out fishing; and the articles on "Verona" and "To Dorking by Coach" are both well done.

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine contains an elaborate account of the Russian army, and an interesting paper, to military readers, by Captain Gall, on "Modern Tactics."

We have also to acknowledge, with the general remark that each seems thoroughly up to its usual standard of excellence, the Quiver, Cassell's Magazine, the Sunday at Home, Girls' Own Paper, Boys' own Paper, Leisure Hour, Chambers's Journal, Little Folks, and the Ladies' Gazette of Fashion. The City Quarterly Magazine contains a rather remarkable epitome of the remedial and coercing Irish measures during the last 50 years. The list is a portentous one.

REQUIREMENTS OF THE LOWER CLARENCE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

GRAFTON, Friday.

A public meeting was held at Maclean, on Monday evening to consider a number of important matters affecting the Lower Clarence. Mr. D. See occupied the chair. The first thing dealt with was the proposed removal of the rock drill which has been engaged for some time in blasting rocks which obstruct the channel at and near the entrance to the South Arm. Resolutions were passed requesting the Harbours and Rivers Department to keep the drill working until the rocks opposite the courthouse and public wharf in the river are removed, leaving a depth of 14 feet of water; also that the rocks known as Argyle Rocks (where the steamer of that name had a hole knocked in her), as well as other rocks obstructing the south arm passage, be removed. Another resolution asked that the stone lifted should be used for a retaining wall, to prevent the washing away of the bank fronting the river street. The member for the Clarence was requested to procure a special vote for carrying out the foregoing works. The next resolution which was passed asked that the Harwood punt should be kept running from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. on working days, and from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Sundays. It was resolved that a petition praying for the appointment of a resident magistrate for the Clarence electorate be forwarded to the Minister for Justice. It was further resolved that it was advisable that steps should be taken to incorporate the town of Maclean into a municipality. It was also resolved that steps be taken to secure the erection of a public wharf at Maclean. The meeting closed with the usual vote of thanks to the chairman.

TAMWORTH QUARTER SESSIONS.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

TAMWORTH, Friday.

The Quarter Sessions were opened yesterday before Acting Judge Fitzhardinge. Mr. Herbert Harris, the newly-appointed Crown Prosecutor for the Northern district, and Mr. W. F. Tribe complimented the judge upon his appointment. His Honor, in returning thanks, stated that Judge Murray, who was suffering from severe illness, had applied for three months' leave of absence. The Executive had refused to grant the leave of absence, and the matter again was submitted to the Minister for Justice, who had granted Judge Murray one month's absence. Henry George pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing £17, and was sentenced to 18 months' hard labour. William Garritty, convicted of maliciously wounding a horse, was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour. James Alford Beaney, alias Butterfield, pleaded guilty to a charge of false pretences, and was sentenced to 18 months' hard labour. John M'Donald, charged with stealing a cow the property of James Riley, pleaded not guilty. The jury were locked up all night, and, as they did not agree, they were discharged this morning.

THE ENDEAVOUR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I think your correspondent, Mr. Matheson, is mistaken in this matter, as for the last 10 years or so there has been no police hulk moored in the Thames, off Somerset House. The last vessel that was used in that capacity in the place mentioned was the Royalist, which was stationed there for a good many years, and when she was removed her moorings were occupied by the Rainbow, a gunboat used by the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers, and which is, I believe, stationed there still. The water police on the removal of the Royalist took possession of the lower pier at Waterloo bridge, and now occupy it.

I am, &c., COCKNEY.

BANQUET TO LORD BRASSEY.

The members of the Naval Artillery Volunteers entertained Commander Lord Brassey last night at a banquet in the Town Hall. About 160 sat down to the tables (which were provided by Mr. W. H. Moon, of Chippendale), and the company included representatives of various other branches of the defence force.

The hall was fully decorated with designs of flags and weapons, the decorations having been well carried out by Sub-lieutenant Cheffyns, Instructor Rolfe, and C. P. O. Mortimore.

Commander Lee presided. On his right were Lord Brassey, K.C.B., Captain Hammill, R.N., Dr. Hoffmeister (of the Sunbeam), Lieutenant Newsham, Commander Lindeman (Naval Brigade), Sub-Lieutenant Walsh, Mr. Critchett Walker (Under Secretary), Dr. Evans (Naval Brigade), Paymaster Cavill, Senior-Lieutenant Keating, Lieutenant Pearce (Sydney Scottish), Lieutenant Cohen (Naval Brigade), and Sub-Lieutenant Onslow; and on his left Colonel Roberts, C.M.G., his Worship the Mayor (Alderman A. J. Riley, M.L.A.), Captain Hixson (Naval Brigade), Staff-surgeon Clune, Lieutenant Connor (Naval Brigade), Sub-Lieutenant Williams, Surgeon-Major Williams, P.M.O; Dr. Evans (N.A.V.); Sub-Lieutenant Cheffyns; Mr. Marshall; Lieutenant Josephs (late Lieutenant-Commander of the Hastings Brigade, R.N.A.V.); and Lieutenant Robertson (Sydney Scottish). The N.A.V. band was stationed upstairs, and led off the toasts.

The toast list was a short one, and opened with the usual honours to royalty and its representative here. "The Army and Navy" was then proposed by Lieutenant Newham, and acknowledged by Captain Hammill for the Navy, Colonel Roberts for the Army, and Captain Hixson for the kindred branch of the service.

Commander Lee then proposed, "Our Guest, Lord Brassey." He said that it was a matter of history what their guest had done for the defence of England—(hear, hear)—in the way of initiating the Naval Artillery Volunteer movement at home. (Cheers.) By his extreme energy, liberality, and good judgment he not only started that force, but fostered it and helped it along through the most difficult and rocky channels with the most absolute success. (Applause.) Nothing that he could say would add to the high opinion they all had of Lord Brassey, and he asked them to drink the toast with all possible enthusiasm. (Cheers.) The toast was most warmly received. The band played "A Fine Old English Gentleman," and the company cheered enthusiastically, adding three cheers for Lady Brassey.

Lord Brassey, on rising to reply, was very heartily applauded. He thanked them from his heart for their most kind and cordial welcome to the colony on his arrival, and for their cordial reception that evening. As he had told them the other night, when he had the privilege of seeing them at their drill, he could not take to himself individually all that warm manifestation of feeling which they had displayed. He took it as an expression of that general warmth of sentiment towards the old country—(cheers)—which all Englishmen felt; and as an expression of their cordial feeling as comrades of the corps which had been formed in England, and which was the basis of their own organisation. (Cheers.) Their commanding officer had spoken in far too ample terms of the services—("No, no")—he had had the privilege of rendering in the first organisation of the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers. Well—and he would call them "messmates"—(cheers)—he would like to describe plainly and simply the first steps taken to originate the movement in which they were showing so much enthusiasm. (Hear, hear.) He was not the first person who conceived the idea of extending the volunteer movement from the land to the sea forces. He had been a member of Parliament for a good many years, and had interested himself particularly in the naval discussions in the House of Commons, and as such he was known as a friend in naval matters. There were a handful of gentlemen in the city of London—one or two had been in the navy in their early days, another had been in the army, and others were enthusiasts for the sea (and very popular it was, and they might be thankful it was so)—these men believed it was possible and practicable for volunteers organised as this corps was to do something to co-operate with the navy for the defence of the country. (Hear, hear.) They came to him with a proposal, and asked him to place it before the Admiralty, and obtain its sanction for the enrolment of a corps of Naval Artillery Volunteers. He pointed out to them the various objections and difficulties that stood in their way, and that made it appear so extremely difficult for volunteers not trained as seamen to render any valuable service in the navy. But they would not hear of those difficulties—(hear, hear)—and they showed such invincible enthusiasm that he placed the proposal before Mr. Goschen, at that time First Lord of the Admiralty. (Cheers.) Mr. Goschen was a very able statesman, but also a very cautious one, and he was not prepared to give his sanction to this experiment without some evidence of the possibility of success. He (Lord Brassey) said to him, "You have in the port of London a drill-ship for the Royal Naval Reserves. You have a staff of instructors attached to that ship. It will cost you nothing to allow these gentlemen, who are so earnest in this cause, to come down to the ship in the summer evenings and go through a course of gun drill. You will receive the reports of your officers as to their efficiency, and when this experiment has been tested for a period of three months, you will be in a position to determine better than you can at present whether or not it is proper to sanction the enrolment of a corps of Naval Artillery Volunteers. Well, this suggestion was accepted. His friends who initiated it went down to the drill ship, and they very soon showed such zeal and capability to do their drill on the gun with smartness and efficiency, that Mr. Goschen hesitated no longer, and obtained the sanction of Parliament for the enrolment of this force. (Cheers.) The result had answered their warmest expectations. (Cheers.) They had been sent to sea in the gunboats prepared for the purpose, and the reports of the officers gave the highest praise to the conduct and efficiency of the volunteers. (Cheers.) He ventured to say that there was real value in the movement. The day might come when the Empire would need the service of all her sons, and it would not be wise statesmanship to throw cold water upon the enthusiasm displayed in defence of the country. (Hear, hear.) In the sphere of coast defence, a useful place could be found for a corps such as this, properly trained, as the seamen of the navy were trained, as fighting men on the water. (Cheers.) As to the difficulty of furnishing efficient complements to sea-going ships, he believed that in a certain limited proportion a force recruited from the class which had furnished the assemblage round those tables could render useful service. (Applause.) On this point an experiment was about to be made at home, as the Admiralty had invited the London Brigade of the Naval Artillery Volunteers to man some of the ships which would be paraded before her Majesty at the great jubilee review. (Loud cheers.) One objection raised to this movement was that these men should be enrolled in the naval reserve. His justification of their enrolment as a separate force was that they belonged to a class which did not require payment for their services. (Hear, hear.) Another objection—which came from very high authority—was that men coming from that class could not in fairness be called on to quit their homes when demanded for any length of service. (Cries of "Nonsense.") His answer to that was that they could not call upon the Naval Artillery Volunteers for service upon a light occasion, either here or at home; but that when such an emergency arose as he had in contemplation, questions of income and personal sacrifice would be thrown to the winds. (Loud and long-continued cheering.) And after 12 long and weary and difficult years, the Admiralty were now satisfied as to the value of the force, and had given expression to their satisfaction—(cheers)—in the most acceptable and practical form of a capitation grant. (Hear, hear.) He then referred to the history and progress of the local corps, as he had gathered it from the annual reports, especially congratulating them upon the part they took in the composition of the Soudan Contingent. The question was—Were they efficient, and he was glad to see that the officers of the Wolverene had reported most favourably on their discipline and efficiency. (Applause.) He was glad to know that the Government had expressed its confidence in the value of the movement, and that a liberal grant had been given them. He was bound to say that in the matter of the means of maintaining perfect efficiency, they were under great difficulties—(hear, hear)—which was not desirable if the corps was to increase its numbers. Without presuming to make any suggestion to the Government of this colony, he would say that he had found their shed not so completely fitted as could be desired. (Applause.) In his little town of Hastings the branch of the Naval Artillery Volunteers, though only about half the strength of this corps, had a drill-shed, fitted up at the expense of the Admiralty, just as if it were on board a ship, with a 6½ ton gun and space for cutlass exercise and storage of arms. He wished that the shed belonging to this corps gave them the same facilities. (Hear, hear.) He concluded by referring to the close sympathy and bond of patriotism that united the Naval Artillery Volunteers of this colony with those of the old country, who felt that the movement would extend throughout the colonies, and that they stood shoulder to shoulder in a common cause, and that cause was no less than the defence of that great united Empire to which they all belonged, and of which they were so proud. (Prolonged cheering.)

The next toast, of "Our Visitors," was proposed by Staff-surgeon Clune, and responded to by his Worship the Mayor, Commander Lindeman, Surgeon-Major Williams, Lieutenant Connor, Mr. W. J. Lambie, and Lieutenant Joseph.

Lord Brassey then proposed the health of Commander Lee, who suitably responded, and, in doing so, mentioned Paymaster Cavill as the originator of the movement in Sydney. The company then separated, having spent the evening in a most jovial and sociable manner.

The central provinces of Spain, says a correspondent of the Chronicle, have been visited by so terrible a plague of locusts that whole provinces are ruined. Within the space of a few hours these pests have destroyed every trace of vegetation, grass, wheat, vines, and olives. Over considerable tracts of country not a vestige of green is to be seen, and the reports state that at times the sun has been obscured when these fearful pests have been winging their flight from place to place. In La Mancha the trains have been stopped by them, and gangs of workmen have had to go ahead of passenger trains in trucks to clear the lines of the myriads of locusts that have descended upon them. In many cases the insects have lain so thick on the metals that trains have not been able to travel faster than three or four miles an hour. The Cortes are about to vote a large credit in aid of the sufferers, and to provide for a means of destroying these voracious swarms of insects.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

The thoroughbreds Adventurer, by a son of Angler, and Stella, by Sterling from a Trump Card mare, were offered for sale yesterday at Fennelly's Bazaar, but the bidding did not reach the reserve price in either case, and they were withdrawn.

The weights for the handicaps of the Jerilderie Jockey Club are promised to-day.

Owners and trainers who intend to be represented at the Winter Meeting in connection with the Williamstown (Vic.) Racing Club, to be held on the 23rd instant, should not forget that the entries must be in the hands of the secretary before 4 p.m. on Monday.

Stanley, who was recently purchased by Mr. D. Johnson, has commenced to repay his new owner for the outlay. At the first day's meeting of the Mount Gambier (S. A.) Racing Club, on Wednesday last, the son of Grandmaster and Psyche, who carried the top weight, 9st. 7lb., was saddled a warm favourite for the Mount Gambier Handicap, 1¼ mile, at 2 to 1 on; but the gallant chestnut did not betray the confidence of his supporters, and, grandly ridden by young Gorry, he sailed home an easy winner by two lengths, in 2 minutes 51 seconds.

The pacer Leithamstead, who started as first favourite for the Time Handicap Trot, 2½ miles, at the Bendigo Jockey Club meeting on Wednesday last, did not come up to the expectations of his supporters, and finished fourth.

Gaylad, a son of King Arthur and Mousey, was purchased by Mr. S. Nathan for £85, after securing the Selling Race at the Bendigo Jockey Club's meeting on Wednesday last. Gaylad won the Selling Race at the Chiltern March meeting last year, and the Publicans' Purse at Wangaratta in the same month.

The winter meeting of the Mount Gambier (S.A.) racing club was successfully opened on Wednesday last, when large fields and interesting racing rewarded a fair attendance of spectators. The sport commenced with the Hurdle Race, 2 miles, for which a dozen started, and after an exciting race Mr. M'Cormack's Yarraman, by Breadalbane—Nell Gwynne, came home a winner by two lengths, Banker, 11st. 9lb., and Protector, 9st. 6lb., occupying the other places, the time being 4 minutes 9 seconds. The Trial Stakes, once round, brought out eight runners, and Anselmo, by Conrad from Thirza, beat the field in a canter by two lengths. In the Mount Gambier Handicap, 1¼ mile, 14 carried silk, and notwithstanding that the Hawkesbury Autumn Handicap winner, Stanley, had to carry a load of 9st. 7lb., he was elected first favourite at 2 to 1 on. The race was well contested, and Gorry, who had the mount on the favourite, kept his horse in a good position until fairly in the straight, where he drew away and won easily by a couple of lengths from Goldsmith, 7st., who beat Vagrant, 8st. 4lb., by a head for second place. Time, 2 minutes 51 seconds. The Steeplechase, 2½ miles, fell to Mr. Ferguson's Starfish, 9st. 12lb., who defeated a field of eight by a couple of lengths, with Ali Baba, 9st 10lb., and Victor, 9st. 10lb., to fill the other places. Victor, who was splendidly ridden by T. Kain, made most of the running; but three fences from home his saddle slipped back, and the jockey finished the race riding bareback. Twelve starters tried conclusions in the Volcano Handicap, half a mile, for which Stanley was scratched, and the race was won easily by Mr. Healey's bay horse Fernlea, by Maribyrnong from Propriety, 8st., who led from start to finish, with Town Moor, 9st., Collich Fravoich, 8st. 10lb., his next attendants. Time, 56 seconds.

The Mares' Produce Stakes, 1887, in connection with the Ulmarra Jockey Club, will be run for on Saturday next, the 16th instant, on the Ulmarra racecourse, the race to start at 2 p.m. Nominations have been already received for this event, and the balance of the sweepstakes must be made good on the day previous to the race. The race is for two-year-olds, colts carrying 8st. 7lb., fillies and geldings 8st. 4lb., and the distance is 6 furlongs.

Racing men should note that nominations close for the handicaps of the Richmond River Turf Club this afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

The local paper states that the racing track at Grafton is in a very bad condition owing to the late rains, and also to the fact that it has been left open for training purposes, with no less than 40 horses working on it of late. Sir John is looked upon as a doubtful starter, as one of his hoofs is troubling him a good deal. Horse owners are reminded that the general entry for the Clarence River Jockey Club closes this afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

The winter meeting of the Maryborough (Q.) Jockey Club was opened on the 1st instant under favourable auspices; good weather prevailed, and a large attendance witnessed first-class sport. The sum of £1023 was put through the totalisator during the day. The course was in excellent order, and fast time was the rule, the record (2 minutes 39¾ seconds) for the Jockey Club Handicap, 1½ mile, being the best performance in the northern colony over that distance. Mr. J. M'Gill's bay gelding Pirate, a son of Westminster and Peri, distinguished himself by securing the double—the All-Aged Stakes, 7 furlongs, with 8st. 9lb. up, in 1 minute 32 seconds; and the Grandstand Handicap, 1 mile, with 9st. 2lb. in the saddle, in 1 minute 43¾ seconds. He also made a big bid, with a load of 8st. 12lb., for the Jockey Club Handicap, 1½ mile, which fell to Mr. A. Barrington's bay mare Parody, by The Drummer from Paradigm, 7st. 4lb., who won a brilliant race by a length and a half from the well-performed son of Westminster, who was run out at the home turn by Theorist, and thus his chance of winning was defeated. Theorist filled the third place, and the distance was covered in 2 minutes 39¾ seconds. Four competitors went to the post for the Publicans' Purse, once round, and the winner turned up in Mr. J. J. Cadell's bay mare Lauristina, 7st. 10lb., Stockman, 8st., and Cantiniere, 6st. 10lb., filling the other places, the journey being completed in 2 minutes 3½ seconds. The Flying Handicap, 6 furlongs, brought seven starters to the post, and after a brilliant run in the straight Mr. Walsh's handsome chestnut colt, Lord Headington, with 7st. 4lb. in the saddle, put down his field, and won by a length from Fano, 7st. 9lb., who was only a nose in front of Le Grange, 7st. 9lb., the distance having been put past in 1 minute 17 seconds. The Hack Handicap, once round, was appropriated by Pharos, 8st. 2lb., who defeated a field of eight in 2 minutes 4½ seconds.

Hazard has been struck out of the Liverpool Handicap, in connection with the coming meeting of the Liverpool Jockey Club on the 16th instant.

The Victorian Racing Calendar for the current month is to hand, and among the propositions to submitted to the annual meeting of members on the 1st proximo, it contains the following:—To be inserted at the end of rule 1—"But no horse shall carry extra weight in a flat race in consequence of having won a steeplechase or hurdle race; and no horse shall carry extra weight in a steeplechase or hurdle race in consequence having won a flat race." Also, the notice of motion by Mr. George Davis, seconded by the Hon. W. Pearson, that the 33rd rule of racing be repealed, and that the following rule be substituted therefor:—"That the minimum weight to be carried by any horse in any handicap flat race be 6st. 7lb."

The Narrandera races were continued to-day, with the following results:—

Williams, the rider of Misty, was much hurt, four ribs being broken. He is now in the hospital. W. Williams, the rider of Desmond, was much shaken, and Corran, the rider of Society, had his shoulder put out.

CLARENCE RIVER JOCKEY CLUB.

GRAFTON, Friday.

The C. R. J. C. Mares' and Sires' Produce Stakes (now foals) closed with 22 and 14 nominations respectively. The racehorses Freedom, Ajax, Victory, Levi, Auburn, Wolseley, and Melanion are most in favour for the double. Freedom has done the best time so far as is publicly known, and will be very fit. Victory is also very well, and goes as well as could be desired. The backers of Ajax are also very confident. These three will certainly be among the foremost.

THE V. R. C. WINTER STEEPLECHASE MEETING.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The betting on next Saturday's Grand National Hurdle Race and Steeplechase is very quiet. For the Hurdle Race Friction was backed during the day for a little money at 4 to 1; but at the Victorian Club in the evening the Queensland bred horse receded, and at the close Aristides was the favourite, at 5 to 1 offered. Kildare, for the Steeplechase, was firm at 3 to 1 taken, Royal Oak coming next. Federation has been scratched for the Maiden Hurdle Race. The Grand National Steeplechase horse Kangaroo, and the hurdle racer Repose, arrived from Tasmania today. Both are well. Pocahontas and The Knave have also arrived.

COURSING.—THE WATERLOO CUP.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the Waterloo Cup betting to-day, two or three greyhounds were introduced into the market and backed straight out irrespective of any nomination. The Last Request was supported in this way at 10 to 1 pretty freely. The Sydney dog Clyde who, it is understood, will run for F. M'Quade, was backed at 100 to 6. 20 to 1 was taken freely about Livingstone, another New South Wales candidate, who will run for Lamb. The first line written was Blackham, 1000 to 25 being taken; then Cookson 1000 to 20, Elleray 200 to 7, Fraser, 300 to 6; Harris, 200 to 7. Hall was supported to the extent of several hundreds at 40 to 1. Jones was backed to win 500 at 50 to 1; Kelly, 1000 to 20. 200 to 11 and 100 to 6 were booked about Lamb; M'Quade, 200 to 11; Stanley and Paterson, 100 to 4; Richardson, 100 to 4. Salway backed to win several hundreds at 50 to 1 and 40 to 1, and a couple of hundreds went down to Sanders at 33 to 1 and 25 to 1.

The Granville Juniors meet the Liverpool this afternoon. The following have been chosen to represent the former:—A. Cheetham, Coates, Davis, Driz, Higgs, Howieson, Nobbs, W., A., and H. Neich, Ray, Riley, Suttor, Stein, and A. Lusk.

The following players will represent the Waverley Victorias in their match against the Wentworth, which takes place to-day at Moore Park:—A. Clarke (captain), A. Gullick, N. Burnett, E. M. Woolley, W. Phillips, A. Phillips, W. James, R. Houston, P. J. Holdsworth, R. Smee, J. Ewan, Thompson, J. Spickett, J. M'Grath, C. Birrell. Emergencies: Berry, Atkinson, A. Price, W. Broadhurst.

SOUTHERN RUGBY UNION SPORTS.

All the engagements under Rugby rules have been cancelled, in order to allow the votaries of the game to assist at the Rugby sports, which will take place this afternoon on the Association Ground. The splendid programme of events issued by the union has been most liberally responded to, and, as the handicaps are skilfully adjusted, it requires nothing but fine weather to ensure a capital day's sport. A Menagerie Race is included in the programme, which in itself should attract no ordinary amount of interest, for each competitor is to drive an animal before him over the course, and amongst the entries are dogs, cats, kangaroos, turkeys, emus, and fowls.

ATHLETICS.

A meeting was held on Thursday evening last in the Apollo Hall, Harris-street, Ultimo, for the purpose of forming an athletic club. A goodly number of young men attended, and some 15 members were enrolled. The chair was occupied by Mr. P. Kelly. It was decided to call the club the West Sydney Athletic Club. Messrs. Ilyam and H. T. M'Connell were appointed hon. secretary and treasurer respectively, and Messrs. P. Kelly, C. Swan, S. Moorehouse, J. Carson, M'Clerkin, and the secretary and treasurer, were formed into a committee. The club has been formed for the special purpose of providing athletic amusements for the members, such as boxing, fencing, the use of dumbbells, and all modern athletic exercises. The formal opening will take place on Monday evening next.

A more than usually attractive programme is presented for this evening at Mr. L. Foley's athletic hall. Amongst the boxers Keeghan will meet Nolan for £20 a-side. The champion amateur will box Carroll, of Silverton, and Burgess will compete with Gorman. Mr. Foley will have a bout of singlesticks with Professor Manning, and to wind-up Professor Jackson will box the Picton champion.

The 10-miles race between Livingstone, Stevens, and Fosse is to take place on the Carrington Ground this afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Stevens and Fosse will receive 300 yards start. The champion boy runner, C. Carpenter, will also run three miles in 16 minutes, starting at the same hour.

CYCLING.

It will be noticed, on reference to our advertising columns, that the Suburban Bicycle Club intend holding their race meeting on the 6th August, in conjunction with that to be held by the Balmain Bicycle Club on the following Saturday, and the coalition of these two powerful clubs, comprising nearly all our most prominent riders, viz., Bennett, Wood, Lambton, Jenkins, Phyackerley, Betteridge, &c., should ensure splendid fields. It is also understood that a few prominent riders from Melbourne intend visiting us. The programme for the first day only is at present published, but will have the second day's events added to it in a few days, as soon as arrangements are completed, when the public will have the opportunity of judging from the programmes offered, what the quality of racing is likely to be, especially as great enthusiasm exists among many old members of the Suburban Club, who have expressed their intention of again coming forward and assisting the club in its hour of need. Matters are, we believe, likely to be amicably arranged with the union, but it is gratifying to those connected with the clubs to perceive the many expressions of loyalty which are forthcoming.

The members of the Manly and Sydney Bicycle Clubs hold a re-union this afternoon. They intend to leave Wynyard-square at half-past 2 o'clock, and run to Correy's Tea Gardens, Cabarita, where a tea and social entertainment will take place, the Manly being the guests of the Sydney Club.

BALMAIN ROWING CLUB.

The members of the Balmain Rowing Club assembled in the upper room of the club shed last night, when the annual report and the financial statement for the past year were discussed. Mr. A. Goodyear, captain of the club, occupied the chair, and the attendance of members was fairly numerous. Mr. T. R. Thompson, the newly-appointed hon.-secretary, read the annual report, from which it is gleaned that during the past 12 months the club's roll has been augmented by 32 active and one non-active member, whilst against this addition 25 members have resigned. Three quarterly general meetings and two special general meetings have been held with good results. The club-house has been greatly improved by the addition of a large club-room, the work for its erection being done by the members. The fleet of boats has been augmented by a new string-test racing four, built by Edwards, of Melbourne, besides which some English oars have been purchased. The remainder of the boats are in good condition. The club has been represented at the following regattas:—New South Wales Rowing Association regatta, October 9, 1886, senior eights and senior pairs; Balmain regatta, senior fours (when the club's representatives secured first and second places); Anniversary regatta, and the Glebe Rowing Club regatta. The club's annual regatta was held on March 26, the weather on that occasion was fine and the races were well contested, and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent. The race for "Scratch Fours, Invitation Race," open to all clubs, a new feature in club aquatics, in which several rowing clubs were represented, was undoubtedly the feature of the regatta, and met with hearty response. The winning crew was found from among the members of the B. R. C. The club can also be congratulated upon the fact that two of its members represented the club (Messrs. J. Fraser and W. Martin) in the last intercolonial eight. The new club-room was opened by a concert, at which a large number of ladies and gentlemen were present. Since then several smoke concerts have been given. At a special general meeting the club's rules were completely revised, and several alterations were made. It is anticipated that the newly-revised rules will greatly benefit the members. The thanks of the committee were tendered to several gentlemen for donations to the club, given in various shapes, and to the ladies and gentlemen who have assisted in the club's concerts, and to the St. Ignatius R.C. for the loan of its boats. Upon the motion of Mr. W. Fraser, seconded by Mr. C. Hawkins, the report was unanimously adopted. The treasurer's report and balance-sheet was also submitted. The officers for the ensuing year were then elected, and a vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.

LACROSSE.

The St. Leonards meet the Iroquois on the St. Leonards Reserve this afternoon. The St. Leonards will be represented by Sillys (3), Ball, Clarke, Gray, Stevens, Pendleton, Stephenson, Thompson, Bligh, and Perry. The following will represent the Iroquois:—Barry, Campbell, Corbett, Everingham, Fowler, G. Grice, C. Grice, Hurst, Liggins, Marsh, Millin, and W. Pettit. Emergencies, Peel and Rohrs.

The Balmain will meet the Sydney at Moore Park to-day. The following will represent Balmain:—Banks, Benton, Butcher, Broughton, Cuddy, Hunt, Hindwood, Hart, Martin, Macdonald, Roberts, and Richardson.

A HINT TO THE BULLI RELIEF COMMITTEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It may, perhaps, be in season to illustrate, for the benefit of the public, the danger of paying over large sums of money—the outcome of public charity—to persons unaccustomed to handling money except in small amounts. The public mind is at present agitated as to the expediency of granting to those who have been left widows by the Bulli disaster the gross amounts which will be their portion, instead of vesting the money in trustees, who will have discretionary power of devoting the funds to the best interests of the orphans, as well as the widows. My experience as honorary secretary of the Benevolent Society leads me to the conclusion that the practice indicated is one not likely to be productive of good results generally. A case came before my society last week, which proved a very sad illustration of my contention. A few months ago an unfortunate man was killed by an accident. He left a widow and seven children, the eldest of the latter being only 15 years old. The public generously subscribed £150 for this family, and the whole sum was handed over to the mother for disposal as she pleased. Shortly after this her brother-in-law and herself betook themselves to intemperance, and general dissipation and extravagance. The whole of the money was soon absorbed, with this result: The mother is at present confined in an asylum, suffering from delirium tremens; the girl, 15 years old, was found in a brothel, and has been locked up; and the six younger children have been admitted to the Benevolent Asylum. The brother-in-law, who appears to have been the principal actor in a scene of debauchery sustained by funds obtained from charity, has left the colony, and his own child is also upon the State. With this shocking example, I trust that those who have the custody of the money raised for the unfortunates who have been left destitute by the Bulli accident will place it beyond the power of anyone to abuse the public charity; and especially that the widows—however deserving they may be—will not be uncontrolledly entrusted with large amounts.

I am, &c.,
I. J. JOSEPHSON,
Hon. Sec., Benevolent Society.
Benevolent Asylum, July 7.

English papers announce the death, on June 2, of the Rev. J. P. Knight, the composer of the songs "She Wore a Wreath of Roses," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," and "The Veteran." Mr. Knight died at his residence, Great Yarmouth, at the age of 77.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS AT CHURCH.

On May 22 the House of Commons, in pursuance of resolution, attended the special service at St. Margaret's, Westminster, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of her Majesty's reign. The Times says that the event is historic, inasmuch as this is the first time when the House of Commons, as representing the commons of the country, has assembled on the occasion of the jubilee of the sovereign. The following interesting account of the proceedings, by "A Looker-on," is published in the Pall Mall Gazette:—

Yes, the House of Commons assembled on Sunday; and although "strangers" were rigorously excluded from all other parts of the Palace of Parliament—even the "lobby-list" was suspended—representatives of the press "looked on," as usual, from the gallery above the Speaker's chair. It was, perhaps, in the formal as well as in the informal meaning of the word, an extra-ordinary meeting; and everyone present was possessed by a pleasant and piquant sense of novelty. The House had met, upon the invitation of the Speaker, to proceed to St. Margaret's Church, to there "commemorate" by participation in a "special service, the fiftieth year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Victoria." The cards of invitation, by the way, are regarded by many of their holders as artistic prizes. It must be acknowledged that while wholesomely suggestive of the pledge-cards issued by Bands of Hope the ticket is prettily designed, richly coloured, and altogether admirably executed. The House had begun to fill about half-past 10 o'clock. Mr. Smith was early in the seat he has occupied since he drifted into the position of leader of the House; Mr. Goschen was not far off, either in time or space. The Chief Secretary, as is customary, was late in appearing upon the ground; the Attorney-General for Ireland, instead of resting upon the Leader's box, as he sometimes does when pounding away at the Parnellites, leant with his back against it. On the other side of the table Mr. Henry Fowler is for a time the leading figure. Only a little less daring than the late Dr. Kenealy, the right hon. gentleman deposits his umbrella as well as his hat on the sacred box from which the Opposition leaders usually speak. At twenty minutes to 11 o'clock Mr. Gladstone came in from behind the Speaker's chair, and at once took his seat on the front Opposition bench. He was scarcely recognisable on first emerging from under the gallery, so strangely was he habited. He wore a wondrous Inverness cape, with a huge hood, and thus dressed he bore, when walking bareheaded, a striking resemblance to certain pictures of Cardinal Manning attired in the vestments of his high office. It was also an odd thing to see him seated in his place with his hat on. Up to this time the floor had been filled by groups of members, and the hum of animated albeit amiable conversation was the predominant feature. A minute later the Speaker, in full-bottomed wig, gown, and knee-breeches, with cocked hat in hand, walks slowly up the floor, and takes his seat at the table, at the place he usually occupies while a House is being formed. He is gorgeously arrayed, his gown being elaborately embroidered by a deep fringe of gold lace, and his shoes buckled with gold clasps. At a cry of "Order," half-stifled, as if from fear of impropriety, members betake themselves from the floor to the benches. Then it is we notice a significant patch of bareness in the Parnellite and Radical quarters of the House, and note the absence of Mr. Morley and Mr. Labouchere, Lord Randolph Churchill, and Mr. Chamberlain. Sir Wilfred Lawson is there, so is Professor Hunter, but otherwise Radicalism is reticent. Mr. Smith congratulates and consults Mr. Speaker, and Mr. Smith having communicated with Mr. Fowler, the Speaker rises from his seat just upon a quarter to 11 o'clock, and marches down the floor. Mr. Smith follows, and when he has got two or three paces from the table Mr. Gladstone joins him, and they both close up to the Speaker. After a slight hesitation the parties, imitating the example of the leaders, mix indiscriminately in the departing procession, which, as seen from the press gallery, is simply a mob of richly-glossed hats and streaming patches of broadcloth. The procession is next seen emerging from Westminster Hall, which, like the route from Palace-yard to the church, was lined by the Westminster Volunteers, commanded by Colonel Howard Vincent, M.P. It is preceded by the combined choirs of St. Margaret's Church and Westminster Abbey, together with the Bishop of Ripon, Archdeacon Farrar, the Dean of Westminster, Canon Duckworth, and the rest of the clergy of the church and the Abbey. It is a deeply interesting spectacle, this procession of the Commons of England down the historic hall, between the long rows of our citizen soldiers in grey. Police Superintendents Horsley and Denning lead the way. The well-known doorkeepers, Messrs. Jarrett and Jennings, and certain of the attendants, in cocked hats, knee-breeches, and silk stockings, precede the Sergeant-at-Arms, carrying the mace before the Speaker—the Speaker stately of mien and slow of step, and looking pale, haggard, and worn. Then we notice the clerks at the table, in their wigs and gowns; also the Speaker's Chaplain who subsequently takes part in the service in the church. The four hundred and odd members, four abreast, who succeed, are headed by Mr. Smith, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Courtney, and Lord Hartington. The march is more than funereal in its time, the step being halting, difficult, painful. On the procession descending into the hall there is a blare of trumpets, and as it emerges into Palace-yard the Volunteer band strikes up appropriate music. The weather is cold and raw, but happily Dr. Tanner's omnibuses are not called for. A great crowd has gathered in the locality—so great that the itinerant platform of the street harpy is brought into requisition. As the procession passes along Mr. Gladstone is warmly, and Mr. Smith and Lord Hartington mildly cheered; while there are cries of "Where's Coercion Joe?" and "Where's Bradlaugh?" It takes a long time for the procession to get into the church.

The portion of the church set apart for ladies had been crowded some time before the Commons entered. There are ladies young and ladies old, ladies dowdy and ladies gay. Mrs. Gladstone, Mrs. Peel, Viscountess Hampden, Lady Randolph Churchill, and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts are the most distinguished. The church is light and airy; in front of the altar table-stand some fine specimens of azaleas in full bloom. In due time there are to be seen seated in the principal pew the Speaker, that wonderful relic of another era, Viscount Eversley, aged 93 years, who was Speaker from 1839 to 1857; the Speaker's immediate predecessor in his high office, Viscount Hampden, who was Speaker from 1872 to 1884, looking remarkably hale and hearty; next Mr. Smith; then the greatest Commoner of the century; and after Mr. Gladstone there are, stretching away, Sir Charles Forster (the Chief Controller of Committees), Mr. Courtney (the Chairman of Committees), the Marquis of Hartington, and Mr. Goschen. The mace lies upon rests affixed to a broad crimson-covered cushion, specially erected in front of the Speaker's seat; and the Serjeant-at-Arms and the Deputy Serjeant-at-Arms, much befrilled, sit in the pew immediately behind him, together with the Clerks of Parliament. The National Anthem, with two new verses, is sung with a respectable amount of fervour, but we fail to detect any special emphasis on the well-accustomed confession, so significant when escaping from the House of Commons, both in its individual and corporate capacity—"We have offended against Thy holy law—we have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done; and there is no health in us." The music was beautiful and grand—particularly the Coronation Anthem of Handel and the Hallelujah Chorus—and altogether the service (in which the Archbishops of Canterbury and York participated) was bright, cheerful, and completely enjoyable. The refreshing sight of the bright, healthful faces of the boys in the choir (some of them in their surplices, particularly the least of all, like stunted agricultural labourers in their Sunday smocks) and the hum-drum proclamation of the banns of marriage between Peter Crump and Betsy Price, set the on-lookers dreaming of the future and its store. But the dream speedily succumbs to facts and faith. The sermon, which was an extemporaneous utterance, lasting nearly an hour, was worthy of the congregation—a congregation, as the preacher realised, with great potentialities of power, if it only had the nation at its back. Its thoughts were frank and fearless, its language manly and eloquent, its sentences as rough-cut as the preacher's features; indeed, as a whole it was picturesque and ennobling. The congregation followed it with close unwearied attention; and Sir H. James was sufficiently interested, it seemed, to take notes of it. Mr. Gladstone leaned forward on the desk of the pew, with his hand to his ear. When the Bishop thrilled us all by his long-deferred allusion to the "saintliest soldier of them all," Gordon, people instinctively turned to the right hon. gentleman; in his eye were to be detected the unmistakable signs of sadness and sombreness. It will interest Mr. Healy to learn that Mr. Balfour sat immediately under the preacher, and, what is more, sat upright. He paid for a time great attention to to the sermon, but, after the preacher's reference to the "smart wisdom of to-day," he lapsed into a study of the hymns. At this moment, as we looked round, and as we listened, "We saw dimly in the Present What is small and What is great." The collection was for Westminster Hospital.

COMMERCIAL.

THE WOOL TRADE.

Although American buyers have not been operating so freely, the tenor of the week's cablegrams has been of a favourable character. A perusal of the following notices of the position of matters in the manufacturing centres shortly before the commencement of the series, to hand by the Carthage mail, leads to the conviction that a maintenance of the March-April status quo was perhaps as much as those interested in the trade had a reasonable right to expect:—"Bradford, May 23.—The wool market remains in a state of languor. The indifference to business continues, and prices are weak all round. Spinners buy English wool very sparingly to cover urgent wants, and are exceedingly cautious in the near prospect of the new clip. Botany wool is also slow of sale. Tops of medium quality are, if anything, easier in price; but 60's tops and upwards are not so depressed. Noils, especially the medium qualities of English, are firm in price. Mohair and alpaca are slow of sale. There is no material change in the yarn market. Business for export is detrimentally affected by the financial disturbance in the yarn trade in Berlin, and operations to-day are marked by a great amount of caution. The offers made are small and at limits which find little favour amongst spinners, though they are at present more inclined than they were to meet buyers. In the absence of business, the curtailment of production as a precautionary measure is adopted by many firms. Botany yarns, especially fine and medium qualities, are also slow of sale and weak in price. There is no improvement in the piece market. Business in both plain and fancy fabrics is of a very restricted character, both for home and export. Prices are weak and unremunerative. Rochdale, May 23.—A quiet business was transacted, and prices were firm. Many of the merchants have already completed their arrangements. There has been always a certain proportion who are later than others in giving out their season orders, but now these delayed orders are being given out. The orders are less in size than usual, and manufacturers are content that this should be so, owing to the unprofitableness of the present prices."

A valued correspondent, dating from London, 27th of May, thus writes:—"The series, as at present arranged, will last from the 7th of June to the 21st of July. It is anticipated that merinos will be in good demand, but that crossbreds will rule considerably easier, the latter in sympathy with domestic wools, which have receded about 1½d. per lb. during the past two months. Market reports from the manufacturing districts remain very much of the same tone. There is an entire lack of animation, and only hand-to-mouth buying going on. Botany yarns and wool are in a stronger position, however, than they were a month ago."

In its issue of the 27th of May the Bradford Observer, a leading authority, had the following remarks in reference to its local trade:—"Bradford, Thursday, May 26, 1887.—Wool: The market is quite as dull as ever. No improvement has arisen in the demand, and buyers who must operate confine themselves to small quantities, and expect further concessions. Many staplers are refusing to yield upon late rates; their stocks are so limited and the clip is so near that they will not part with what they have. Others are willing, or perhaps obliged, to sell, and they find it difficult to be firm. Even in 60's Botany tops, cheap as they are, a good buyer can occasionally make some impression. Mohair is quite neglected, but remains singularly firm on the other side. In alpaca a speculative transaction is reported, but the price has not transpired. Yarns: Merchants continue to bring much pressure to bear on spinners to accept even easier rates. The prices which have been in some cases accepted are indeed very low, and of this kind of business perhaps rather more has been done. In twofolds especially some tempting offers have been accepted by users abroad, and there has been, perhaps, a little speculation for a fall. But with this exception business has not improved. The single weft trade is extremely depressed, but tube descriptions still get a little attention. Mohair yarns and rovings are difficult of sale. Spinners of Botany yarns cannot do profitable business at the prices now ruling. Pieces: Manufacturers get few new orders of importance, and buyers for all markets operate only from hand to mouth. In a few special cloths, some makers are moderately busy, but ordinary dress goods are a very slow sale, and the fashion in worsted coatings is unfavourable to this market."

Adverting to the New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company's cablegram of 5th instant it will be observed that the sales, which it was intended should continue till the 21st instant, have been curtailed by six days, and will accordingly come to a close on the 15th instant. This shortening appears to have been rendered possible by swelling the daily catalogues to between 11,000 and 12,800 bales. As we have before had occasion to remark in these columns, it is a matter of grave doubt whether the interests of growers and shippers are not materially prejudiced by forcing upon the attention of buyers so large a quantity of wool on any given day. It would seem, to outsiders at any rate, to be an impossibility for them properly to examine and carefully to value so many lots as have to come under their view, and yet put in an appearance at the sales' room at 4 in the afternoon as they are expected to do. If this opinion is correct, the better course for the selling brokers to have adopted would have been, instead of lessening the period for the currency of the sales, rather to have let them run their course, as originally fixed, and thus admit of the size of the catalogues being reduced to more moderate proportions than has been the rule during the series. This is a matter which it might be well for shippers to bring under the notice of their home correspondents, with a view to checking the constant tendency to an increase in the bulk of catalogues, which it is considered cannot but militate against the seller's interest. Otherwise it is not improbable that by-and-by catalogues of 14,000 to 15,000 bales may come to be attempted.

In our own markets there is nothing special to report, this being the off week; besides which the holding of the annual sheep-fair has occupied and absorbed the general attention. It is gratifying to learn, as an index of the increasing confidence in the future felt by the pastoral community, that not only have more stud sheep been brought to the hammer and sold than was the case last year, but that on the whole higher prices have been realised. Full details of the sales have appeared, so we here content ourselves with remarking that for King Density, a fine-looking merino ram from the stud of Mr. W. Gatenby, Tasmania, the grand figure of 425 guineas was paid by Mr. E. K. Crace, of Gininderra, near Yass.

Wool.—The arrivals for the week by rail and sea amount to 516 bales.

Exports.—These include two vessels as under:—

		Bales.
July 4	.. Iberia	266
July 6	.. Parramatta	604

as against 827 bales for the same period last year.

Sheepskins.—The market for butchers' green skins is active, and prices are firm. We quote full-woolled, 36d. to 42d.; three-quarter-woolled, 24d. to 30d.; half-woolled, 18d. to 21d.; quarter-woolled, 12d. to 15d.; lambs, 16d. to 26d. (according to quality) per skin. Station dry skins are selling as follows:—Full-woolled, 5d. to 5½d.; three-quarter-woolled, 4½d. to 4¾d.; half-woolled, 3¾d. to 4d.; and quarter-woolled, 3d. per lb. Whole pelts and faulty skins sell from 1½d. to 2½d. per lb. For dry skins there is also good competition, with a steady demand.

Freight for wool to London by sailing vessel is nominal, ⅜d. and ⅝d. for greasy and washed respectively, and by steamer 5-16d. and 7-16d. per lb., and 5 per cent. primage. Tonnage is plentiful, and will doubtless remain so during the coming season.

PRODUCE MARKET.—Friday.

This morning a moderate quantity of forage and a fairly good supply of wood were submitted at Darling Harbour terminus. The markets were well attended by the trade. Sales of forage were not characterised by much activity, owing mainly to the absence of good qualities. Straw was weak, but hay and chaff were unchanged. Business in wood was quiet. At the wharfs average supplies were received from the Northern Rivers, Southern ports, and neighbouring colonies. Business was exclusively confined to quantities for the day's requirements. Onions and bran are still weak, but no material change was noted in values. At the Darling Harbour sales the following prices were realised:—

Wood.—Fairly good market. Business was quiet at per ton—Billet, 8s to 12s; bundle, 9s to 14s 6d; foot, 9s 6d to 15s 3d; bakers', 9s to 12s 6d.

Hay.—Short supply. Best lines commanded all the attention whilst off qualities were in very restricted demand. Oaten, in bundles, 4s 5d to 6s 2d; discoloured, from 2s 3d; bales, 4s 3d to 5s 6d; sheaves, 3s 10d; wheaten, in bundles, 5s; oaten and wheaten, in bundles, 3s 11d to 4s 9d.

Straw.—Larger consignments than at the two previous sales. Clean and bright, in bundles, were weak at 2s 5s to 2s 8d per cwt.; other lots from 2s 2d.

Chaff.—Moderate supplies. Steady competition existed for good parcels, but for other sorts was languid. Oaten, in bags, 4s to 5s 6d per cwt.; indifferent from 2s 11d; straw, in bags, 3s 2d.

On the wharfs the following were the wholesale quotations:—

Maize.—Additional stocks from the Manning and Hastings rivers this morning. Unaltered at 3s 2d to 3s 3d per bushel for good river lines; inferior, from 2s 6d.

Oats.—In this line, bright stout feed parcels are in short supply and quoted at 2s 1d to 2s 2d per bushel; other descriptions in heavy quantities, and are extremely slow of sale from 1s 8d; seed, to 2s 3d.

Barley.—Cape seed slack at 3s to 3s 3d per bushel.

Bran.—Remains weak at 9½d to 9¾d per bushel.

Pollard.—Still quoted to 9½d per bushel.

Hay.—Rather light arrivals from the Hunter River this morning. Prime well-saved lucerne maintains steady attention at £3 to £3 10s per ton; other descriptions are unimproved from 20s.

Chaff.—Additional shipments from Adelaide and Victoria last night. Unaltered at £4 to £5 10s per ton for Victorian; Adelaide, £5 to £5 15s; exceptional lines, to £5 15s.

Onions.—Stocks augmented last night from Victoria. Market very weak at £3 to £3 5s per ton.

Potatoes.—Further arrivals from Tasmania last night. Circular Head in most request at £3 5s per ton, some holders asking £3 10s; Launceston, £3; New Zealand, £2 to £2 10s.

Butter.—Unaltered. Illawarra in keg, 10d to 1s per lb.; brands and roll, 1s 1d; factory-made to 1s 2d. Intercolonial packed to 10d.

Cheese.—Business in ordinary colonial descriptions is unimproved at 3d to 5d per lb.; loaf cheese, 5d to 6d; New Zealand, to 6d.

STATION, PRODUCE, AND STOCK SALES.

Tallow.—Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co., Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, Mort and Co., Limited, F. L. Barker, and John Bridge report holding sales yesterday. 403 packages were offered, and 219 sold publicly. The market was weaker. The unfavourable advices from the Home market caused shippers to operate with caution. Trade lines were in fair request, but also at a reduction in values. Quotations: Best beef, £18 10s to £19 per ton; fair, £17 10s to £18 5s; mixed and station from £16. Best mutton, to £20.

Hides.—6397 were offered, and 4412 sold at yesterday's sales. The demand was principally confined to good-conditioned lots of all weights, but sloppy lines were difficult of sale at easier prices. Quotations—Extra heavies, 3½d to 4d per lb.; prime New Zealand hides, to 4½d; heavies, 3¾d to 3⅞d; medium, 3½d to 3¾d; light, 3½d to 4½d; dry station, 3½d to 4½d.

Marsupial Skins.—Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, limited, report, at their auction sale of the above yesterday, that the supply forward was below the requirements, and that competition was very keen for properly-cured lines of kangaroo skins, and late firm rates were maintained. They quote 65s to 90s for best large; large, 40s to 56s; fair, 30s to 42s; medium, 20s to 27s; small, 12s to 16s; very small, 4s to 6s. Opossum skins are scarcely so strong, especially medium lots. Best well-furred descriptions are readily saleable at 6s to 8s; medium, 4s to 5s; inferior and damaged, 1s 6d to 2s.

Hair.—A fair inquiry is noted at 13d to 16d per lb.; horse, cow, washed, 10½d to 12d; dirty and stumps, 4d to 7d.

Horns and Bones.—The former retains a steady attention to 33s per 100 for large and well cared for lots; medium, 16s to 25s; small, 10s to 14s; tips, from 4s. The latter are dull of sale at £3 to £6 10s per ton for shanks; common, £3; hoof, £2.

Leather.—At Tuesday's sales all classes were in fair request at a range of values lately ruling, namely—Sole, heavy, 11d to 12d; medium, 8d to 8½d; kip, best, 16½d to 18d; medium, 14d to 15½d; cow tweed, 14d to 21d; yearling tweed, 18d to 20d; calf tweed, 18d to 22d; waxed calf, 18d to 24d; harness, 12½d to 14d; bag, 9s to 11s; bridle, 9s to 11s 9d.

Horses.—The market has been fairly supplied during the week, but only with a very limited number of good useful stock. Quotations: Best saddle and harness horses, £18 to £25; ordinary, £10 to £15; active van and draught stock, £12 to £20; heavy draught to £33.

Notwithstanding the present depression of the fat stock market they averaged £6 1s. This is additional proof that Wodonga is the best store cattle depot in Australia.

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL.

REDFERN.

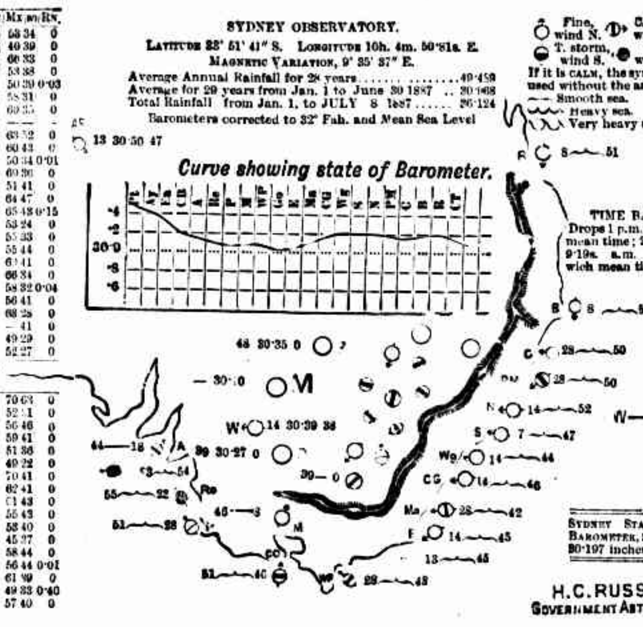

The fortnightly meeting of the Redfern Municipal Council was held at the local Town-hall, on Thursday evening last. Present—His Worship the Mayor (Alderman Berry), and Aldermen O'Connell, Lee, Skinner, Lander, Hume, Smith, Crowe, Williamson, Beveridge, Clarke, and Sharp. Correspondence.—From Lady Carrington, requesting the assistance of the mayor and council in the matter of the appointment of a local committee in connection with the Queen's Fund for the relief of distressed women in New South Wales. It was resolved to call a public meeting of the ladies of Redfern, to be held at the Redfern Town-hall at 3 o'clock on Thursday evening next, 14th instant. From the New South Wales Poudrette and Ammonia Manufacturing Company, explaining that they had no connection with the poudrette works that have lately been a cause of complaint and discussion at Waterloo. From Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, solicitors, stating that they had been consulted by Mr. P. Moloney with reference to the injuries sustained by him, and the damage done to his cab some weeks ago, in consequence, as was alleged, of the state of Wilson's-lane, in the Redfern municipality, and stating that unless reasonable compensation was made by the following Monday they had received instructions to proceed against the Council. Received. From Messrs. Alderson and Co., of the leather manufactory, calling the Council's attention to the necessity of immediately ballasting Maddison-street, as in its present state it was impossible for carts to go down to the factory. Received, and left in the hands of the Mayor to take action. From T. Cottam, suggesting that the "model" borough of Redfern should be "invested" with an Improvement Act, such as that which now prevails in Sydney proper. Letter received, and instructions given to the inspector of nuisances to notify to the landlords of the houses in question that a new closet must be put up to each house, and the whole properly fenced off. The report of the finance committee was adopted, and accounts amounting to £1586 17s. passed for payment. Several notices of motion for borough improvements were disposed of. The acceptance of the tender of Mr. B. Crame was ratified for additions to the Redfern Town Hall, consisting of a new Council Chamber and a public hall (two stories), amount of tender, £1240. The council then adjourned.

NOTES EXPLANATORY OF MAP.

In the list of stations the column headed W.T. gives the state of the weather at 9 a.m., b standing for blue sky; c, detached clouds; d, drizzling rain; f, fog; g, gloomy; h, hazy; m, misty; n, frosty; o, overcast; p, passing showers; r, rain; s, snow; t, thunder; u, threatening. The next column, M'x gives the maximum temperature for previous 24 hours. M'n the corresponding minimum temperature; r'n, the rain for the previous 24 hours. The symbols used in the map are explained on the margin. At each coast station the wind symbol is placed like a vane pointing to the direction from which the wind is coming. A clear circle with it means fine weather; a circle with bar, cloudy weather; and a black spot, raining. Next to this symbol are placed figures denoting the number of miles the wind is moving per hour; next, a symbol showing the state of the sea; and, lastly, figures denoting the shade temperature at 9 a.m. The barometer curve shows the state of barometers round the coast from Perth to Cooktown:—Pt, Perth; Ay, Albany; Ea, Eucla; Cb, Cape Borda; A, Adelaide; Re, Robe; P, Portland; M, Melbourne; W P, Wilson's Promontory; Go, Gabo; E, Eden; Ma, Moruya; CG Jervis Bay; Wg, Wollongong; S, Sydney; N, Newcastle; P M, Port Macquarie; C, Clarence River; B, Brisbane; R, Rockhampton; Ct, Cooktown. Inland the state of barometer is given in figures at Albury, Deniliquin, Wentworth, Menindie, Bourke, and Alice Springs. The barometer curve enables one at a glance to trace the depressions, beginning with Western Australia, and passing along eastwards; northerly winds preceding them, and southerly following.

The rainfall on Sundays or holidays, when this map is not published, is in all cases included in the quantities shown by the next following map.

THE ADELAIDE JUBILEE EXHIBITION.

(BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

The Adelaide Jubilee Exhibition is assuming more of an international character than it had on the opening day. Then there was no part of the exposition which was in a complete state. In all the departments, designers, cabinetmakers, painters and other operatives were busily engaged up to within a few hours of the ceremony, constructing trophies or unpacking exhibits; but to lend as much effect as possible to the inaugural proceedings, the work of the various artisans was temporarily suspended. It was not simply a state of general unpreparedness, but even more than this. In many cases the exhibits which were depended upon to contribute the most in the production of a general good effect were absent, in some instances being en route on the railway line, and in others on the ocean. So great was the extremity of the executive commissioner for one of the courts at least that he gladly employed a consignment of unattractive and unsavoury-smelling leather to help to fill up space on the principal floor within his jurisdiction. A few days later exhibits more pleasing to the eye and less offensive to the nostrils arrived, and these quickly displaced the dressed hides, which were then relegated to the basement. In other places the visitor gazed upon the skeleton of a showcase, on which there was an intimation that it was intended for the exhibit of ——, or upon the base of a stand not sufficiently advanced in construction to be even in the remotest degree suggestive of the nature of the exhibit it was to bear. However, sufficient time has now elapsed for some, at least, of these imperfections to have been remedied, and although the noise of hammers still resounds throughout the buildings, and the atmosphere is pregnant with the odour of paint, sufficient progress has been made for the visitor to judge what the effect of the Exhibition will be when it is in a complete state. But before any attempt is made to focus the features of the Exhibition, it will be necessary to remember that the exhibits are distributed over so many buildings that much of the effect which might otherwise be produced will be altogether lost. The collection of manufactures, works of art, &c., is not sufficiently large to require for its adequate display the employment of more than two or three buildings at the most; but the site of the Exhibition slopes greatly from North-terrace to the Torrens Lake and to use the ground to the best possible advantage it was decided to erect no fewer than nine or ten structures. There is the main building (having a southern aspect) flanked by annexes; and in addition to these there are between them and the river, and on the lowest of a series of terraces, a northern annexe, an agricultural hall, a machinery in motion hall, an armament hall, an irrigation machinery department, and some other buildings. If the Exhibition, as a whole, were in a more compact form the visitor would be better able to judge of the resources and manufactures of each colony than he is at present. If he be anxious to know what are the capabilities and productions of a particular colony he has to wander over several buildings, some of which are so far removed from the others, and so hidden by high ground, as to seemingly have no connection with them.

Taking South Australia, for example, the exhibits of this colony are displayed in the vestibule, in a portion of the main hall, in the basement, in an eastern annexe, and in the armament hall, as well as in the northern annexe, and the agricultural hall—two buildings so far distant from the main structure, the supposition might naturally arise that they were not in the slightest degree connected with it. In the next place, the classification of exhibits is not the best that might have been adopted, exhibits of a homogeneous kind, instead of being shown under at least one roof, if not on one floor, being housed in different structures. Thus the manufactures of Messrs. W. H. Burford and Sons, soap and candle makers, are separated so that their stearine and candle trophy is seen in the vestibule, and their soap trophy in the northern annexe. Another point which strikes the visitor very forcibly is a feeling of disappointment at the utter inadequacy of some of the South Australian exhibits to represent the industries of that colony. Anyone having but the slightest knowledge of the colonies knows that if South Australia has won distinction for anything it is for the excellence of her wheat and other grain, and the greatness of her mineral wealth; and yet if a stranger, unacquainted with these facts, were to inspect the collection of exhibits he would find nothing which would fitly serve to communicate the knowledge to him. The collection of South Australian minerals, which is completely hidden in the eastern annexe by the exhibits of private individuals, would do no credit to any well-appointed mineralogical museum; whilst the agricultural and horticultural "trophies" erected in the South Australian Court display little more originality of design than is to be met with at almost any ordinary agricultural show. It is said that the people of the colony are extremely depressed, as a consequence of the many successions of bad seasons they have experienced: but even making every allowance for this depression (which bids fair to disappear immediately) one fails to see why the promoters of an Exhibition held in South Australia should not have adopted some effective means of representing that colony. The wine-growing and olive oil industries of the colony, too, are of no inconsiderable amount of importance, and yet they, so far as any national or characteristic representation is concerned, are not done full justice to. All these industries are represented by private exhibits, but these, although attractive in themselves, do not sufficiently illustrate the magnitude of the industries to which they belong.

If, however, there is an absence of national trophies which should properly represent the products of South Australia, some of the private exhibitors have not failed to see the importance of having their manufactories or establishments worthily represented. Taking the beautiful trophy shown by Messrs. D. and J. Fowler; the stearine and palmatine octagon, exhibited by Burford and Sons; the showcases of silverware, by Adelaide jewellers; the showcases of hats, by various makers; the finely polished collection of agricultural machinery, shown by Bagshaw and Sons; and some other displays, they would not suffer by comparison with any similar trophies or collections of articles produced in any of the continental cities of the older world.

Coming to the part taken in the Exhibition by this colony, one can hardly avoid the conclusion that the Commission for New South Wales, so far from contributing merely a subordinate part in the Exhibition, has worked so earnestly as to secure the display of exhibits which are amongst the most attractive things shown in the Exhibition. Especially is this the case with the collections of minerals (the arrangement of which is quite artistic), timbers, wines, agricultural products, and wools, as well as with the interesting collection of articles from the Government Printing Office. And even in regard to the appointments of the wine bar, New South Wales has entered the lists with her southern rival and scored a decided victory. This colony has achieved very much at the Exhibition, but no one would think of saying that she has done all she might have done in the way of representation. The visitor from New South Wales is, in passing through the South Australian and Victorian Courts, frequently reminded of industries which have an existence here but are not represented in the New South Wales catalogue.

Taking the Exhibition as it is, one finds that the main structure is both substantially built and ornamental. After the close of the Exhibition it will remain as a permanent building to be used for the holding of agricultural shows, popular demonstrations, &c. The principal features of the façade are a portico, a pediment having a very pretty grouping of national flags, and a large central dome, which rises 105 feet above the ground. The eastern and western wings of the building are surmounted by towers, which rise to a height of 64 feet. Passing through the main entrance, the visitor finds himself in the vestibule, which is devoted to the display of South Australian curiosities, trophies, and produce. One of the objects of the Exhibition is to commemorate the jubilee of the foundation of the colony, and, quite in harmony with this idea, there is alongside of the main entrance a small enclosure called the "Old Colonists' Court." Into this apartment have been brought many interesting mementoes of the early days of the colony, full of reminders of the rude habitations and the rugged experiences of the pioneers of the colony; and then, as if to mark some of the advances which have been made in the fine arts, in manufactures, and in refinement, there have been built close by, by Messrs. Mayfield and Son, two structures—one, a boudoir, furnished in a most luxurious manner; and the other, a dressing-room, fitted up with an amount of skill creditable to any furnishing establishment of the cities of the older world. Then, as if to illustrate the growth of the shipping of the colonies during the last 50 years, there are, either in the vestibule, or in the hall with which it communicates, splendid models of the finest of the Orient, the Peninsular and Oriental, and the Messageries Maritimes mail boats. The walls of the vestibule are ornamented with slabs or panels of various indigenous woods, polished, and surmounted by beautiful representations of the "Forest Flora of Australia," executed at the Adelaide Government Printing Office. Looking into the central hall, around which a large gallery runs, one's eyes rest upon the grand organ. This instrument was not built expressly for the Exhibition, but for a church in North Adelaide. The builders, however, at a cost of between £400 and £500, adapted it, so far as the size of it was capable of adaptation, to the requirements of those to whom the musical portion of the inaugural proceedings of the Exhibition was entrusted. At the close of the Exhibition the organ will be transferred to the church for which it was built. At present the central hall contains but very few exhibits. Prominent amongst these are two magnificent collections of the work of Adelaide jewellers and silversmiths. Near by is a case of nuggets and other gold specimens from Teetulpa, valued at £3000. Then come the exhibits from the Government Printing Office, Sydney, showing most interesting specimens of printing, bookbinding, machine-ruling, electrotyping, photolithography, type-founding, and photography. Next come a great variety of photographs, mounted on easels, screens, and other stands; and alongside of these is the carved billiard table manufactured by Mr. B. Hulbert, of George-street, Sydney. There are in other parts of the Exhibition three or four exceedingly well-made billiard tables, including a splendid one by Alcock and Co., of Melbourne, but none of them possess the charm of that made by Mr. Hulbert. Proceeding along the vestibule in an easterly direction, the visitor passes between trophies of stearine, wine, cordials, &c., until he reaches a passage communicating with the courts of South Australia, New South Wales, and Victoria—the last named being the northernmost one. The exhibits of the three colonies are shown in one large chamber, which is devoid of any partitions or divisions other than lines marked upon the floor. Victoria has materially contributed to the embellishment of the chamber by an exceedingly pretty fern grotto, which conceals nearly the whole of the northern wall. The effect of this grotto is materially heightened by cascades falling over resplendent mirrors, which reflect all the beauties of the ferns, palms, and other symmetrically grown plants employed in the design, and impart a peculiar charm, which causes many a visitor to linger about this wonderful attempt at the imitation of Nature. It is beloved that if a plebiscite were taken as to the most beautiful thing in the Exhibition it would almost unanimously be given in favour of this fern grotto. There are not more than three or four other remarkable exhibits shown in the Victorian Court. One is a huge glass case, containing a most complete collection of fruits, grown in Victoria, modelled in wax. The form, colour, bloom, and other appearances of the natural fruit have been reproduced with wonderful fidelity to nature. The second is an exceedingly well-arranged trophy of asbestos goods, manufactured from asbestos obtained from Gundagai, in New South Wales, and shown by the Australasian Asbestos Manufacturing Company. The third is a magnificently-built billiard-table made of blackwood, having a lovely grain, and manufactured by Messrs. Alcock and Co. There is, perhaps, less of the æsthetical about this table than the one previously mentioned, but no one can look at it without being impressed with the excellence of the workmanship bestowed upon it. A man who is fond of massive furniture might prefer the table in the central hall, but one who was a skilled billiardist might prefer the table in the Victorian Court. The fourth striking Victorian exhibit is a wine trophy, which consists of an ingenious design in which hogsheads, columns, inverted champagne bottles, and cups, form part. The trophy, which is surmounted by a statue of Hebe, has constructive parts which strongly suggest that the designer of it also designed the New South Wales wine trophy. The latter, however, is incomparably superior not only as a design, but for the purposes for which it was constructed. The Victorian exhibit represents the produce of the vineyards of that colony in casks, whilst the New South Wales trophy shows the produce of this colony in the form in which it reaches the hands of the consumer, attractively labelled bottles.

To reach the New South Wales Court from the Victorian portion of the chamber one has to pass through the main opening of an immense triple arch. This arch not only emphasises the boundary line; but as it has many architectural beauties it forms a very fitting entrance to the central court. New South Wales had at first, so far as this portion of the main building was concerned, to rely mainly upon this arch, with the statues of the Queen and the Prince of Wales, her wine trophy, her agricultural trophy, her sugar trophy, and a number of specimens of the vegetation of the coast districts, for making a good impression upon visitors; but, as fern grottoes seem to be more popular than anything else, it has been decided to enhance the appearance of the court by the erection of one of a very ingenious design against the eastern wall. Numerous flags have been grouped upon the triple arch, which is otherwise ornamented with drapery, and many banners have been skilfully used in the decoration of the place. Advancing a few more steps in a southerly direction, the visitor finds himself in the South Australian Court. The only feature of a very striking character here is a Swiss chalet, composed of pretty rustic work, showing in bottles the produce of the principal vineyards of the southernmost colony. There is a fine exhibit of olive oil, and others of raisins, prunes, apples, and other dried fruits.

In the eastern annexe the space is allotted on a similar plan to that observed with regard to the main building, Victoria being to the north, South Australia to the south, and New South Wales intervening. The latter colony has appropriated nearly all her space in the annexe to natural products, the display of which is on a large scale of magnitude, and arranged with much skill. The centre of the floor is occupied by a kiosk ornamented so as to illustrate the richness in silver of the Broken Hill mines at Silverton. To the east of this are valuable collections of wool, timbers, veneers, woods for engraving purposes, tans, drugs, and other raw products, and to the west are prettily designed trophies of gold, gems, antimony, tin, coal, kerosene shale, copper, lead, and other minerals and ores.

In the South Australian portion of the annexe, Messrs. D. and J. Fowler exhibit a magnificent trophy, some of the features of which correspond with Sir Walter Scott's monument without there being anything suggestive of funereal thoughts. The trophy is of ebonised wood, which with glass cases and reflecting mirrors sets off a collection of groceries, chemicals, and confectionery to great advantage. Messrs. Fowler's trophy is considered by many to be the most unique in the whole of the Exhibition. Within a few yards of it is a large structure composed entirely of terra cotta, fine architectural effect being produced by the employment of columns, arches, spandrils, and other ornamental parts.

The principal exhibits in the Victorian annexe are a huge trophy of glassblowers' work, a splendidly made outrigger boat, and some fine collections of tweeds, flannels, and other woollen goods.

The bulk of the exhibits from Great Britain are displayed in the western division of the main building and the western annexe and cover space equal to about three acres. The trophies are in a variety of forms, and in most cases exceedingly attractive. In a few instances materials most unattractive in themselves have been so arranged as to elicit the admiration of every visitor. Salt, varnishes, horseshoes, nails, screws, and bolts are amongst the materials which have been so dealt with.

Belgium, Austria, and other foreign countries help to impart to the Exhibition an international aspect.

A hall has been set apart for "machinery in motion," but as the exhibits would cover nearly twice the amount of space it contains, room has been found for some in the northern annexe. These include a power loom which is weaving tweed, lolly-making machinery, Otto and Stockport gas-engines, and other appliances.

The "machinery in motion," or which will be in motion so soon as the erection of it has been completed, is being set up in a hall in the north-western part of the grounds. Something like one-eighth of the space enclosed is occupied by the electric-lighting machinery. This is supplied by the Australasian Electric Light, Power, and Storage Company, whose head office is in Sydney. The motive power consists of six of Robey and Co.'s portable and other engines, having an aggregate of 300 horse-power. The generating plant consists of eleven Brush arc-light dynamos, capable of supplying sufficient electricity for 172 arc-lights, each of 2000 nominal candle power; three Brush-Victoria incandescence dynamos, capable of supplying 390 lights, each of 16 nominal candle power; one Edison-Hopkinson incandescence dynamo, equal to 120 lights, each of 16 nominal candle power, and an Edison dynamo, equal to 60 lights, each of 16 nominal candle power. In all there are 16 dynamos. The illuminating appliances consist of 140 arc lights, each of 2000 nominal candle power, and 210 incandescence lights, each of 16 nominal candle power, making the total illuminating power equal to 280,000 candles. Of the arc lights 37 are swung in the main building, 21 in the basement, 4 on the tower, 32 in the western annexe, 14 in the eastern, 13 in the northern, and 19 on the promenades and terraces. The incandescence lights are arranged as follows:—80 in the art galleries, 30 in rooms on the basement, 70 under the galleries in the central hall, and 30 in the refreshment rooms. The main building is lighted by the Fyfe-Main arc lamp. Some of the incandescence lights are Edison's and others Swan's. The installation of the electric light has necessitated the use of between six and seven miles of electric cable. There are 11 circuits, nine being arc and two incandescence circuits. The switch board and other appliances connected with the electric lighting apparatus are of a very interesting kind. The other exhibits in the machinery hall include brickmaking, milling, morticing, drilling, polishing, turning, planing, sawing, tree-felling, harvesting, pumping, ventilating, well-boring, irrigation, driving, mining, winding, and aerated water bottling machinery.

Not the least interesting of the many collections forming the Exhibition is that contained in the Armament Hall. Here there is much to instruct the student in military science as well as to amuse the visitor who has but little technical knowledge. Breechloading ordnance, models of large guns of most recent construction, torpedoes, Nordenfeldts, Gatlings, and other machine guns, trophies of swords, sabres, and rapiers, others of muskets, rifles, and carbines, and others again of smaller arms form altogether a most attractive display. This department of the Exhibition is under the superintendence of officers of the South Australian gunboat Protector, aided by a most intelligent and communicative blue jacket from that gunboat. The armament hall is one of the most instructive parts of the Exhibition. If the casual visitor hesitates to apply for information to one of the officers, he has but to question the kindly disposed tar, who will at once unlock a perfect storehouse of knowledge, and illustrate the way of working the machine and other guns.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold in ½-lb. packets, by grocers, labelled thus—James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.—[ADVT.]

TO BE REMEMBERED.

Allcock's Porous Plaster is the only one which contains valuable curative properties; it never fails to do all that is claimed for it; it does not blister or irritate the skin; it can be worn for weeks without pain or inconvenience; it is the household medicine chest; it stands on its own merits as it has done for a quarter of a century; its valuable ingredients are found in none of its imitations, and it can be had of all druggists.—[ADVT.]

WHY AM I SO MISERABLE?

SO WEAK AND LANGUID?

Why such HEARTBURNS and PAINS IN THE STOMACH, and SUCH ACIDITY, and SUCH AN UNPLEASANT TASTE IN THE MOUTH?

Why at times such a gnawing appetite, and then again SUCH DISRELISH FOR FOOD?

Why is the mind so frequently irritable, desponding, melancholy, and dejected?

Why does one of en feel under the APPREHENSION OF SOME IMAGINARY DANGER, and start at any unexpected noise, becoming agitated AS THOUGH SOME GREAT CALAMITY WAS IMPENDING? What is the meaning of these DULL, SICK HEADACHES; these violent PALPITATIONS of the HEART, this Feverish Restlessness, these Night Sweats, this DISTURBED and DREAMY SLEEP which brings NO REFRESHING REST, but only Moanings and Mutterings, and the HORRORS of the NIGHTMARE?

THE ANSWER IS: These are but the SYMPTOMS of INDIGESTION, or DYSPEPSIA—the beginning and the FORERUNNER of almost every other HUMAN DISEASE.

INDIGESTION is a WEAKNESS or WANT of POWER of the digestive fluids of the stomach to CONVERT the FOOD into HEALTHY MATTER for the proper nourishment of the body.

IT IS CAUSED most frequently by the IRREGULARITY of DIET, or IMPROPER FOOD, WANT of HEALTHY EXERCISE and PURE OUTDOOR AIR.

It may be induced by MENTAL DISTRESS—the shock of some great calamity.

It may be, and often is, AGGRAVATED and INTENSIFIED, if not originally brought on, by EXHAUSTION from intense mental application, of physical overwork, domestic troubles, anxiety in business, or financial embarrassments.

IF THE STOMACH could always be KEPT IN ORDER death would no longer be a SUBJECT OF FEARFUL ANXIETY to the YOUNG AND MIDDLE-AGED, but what would be contemplated by all as the visit of an EXPECTED FRIEND at the CLOSE OF A PEACEFUL and HAPPY OLD AGE. However, the FIRST HOSTILE INVADER upon the domain of health and happiness is INDIGESTION.

Is there any relief, any remedy, any cure? That is the question of the SUFFERING and UNHAPPY DYSPEPTIC. What is wanted is a MEDICINE that will thoroughly RENOVATE THE STOMACH, BOWELS, LIVER, and KIDNEYS, and afford speedy and effectual assistance to the digestive organs, and restore to the nervous and muscular system their original energy.

SUCH A MEDICINE is HAPPILY at HAND.

Never in the history of medical discoveries, evidenced by a DOZEN YEARS' THOROUGH TEST, has there been found a REMEDY for INDIGESTION so speedy, so sure, and so surprising in its results as SEIGEL'S CURATIVE SYRUP, but TO-DAY it is a STANDARD REMEDY for that almost UNIVERSAL AFFLICTION in every Civilised Country in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America.

PUBLIC TESTIMONIALS and private letters from military officers, bankers, merchants, ship captains, mechanics, farmers, and their wives and daughters, alike confirm its CURATIVE POWERS.

NEARLY RAISED HIM FROM THE GRAVE.

Swiss Cottage, Walton-on-the-Naze, August 27th, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.

Dear Sir,—If a testimonial is of any use to you respecting the remarkable cure I have derived by taking your "Seigel's Syrup," you are at liberty to make any public use of this you may deem best. For upwards of twelve years I have suffered from extreme Nervous Debility and Gastric Catarrh, which reduced me so that I was totally unable to do any business, and caused great prostration and weakness. About three years ago I had the advice of several members of the medical faculty, and under their treatment derived little or no good. Being in town some 10 months ago, I was advised to try your Curative Syrup, and purchased a bottle. I had not taken many doses before I began to feel a fresh man. I could walk with ease, while before I had hard work to carry one leg before the other. My strength gradually increased and my eyesight got better, which before I frequently lost, owing to the malady arising from a sluggish liver, often in bed for several days with piles, and could hardly move. I am thankful to you and to God for nearly raising me from the grave, for it was nothing but your Seigel's Syrup that has restored me to robust health.

Yours faithfully,

A. RICHOLD.

Revesby, near Boston, December 31, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.

Dear Sir,—Your Seigel's Syrup I find has an increasing sale in this neighbourhood, and shall always do my best to further the sale of an article that everyone that purchases speaks highly in its favour. I also have great satisfaction in saying that I quite believe my wife was permanently cured of indigestion and wind on the stomach, from which she had suffered intensely some time previous to taking it.

Faithfully yours,

A. BURN.

At anagh, Abbeyleix, Queen's County, Ireland, December 24, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.

Dear Sir,—I hope that your Seigel's Syrup and Pills may get the sale they so well deserve. I had a very delicate child, a boy now over nine years, but being averse to eating any kind of vegetable or food from his birth, I began giving him Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and after a few weeks he recovered so as to be able to consume as much food as other boys of his age, and to the great astonishment of the neighbours, he is lively, getting into flesh, and thriving as well as boys of his age do. We give all the credit of his recovery to Seigel's Syrup.

Yours faithfully,

S. MAXWELL.

NEW ISSUE OF SHARES.
AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL INVESTMENT AND BUILDING COMPANY, Limited.

The rapid growth of the Company's Business has induced the Directors to issue 20,000 NEW SHARES at 70s per share, and as only 10,000 of these are reserved for the Sydney market, it is necessary that speedy application be made by those intending to take up shares.
The New Issue will increase the Paid-up Capital from £20,000 to £40,000, and the Reserve from £40,000 to £90,000.
This Reserve will be larger than that of any other Building Company in the colony, and as a consequence of the large Reserve, the cost of money to this Company will be less than to any other Building Company.
The total Receipts during the year ending December 31, 1886, amounted to £427,420 13s 10d, and the sum of £321,713 11s 9d was received on deposit; larger than the amount received by any other Building Company in the Colony, and this in the face of the widespread depression in trade.
The fact that this Company has always paid the highest rate of Dividend, and at the same time carried substantial sums to Reserve every year, is a guarantee that in the future the same good results may be anticipated.
The Directors have every confidence in recommending these Shares as the soundest investment in the market.

STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH.
CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.
The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced SPURIOUS IMITATIONS, some of which in OUTWARD APPEARANCE so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor, therefore, feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.
Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—
1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist Walworth, Surrey, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.
2. Each SINGLE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.
3. The name Steedman is always spelt with the two EE'S.
4. The manufacture is carried on solely at Walworth, Surrey.
Sold in packets by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors at 1s 1½d and 2s 9d each. Sold in Sydney by ELLIOTT BROTHERS.

DERMATOLOGY.
JAMES H. ADGER, Dermatologist.
Office, 131, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, treats successfully all diseases of the skin and scalp, loss of hair, premature blanching, and general cultivation and growth of the hair; and, as a result of this experience, he may point to his flattering success during several years' practice in this city, without reference to the many special cures he has effected, as the best proof of the general efficiency of his system of treatment.
Mr. Adger may be consulted at his office, 131, Elizabeth-street, where letters and testimonials are open to inspection, which must satisfy the most sceptical, signed as they are by persons of the highest positions in society. It will be obvious that no person could have obtained such names as an endorsement of his professional ability without constant proof of merit.

ABRAHAM'S PILLS.

The GREAT REMEDY of the NINETEENTH CENTURY for LIVER and KIDNEYS.
Prepared from Dandelion, and not a trace of mercury or minerals, simply culled from Dame Nature's garden, have now been taken successfully in the Colonies and India for the last 20 years, and are admitted by thousands to be the safest and only genuine pills for all that may be wrong with the Liver and Kidneys, with its inevitable consequences—Biliousness, Indigestion, Headache, Sickness, Shoulder Pains, Heartburn, Dizziness, Constipation, and Flatulence. Of all forms of medicine an aperient requires the greatest care, and the public should be satisfied that what they take is bona fide, not simply a pill of indefinite composition; and, with our changeable climate, Abraham's Pills will at once suggest to patrons that they possess advantages over all the Pills and Potions that are constantly before them. For those suffering from Dyspepsia and the thousand tortures of a stomach out of order, whether the cause be cold, excess of eating or drinking, fatigue of body or mind, too active or sedentary life, Abraham's Pills, aperient and tonic, do not weaken, a result not hitherto obtained, a great importance in tropical climates. Increase in sale of Abraham's Pills has caused dangerous imitations. Be sure and ask for Abraham's Pills. Prepared at the Laboratory, 434, George-street, Sydney. Sold everywhere at 1s, 2s, and 5s per box.

Chateau de Montabor, Aveyron.
"Sir,—Having suffered for some time from an obstinate cough, accompanied with fever, continuous headaches, and sleepless nights, I resolved, after having vainly tried several other medicines, to have recourse to your Balsam of Aniseed. I cannot resist, Sir, the desire of making you acquainted with the really marvellous results which I derived from it. From the first dose I felt great relief, the bad symptoms grew feebler, the irritation of the throat was calming down, and I recovered the sleep which nearly left me. The third dose relieved me completely, and I am now completely restored to health.
"Receive, Sir, with the expression of my gratitude, the assurance of my distinguished sentiments.

I tried all kinds of remedies, but to no purpose. At length a friend kindly supplied me with a quarter of a small bottle of your Balsam and told me to try it, which I accordingly did. The result has been miraculous. The cough has almost ceased, and I have once more found out (thanks to your Balsam) what it is to enjoy sleep and life."

TO ECONOMICAL HOUSEWIVES.—Your grocer can purchase inferior Soaps 8s a hundredweight less than he can buy Allen's No. 1 Crown Soap, and he charges for them the same price per bar. He reaps the benefit, and you pay for it. You lose 8s per box, your clothes last no time, and their colours are destroyed by the adulteration. To avoid all this, see that your bar of soap is stamped "ALLEN'S No. 1 Crown."

A HIT, A VERY PALPABLE HIT.
OUR GREAT STOCK-TAKING DISTRIBUTION of BARGAINS has so far been an immense success, warming the cockles of many a heart, bringing joy into many a family circle. So very unmistakable in character have our SPECIAL BARGAINS been that the name and the fame of them have spread far and wide, so that not only has our town trade been visibly influenced thereby, but extra orders from the country districts have been pouring down upon us in plentiful showers. But the resources of our vast establishment have been equal to the occasion, and we are pleased to say that not only has there been universal satisfaction at the wonderful bargains acquired in every class of goods, but the important process of packing goods for town and country and sending them home has been accomplished with that promptitude of despatch which is one of the leading characteristics of our house.

DURING JULY EVERYTHING IS REDUCED.

DURING JULY EVERYTHING IS REDUCED.

Simple words, are they not! A limit of time and consequential benefit to all who make purchases within the period fixed. A useful hint, and one which, we are delighted to find, has been thoroughly taken as meant by the good people of Sydney. A hint thrown out, an announcement made, a fact consummated for the sole purpose of giving all our friends, both great and small, young and old, rich and poor, something really good to
CHUCKLE AND CROW
over. We can faithfully say that never in the whole course of our experience—not a limited one—have we seen so many happy faces congregated together in our pretty Palace, for indeed the happiness has seemed absolutely epidemic, and an unhappy being quite impossible. As a rule, people do seem to leave their cares behind them when they come to us on shopping intent, and especially in the departments devoted to the ladies has this fact been more notably apparent during the past week or so. Possibly there is the slightest tincture of JUBILEE exhilaration still hanging about. Possibly the gorgeous FIREWORKS, the fiery wrigglers, the aerial contortionists, and the bright illuminations still haunt some minds in a pleasant kind way, or peradventure, there are already on the horizon of pleasant anticipations happy visions and delightful thoughts about the building of THE GREAT STATE HOUSE
that is to mark our Centenary celebrations; or perhaps there are other reasons about which we know nothing. But we, with a vanity that some people may say is not altogether creditable, with an egotism which to some folks may appear altogether strange, have laid the flattering unction to our souls that the cause of the superabundant joy depicted upon the faces of visitors to THE PALACE EMPORIUM, HAYMARKET, during the last week or so has been the direct result of the knowledge of the fact that
DURING JULY EVERYTHING IS REDUCED
DURING JULY EVERYTHING IS REDUCED.
What does it mean, this UNIVERSAL REDUCTION of prices? Let us cogitate; let us reason; let us retire into the innermost recesses of our innermost thoughts and turn the matter over as it deserves.
What does this universal reduction mean to the poor man with a large family and not too large an income?
To him, and the numerous class he represents, it means UNTOLD BENEFITS; it signifies a GOODLY BONUS; it tells no other tale but one of a good strong help on the road to prosperity.
What does this "JULY BUSINESS" mean to the young couple starting on the journey of life and just beginning to realise the hard and fast fact that ninepence is ninepence, and that the more care is taken of the ninepences the sooner they are likely to become shillings!
Why, it is just this to these typical young people who have taken "Excelsior" for their motto and Economy for their guide: more HOME COMFORTS, more money in the bank, and a nearer and truer vision of that 10 acres of land a little way down the line.
What do these JULY REDUCTIONS mean to the general PUBLIC, to young ladies who love pretty Laces and nice Gloves, to matrons of middle-age and maturer years, to whom warm DRESS STUFFS are a necessity, and who have no objection to the introduction of Silk and Velvet or Plush into the composition of their daily dress—we say what do these GREAT REDUCTIONS signify to such as these and to hundreds of others?
They mean most assuredly more Laces and nicer Gloves; they signify beautiful Woollen DRESS STUFFS at cotton prices; they mean costly Silks, gorgeous Velvets, and the richest of all rich Plush at rates within the reach of all. All good people, do not forget that at
